BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1897. NO. 11.

MACKO is reported alive again. He seems to have as many lives as a cat.

TONY CARROLL, one of the Louisville representatives in the legislature, is doing considerable talking through his hat.

SENATOR SHERMAN and Gov. Bradley have each notified the President-elect that they can not accept a position in his cabinet. Will not at least one great man take a position in the cabinet?

THERE were 15,112 business failures in the United States last year, being an increase of sixteen per cent. over 1895. There is plenty of room in this country for a wave of prosperity of very considerable dimensions.

A SPECIAL session of the legislature will be called in a few days if indications are to be relied on. The Republicans need reenforcements in the United States Senate, and Kentucky is depended upon to add one to their side by the fourth of March.

THE Boone County Banner came in, last week, considerable enlarged and as handsome and entertaining as of yore. Bro. Lentz is making a very interesting church publication of the Banner, and deserves liberal support, and the RECORDER sincerely trusts it will be accorded him.

IN this issue appears the announcement of Elmer Beall as a candidate for the office of sheriff. He has been deputy under Sheriff Roberts ever since he has been in office, and has made an industrious and efficient official, and if he is nominated and elected he will make a faithful and careful public servant.

THERE appears to be a growing demand for the reduction of salaries of both State and United States officials. Official salaries alone have not been affected by the hard times that have prevailed in this country, while every article of farm production has decreased in price and laborers' wages have been cut down to correspond with the stringency of the times, but fat salaries have not been disturbed, and the officers who draw them continue to revel in luxury. The masses do not understand why the favored few should not be placed on a plain corresponding with the one they occupy.

It is estimated that the turkey crop this year was worth $23,000 to the farmers of Bourbon county, although the crop was a short one, says the Bourbon News. This year Brent Bros., of Paris, slaughtered in this city about 6,000 turkeys, against 11,000 in '95 and 18,000 in '94, paying over $5,000 this year to Bourbon farmers for the fowls. About 4,600 turkeys were slaughtered at Millersburg, about 4,500 at Clintonville, 600 at Spears' Mills, about 1,500 by Haggard & Smith in this city, making over 16,000 turkeys killed in Bourbon, including the 6,000 killed by Brent Bros. Besides the $23,000 paid for the fowls, the sum of $498 was paid to have the turkeys picked. Brent Bros. also shipped 11,000 turkeys from Carlisle, and Warren Bacon, for Brent Bros. shipped 10,000 from Flemingsburg.

THE Western Argus takes a correct view of the subject to which it refers in the following:

"The courts will be asked to mandamus State Treasurer Long to compel him to pay old warrants issued to parties before his entrance into office. This is what should have been done long ago. The Treasurer has no right to refuse to pay an Auditor's warrant on demand, if the warrant is all right in other particulars. To refuse its payment because a previous Auditor issued it is absurd. The law makes no dividing lines in paying the State's debts nor does it authorize an account created by a Democrat to be outlawed and one created by or to a Republican paid on presentation. It was intended that a State officer should represent the State to all the people alike. The court that tries this mandamus will order the Treasurer to pay the money the warrants demand, unless they are offset by claims against them."

DEATHS.

DIED—On the 29th ult., Mr. Sebern P. Brady, aged 80 years, 7 months and 28 days.

In the death of Mr. Brady this county loses one of its oldest and most esteemed citizens. He was born but a few miles west of Burlington, and at no time during his long and useful life did he reside more than five miles from his birth place. He professed religion in early manhood, and his whole life was an exemplification of that profession. He was a kind husband, an indulgent father and a most excellent neighbor, loved and honored by all who were so fortunate as to enjoy his acquaintance. Few men have there been who were esteemed as was Sebern P. Brady. His every attribute was a shining light for the guidance of men to higher and better life. An extended biography of this noble man will appear in the next issue of this paper.

DIED—On the 2d inst., at 2:30 a. m., of heart failure, Mr. James A. Tolin, of the Utzinger neighborhood.

The deceased was born near Winchester, Clark county, this State, November 15, 1824, and at the time of his death his age was 72 years, 1 month and 17 days. In 1847 Mr. Tolin came to this county on a visit to his uncle, David Quinsenberry, and never returned thereafter to his old home except on visits. In February, 1848 he married Miss Frances Hensley. Mr. Tolin was a quiet unassuming man, and everyone who knew him was his friend. Besides his aged companion five children survive him: S. W. Tolin, of Burlington; Morgan Tolin and Mrs. Effie Hensley, of Petersburg; J. B. Tolin and Mrs. Laura Sebree, of Utzinger.

The funeral took place at Petersburg at 2 oclock, last Sunday, and after a brief service by Rev. Harris the remains were consigned to their last resting place in the family lot in the Petersburg cemetery.

A TERRIBLE DEATH.

Little Kittie Clore Dies After Suffering About Twenty Hours.

Last week we stated that a little three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Clore had been severely burned, but at that time it could not be determined how serious her injuries were, but it soon developed that they were fatal, she having inhaled the flames from her burning garments. The little girl was about five years old instead of three. Just before the terrible accident that cost little Kittie her life, her mother went from the kitchen into the family room, leaving her sitting in a chair near the cooking stove. In a few minutes the mother returned to the kitchen but the child had gone, and a scream out in the yard caused her to go to the door, when the awful sight of her child enveloped in flames from burning clothing, met her eyes. The child was running as fast as she could, not knowing whither. She was soon caught by the mother, who tore from her body the burning garments, and carried her into the house. Dr. Furnish was summoned as soon as possible, and did all in his power to relieve the child's suffering, fearing all the while that she had inhaled the flames which proved to be too true. She lingered until about seven o'clock Wednesday morning when death released her.

In her efforts to remove the child's burning clothing, Mrs. Clore's hand were painfully but not seriously burnt.

The funeral took place Thursday afternoon, a short but appropriate service being conducted by Rev. T. L. Utz at the vault, where the remains of the dear little one were placed to await final interment. The minister's words were those of consolation for the bereaved parents.

Death at any time brings sorrow to a family, but more especially when it comes so unexpectedly and preceded by startling circumstances such as those that resulted in the death of little Kittie Clore. To the loving parents, who are bowed beneath a burden of grief, the sympathy of the entire community goes out; but sympathy is a poor consolor, and time, only, can heal the distressed hearts.

In Loving Memory of Charles Eli Dixon.

Born December 22, 1895, died December 20, 1896.

One short year ago a little cherub came to brighten and gladden our home, now it has flown darkening it. Charles has gone, his little cradle now is empty, his baby garments are laid away, and his sweet cooing ceased forever on earth. But our sorrow is only in parting for we know our darling is only asleep, whose waking is supremely blest. He will wake to tread golden streets and gaze on scenes fairer than earth can reveal.

He has left a life of toil and sorrow for one of joy and peace. The flower is only transplanted from earth to God's fair garden, where its beauty will last forever.

His short life was full of suffering, but when free from pain he was a bright, playful little fellow, always smiling to see "Papa coming," or cooing sweet answers to sisters' and brothers' caresses as he lay clasped in mamma's arms.

True 'twas only a little baby, but he, too, had a mission in life. Its mission is now completed, and God has called the boon.

Ah! little we know how a baby's tiny fingers can draw hearts to a close embrace, and how hearts can ache when a little form is forever stilled. How calm and pure they look in that last sleep—no trace of pain or sin on the marble features, only joy and peace.

We know it is only the parting that gives us pain, for their trials and sufferings are over. How often we see a brilliant career blighted by sin, and hear care encumbered men, who are staggering beneath a load of sin say: "I am further off from heaven than when I was a boy." Blessed are they who fall asleep in youth and innocence.

Sleep in thy beauty,
Thou sweet angel child,
By sorrow unblighted,
By sin undefiled.

Like a dove to the ark,
Thou hast flown to thy rest,
From the wild sea of strife
To the home of the blessed.

ONLY A SCARE.

The Republican Bluff at an International Monetary Conference.

Pursuant to their recent campaign of buncombe, hypocrisy and false pretense, the republicans are getting ready to give their international monetary agreement bluff a send-off at an early day. Plunger Wolcott, who represents the state of Colorado in the United States senate, has been chosen as master of ceremonies. He has his set of resolutions oiled and greased and will present them to the senate as soon as the holiday recess is over.

It is said the resolutions represent the hard work of a committee of five senators friendly to silver, but not bolters, who were appointed some time ago for this special purpose by the republican senatorial caucus. While Wolcott has his international agreement resolutions on the silver question ready, as he says, he is not prepared to go into particulars or to outline how it is proposed to bring it about. All that the senator in charge of this international agreement humbuggery is willing to divulge is that the president of the United States is to be requested by congress to invite certain European powers to call a conference to see if they cannot arrive at some plan by which silver can be minted and circulated by the principal commercial nations as freely and unrestrictedly as gold is, and fixing the ratio between the two metals.

The senator from Colorado knows, as do all his colleagues in both houses of congress, that this international agreement talk is the same old buncombe with which the republican leaders and their employing trusts and corporations have been beguiling the voters for the past 20 years. It is nearly that long ago since the first of these international monetary conferences was held. Four others have been held since, and we are further away from a restoration of silver to its old-time stability and equality as money as we were then.

If a monetary conference is called by President McKinley there is no reasonable hope that it will effect any more substantial benefit for bimetallism than its predecessors did. All such a meeting can do that may prove beneficial to the country will be the additional proof it will give the American people that the democratic party was right when it made its magnificent fight for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the prevailing ratio, independent of the action of any other nation. This beneficial effect will be still further expanded when hundreds of thousands of republicans in the middle western and western states who were cajoled into staying with their party last fall with the old siren song of an international monetary agreement will have their eyes opened by the failure by Senator Wolcott's international conference to achieve the emancipation of silver, and will as a consequence vote with the democrats in favor of bimetallism at the next election.—Kansas City Times.

AN OBJECT LESSON.

The "Advance Agent of Prosperity" Fails to Work.

Apropos of one thing and another, as they come under its observation, the Brooklyn Citizen remarks editorially:

"Information given yesterday of the reduction of wages in shoe shops of Lynn, Mass., and vicinity, and the closing up of some temporarily, illustrates the value, or perhaps the want of value of the pre-election praise of McKinley as 'the advance agent of prosperity,' and the denunciation of Bryan as 'the advance agent of commercial and industrial ruin.'"

This constitutes an object lesson in the value of campaign promises, several of which the republican party will have a high old time redeeming during the next four years. It was a fine thing to be in a position three years ago or more, to charge the democratic party with being to blame for the hard times. It is not so fine a thing, however, to be unable to shift the blame for promises unredeemed. The "advance agent of prosperity" billed his show all right, but the attraction is not filling its dates. There's something wrong, evidently, and the people are naturally beginning to wonder if they really voted for something on November 3, or if it was all a dream.

The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they are the personification of hustle in comparison with the mills that republican victory was to throw open. —Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

Free List Products.

Hurtful monopoly is usually gained in one of two ways: Either by government favor in the form of legislative advantages, or by railroad discrimination in the form of special rates or rebates. Usually both advantages are enjoyed. If the states visited severe penalties upon railroads guilty of discriminations and upon corporations and individuals entering into combinations to regulate production or prices, the trusts and monopolies would be badly crippled. The monopoly combinations could be almost weeded out of the states by the enforcement of the principles of common law. Let congress, in addition to making laws to prevent the operation of trusts within the scope of federal authority, adopt the rule that every article handled by a trust or combination shall be placed on the free list and the corner stone of monopoly will be knocked out. If the republicans are sincere in their profession of a desire to smash the trusts, here is an opening.—St. Louis Republic.

——If the radical republican newspapers of the country have their own way the wishes of the extreme McKinley republicans will be respected by the enactment of a new high protective tariff law. But already there are indications that the gentlemen at Washington who are to frame the next tariff bill are going to have much opposition from those whose business is already sufficiently protected and who do not want to see it disturbed any more, even for an increased protection.—Syracuse Courier.

A PLEDGE REDEEMED.

How Republican Campaign Promises Are Fulfilled.

The most comfortable theory we have yet seen advanced is that which has its origin with the Carnegie Steel company. That company has issued a notice to the effect that it will continue to pay the same scale of wages during 1897 that it has paid during 1896.

The comfortable theory that goes along with this notice is the announcement that the refusal of the company to raise wages is, in itself, a virtual increase of the wages of 6,000 men on account of the reduction in the price of products. This reminds us of the agricultural genius who tied green spectacles on his mule and in that way induced him to eat shavings. The idea was original and unconventional, and we have heard nothing to equal it until the publication of the Carnegie announcement that a refusal to increase wages is, in fact, when regarded rightly, a virtual increase.

It is to be hoped that the men will take the theory as kindly as the spectacled mule is said to have done, for it would be sad indeed if there should be any doubt or dubiousness in regard to the theory which the Carnegie company presented to its workmen as a Christmas gift. Discontent at this time would be a poor return to make for the great victory that has been won for "sound money" and protection—a poor return for the great wave of prosperity that is said to be preparing to flood the country, having already begun its work, if the New York newspapers are to be believed, the day after Mr. McKinley's election.

Consequently, we would advise the Carnegie men not to examine too closely the theory that has been thrust upon their attention, but to take it seriously, and go about their business feeling that they are richer and better off than they were before they discovered that a decision not to reduce wages is, in effect, an increase.

It may now be claimed, and with excellent reason, that a reduction of wages is no reduction at all, but merely a substantial evidence that although a reduction has been made, the wages remain precisely the same. We trust it will be long before this logical deduction from the Carnegie theory is put into actual operation.—Atlanta Constitution.

THE POOR TO SUFFER.

McKinley Taxation Exempts the Capitalist.

In none of the republican schemes for increasing the revenues is there a suggestion of restoring any of the repealed taxes on wealth. New and higher taxes on clothing, food and shelter, but no taxes on luxuries, on accumulated wealth or active capital!

This is the McKinleyite programme. It is proposed to restore the barbarous and cruel tax on wool, to increase the taxes on woolens, to raise the rates on crockery and glass, to reimpose duties on lumber, eggs, potatoes, onions, cabbage and hay, but to continue the exemption of wealth in every form.

In 1866 the internal taxes collected on manufactures, aside from whisky, beer and tobacco, aggregated $123,000,000. They were all repealed.

Other taxes collected from wealth in that year were: From incomes, $61,071,932; from banks, railroad companies, etc., $13,279,142; licenses, $18,038,097; gross receipts—from 2½ to 3 per cent.—of publishers, telegraph, express and insurance companies, steamboats, ferries, stage coaches, theaters, operas, circuses and museums, $10,092,707; legacies and successions, $1,170,978; stamps, $15,044,373. All those, one after another, were abolished at the instigation of wealth's lobby.

There were other small taxes, like those of salaries of public officials, on passports, etc., the proceeds of which bring the total of internal taxes repealed immediately after the war up to $240,000,000.

This exemption of wealth left the whole burden of the cost of the government upon consumption—mainly of the common necessities of the people. And this is where the party bossed by Mark Hanna, with McKinley as its figurehead, deliberately proposes to leave the burden.

If it shall do this, the history of 1890 will repeat itself in the elections of 1898.—N. Y. World.

PARAGRAPHIC POINTERS.

——The republicans have not yet explained how increasing taxation is going to reform the currency.—Kansas City Times.

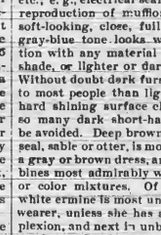
——It is so easy for a party to forget its platform that we are afraid the republicans will disremember that they made a few pledges to the people.—Atlanta Constitution.

——When a republican grows noisy in his talk about trusts, he can be quieted by the suggestion that all articles manufactured by trusts be put on the free list.—Louisville Post.

——The report that Hanna has given orders for the adoption of certain measures by congress and has fixed the date of the extra session indicates that Hanna is laboring under the impression that his syndicate bought the United States.—St. Louis Republic.

——Senator Thurston, of Nebraska, has had such a career as a railroad lobbyist that no one could have been much surprised when he recently suggested the abandonment by his party of all pretense of currency reform in order to win silver votes for protection.—Buffalo Courier.

——Those gentlemen who used to fill the air with disordant howls about the Wilson tariff bill will note that under its operations for the present fiscal year our imports were not only decreased, which is one good thing, but our exports will show an increase of approximately $50,000,000, which is another.—Wheeling Register.



FASHION LETTER.

[Special New York Correspondence.]

The smooth, beautifully dyed faced cloths in which tailors delight are the very best sort of background for the intricate and very effective braiding and arabesque decorations en applique so fashionable this winter. Braiding is likewise applied to satins, velvets and the handsomely dyed silk-faced velveteens. Brown soutache braid with a tiny line of gold braid running close beside it is next in favor to black braid in the execution of this elaborate garniture. Borderings of fur are universal as a decoration on day gowns, evening toilets and wraps. Rich, expensive pelts take the lead among the wealthy, but this season there is an immense variety of what are called "fancy" furs, that for the first time in their history are considered by refined people as good enough for skirt borderings, edgings, etc.; e. g., electrized seal and a very fair reproduction of mufflon, the latter a soft-looking, close, full fur that in its gray-blue tone looks well in connection with any material of the same shade, or lighter or darker as may be. Without doubt dark furs are less trying to most people than light furs, but the hard shining surface characteristic of so many dark short-haired furs is to be avoided. Deep brown fur, like mink, seal, sable or otter, is most enhancing to a gray or brown dress, and, indeed, combines most admirably with most colors or color mixtures. Of all furs dead white ermine is most unbecoming to its wearer, unless she has a rose leaf complexion, and next in unbecomingness to ermine ranks chinchilla. The latter, if real, is a very beautiful fur, but it is greatly imitated and so vulgarized. The silvery shadings of the genuine fur can never be satisfactorily copied.

A simple tailor costume has a skirt of russet brown cloth with sleeves and bolero of brown silk velvet. The back of the jacket is closely fitted, and in front turns back with large revers of ecru cloth trimmed on the edges with a narrow roll of dark mink. The sevengored skirt is finished with three narrow bands of the cloth, showing a mere line of velvet at the edges. The vest is of ecru cloth fastened with small gold and bronze buttons and trimmed with machine-stitched straps. Another similar mode for a more youthful wearer has a middy vest of the ecru cloth, with rows of brown gimp at the lower edge and five rows around the neck under the straight cloth collar. This vest has no opening on the front, and is hooked up the back. A third costume of the colored cloth is trimmed with bands of white cloth strapped over with rows of gilt and braid in groups of three, and finished on the front with small gold buttons.

A very costly and elegant costume of dark Russian green cloth has a bolero jacket of sealskin with a flaring fur collar at the back; a large "grannie" muff and cloth and fur toque are en suite. Black is held in very special favor both here and abroad.

Dress skirts are cut narrower on the front and sides, but what is taken away in weight is amply made up in trimming. Four bands, piping, points and crenelated edges, silk passementerie, braiding, rows of gimp or flat machine stitched straps, galoon or velvet ribbon constitute some of the prevailing decorations. Milliners' folds of velvet or satin are greatly sanctioned by fashion, and silk braiding wrought on velvet is a novel decoration. A variety that is not materially affected by dampness or rain is used for shoulder capes, jackets and redingotes. No material can quite compare with velvet in effect and becomingness, and it is a wonderful foil and set-off to fur or grebe. Winter coats, jackets, capes and coats, if not wholly of fur, are extensively trimmed with it.

The field for choice of these garments was at no time more varied and extensive, and we are at liberty to wear the wraps that best suit our tastes, temperaments, figures, purses and our convenience, severally and collectively.

Saving a reduction in the outlines of the sleeves, there has been hardly any model worn during the last three years that may not be worn to-day. Affirming this, it will be almost needless to enumerate the different styles of wraps of every shape, jackets, long, short, tight-fitting, loose or half-loose fitting, sack back, empire back, French back, seamed or seamless, single or double-breasted, open fronted, with narrow vest, or with ample Louis waistcoat, also all sorts of bolero and other fancy styles; and shoulder capes with collars have aspired to reach the tops of the mother goose huts, capes with moderate collars turn-down style, vandyke pointed, tubbed or "battlemented" edges, capes long, short and medium, extremely full or only moderately so; capes of fur, velvet, cloth, brocade-repped fabrics—and what more could one have, for the range extends from the enveloping redingote to the tiny shoulder collaret, and from sable, seal and ermine to a flimsy French confection of lace chiffon, ribbon loops and two or three fetchy paste buckles.

KATE DUNHAM.

PRIVATE FREIGHT CARS.

A Great Variety on the Railroads of the Country.

Every large shipper in these days must have his own private freight cars, and the wonderful growth of the special car idea can be demonstrated any day by watching a through freight train. It is dollars to cents that there will be anywhere from one to a dozen special cars in the string, and the purposes they serve are as varied as their ownership. The dressed meat refrigerators are now so well known as to excite no interest, unless it be in the vague conjecture as to how many millions of dollars are tied up therein, for the number of these traveling ice boxes is legion. Directly the opposite of the refrigerators are the heater cars, cleverly contrived to keep the contents at a fixed degree of temperature throughout the trip, and therefore invaluable for shipping fruits in cold weather. The heating is done by oil stoves. There are quite a number of special fruit car companies which own cars especially equipped for the carriage of fruit and produce in bulk, and these cars are divided into many classes, such as orange cars, cabbage cars, onion cars, and so on almost indefinitely.

There is a pickle line, a coffee line, numberless beer lines, and, strangest of all, a chicken or poultry line, these latter cars being filled with permanent coops and feeding and watering facilities, intended for the safe handling of fowls of all kinds. There are furniture cars, buggy cars, chair stock cars, ice cars, plate glass cars, crockery cars, and, indeed, cars for almost every known commodity manufactured in sufficient quantities to make it worth while for the producers to build their own conveyances. As to live-stock cars, there are all kinds, from the palace or stable cars down to the plain everyday slatted affairs, and, unlike most of the other special vehicles, the stock cars can be used by any shipper willing to pay the owner a nominal sum for the rent of the car, over and above the usual freight charges imposed by the railroads, the advantage gained being the much better accommodations afforded by these special cars than given in the regular equipment of the railways. In tank cars there are varieties for nearly everything liquid. Petroleum, lard, cotton oil, molasses, acid, tar, cider, water and even whisky are a few of the commodities carried in tanks nowadays.

The owners of these private cars get no direct benefit from their use. The contents must pay just the same freight charges as if carried in railroad companies' cars, but the one great advantage lies in the fact that a supply of cars ready to load can always be depended upon, for the special cars when empty are promptly sent home or to their point of origin, and are not used in any other trade without the owner's permission. The railroads allow owners a trifling sum for mileage which serves to keep the cars in repair, but hardly yields any great revenue to them.

Of course many of these private cars are built because of the special trade in which they are used, and which would not pay a railroad company to tie up money in furnishing the equipment necessary. As builders must conform to the rules of the master car builders, the private cars are as safe to run as those owned by the railroad companies, and, indeed, many are superior to the average cars in general use.—Philadelphia Times.

THE COQUETTE A BENEFACTOR.

Why She Is a True Philanthropist in Society.

From an ethical standpoint, at the risk of appearing paradoxical, I will go so far as to assert that the coquette is your true philanthropist. To begin with, she is generally a "men's woman." That term immediately generates a prejudice in all well-regulated minds, and yet why should it? Charles Dudley Warner says of her: "She is a happy combination of qualities somewhat difficult to describe." Mrs. Rackett says: "A creature for whom education has done much and nature more. She has taste, elegance, spirit and understanding." Warner says: "She is all this and more. To begin with, she is old enough to know her world thoroughly, yet, though she need never have been beautiful, she must have kept her youth. She is in no sense a light woman, neither is she over-intellectual; she would not speak Greek, even if she could. She is a creature of infinite tact, whom every outward semblance of a man interests profoundly. With him she is always at her best, and she contrives to get out of him the best there is. She listens well and grows sympathetic as she listens. Has he a special weakness? She half-tempts him to believe it is a virtue. An adept in the subtlest forms of flattery, she would force the meanest of us to shine, even when he is ill at ease. And yet, above all, she remains sincere. Her interest in him is real and survives the fleeting moment. He is a man—that is to say, the brightest page in nature's book. She respects convention, knowing well when she may venture to be unconventional, yet she is unapproachable and irreproachable. In return he adores her." George Eliot says: "One's self-satisfaction is a kind of untaxed property, which it is very unpleasant to find depreciated." The men's woman with a word or a gesture or a look conveys to her companion the conviction: You interest me, not so much for the sake of pleasing as because it is true. Can such comfort be actuated by any other motives than those of the purest and truest philanthropy?—Jean Wright, in Lippincott's.

A GREAT deal of nonsense has been written—and believed, about blood purifiers. What purifies the blood? . . . .

THE KIDNEYS PURIFY THE BLOOD

AND THEY ALONE.

If diseased, however, they cannot, and the blood continually becomes more impure. Every drop of blood in the body goes through the kidneys, the sewers of the system, every three minutes, night and day, while life endures.

WARNER'S Safe Cure

The heavy, dragged out feeling, the bilious attacks, headaches, nervous unrest, fickle appetite, all caused by poisoned blood, will disappear when the kidneys properly perform their functions.

There is no doubt about this. Thousands have so testified. The theory is right, the cure is right and health follows as a natural sequence. Be self-convinced through personal proof.

Walton.

There was a candy pulling on Wednesday night at Mrs. Macabee's at which were gathered all the young folks of the town including Dr. Jones (the boss candy maker) and Perry Rouse second boss. They had a very pleas nt time indeed.

Thursday night the same gay crowd had an oyster supper at the Phoenix Hotel After the supper the votaries of terpsichore tripped the light fantastic toe in one of the parlors, while those opposed to dancing indulged in the usual games that are supposed to be more innocent and more becoming to the followers of church doctrines.

Friday night was to have been the culmination of the festivities by a grand party at Mr. Martiu's, but his step-son, Marion Stevens age 15, went hunting in the afternoon with his cousins, Denver Petty, 12, and a younger brother, 10, and in going through a fence Marion pushed the gun breech forward and it went off missing him and taking effect in young Denver's right knee making a serious, though not a dangerous wound. Of course the merry-making was off, although every preparation was complete for a good old fashioned Kentucky jollification. I feel sorry for some of our young gentlemen for they missed the chance of becoming acquainted with Mrs. Martin's niece, Miss Petty, of Covington, who is spending the holidays with her aunt, and who is graceful, charming and well worth knowing.

The grippe is getting in a lively amount of work in this vicinity, though no fatalities have yet been announced. The doctors seem to have the whip hand of it up to date, but there is no telling how it will be if severe weather should suddenly set in.

Verona.

The Sunday School social and candy pulling at Mr. and Mrs. Boone Roberts' last Monday night, was a pleasant affair and well attended.

Sayer explained the work, and Miss Edna Gottlich read the Endeavor pledge, while Miss Bessie Kent offered some good resolutions on the duty of the Endeavor. At noon Bro. J. G. Hudson invited all to partake of a sumptuous dinner which had been prepared for the occasion and was in waiting at the public school house. The response to the invitation to dinner was unanimous, and ample justice was done the excellent spread. The singing during the day was conducted by Mr. A. F. Whitaker, while Miss Lillie Rouse presided at the organ. Mr. Noah Barlow, of the Gunpowder neighborhood, predicts auother wet summer and a good crop of corn. He says his observation teaches him that a good crop of wheat and a good crop of corn do not go together, and as that for several years previous to 1896, the wheat crops were good, he thinks good corn crops will follow for a few years.

In the spring of 1896, Thomas Rouse kept two ducks out of a flock and a drake from which to raise, and here is the result. They laid 135 eggs in the spring, from which $20 worth of ducks were sold, after eating and selling some of the eggs of which no accouut was kept. Six youug ducks were kept out of the lot. In the fall the two old ducks laid 98 more eggs. Off of the young ducks feathers enough to make three pillows were taken. Mr. Rouse is ready to make affidavit to the above.

In this issue will be found the Quarterly Statements of the Petersburg, Burlington, Erlanger and Walton Deposit Banks. Notwithstanding the hard times that have prevailed for three years these institutions, owing to their well managed affairs, have continued to prosper, while many other institutions have been compelled to put up their blinds. They are conservative banks, such as people can depend upon as safe custodians of their money.

The next District Teachers' Association will be held at Burlington instead of Bullittsville, as arranged by the committee appointed at the Institute. The reasons for this change are various, but the principal reason is that Bullittsvill has had the meeting twice, and we wish to distribute the meetings as nearly as possible to all points of the county. All teachers who have not attended our former meetings, this school year, are notified to attend, as this will be the last meeting of teachers for this scholastic year. We wish to make it a grand success, and all parties who feel an interest in education are cordially invited to be with us The programme will appear in next week's issue of this paper. L. H. VOSHELL, Co. Sup't.

The Democratic Committee of this Judicial District met at Walton, last Saturday. Each county was represented, and it was decided to hold a primary election on the first Saturday in next June for the purpose of nominating candidates for Circuit Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney. The chairman of the committee for this county has called the committee together to decide whether or not the date heretofore fixed for the primary election here shall be changed to the first Saturday in June so that there will be but one primary election lustead of two. There is no doubt but what the change will be entirely satisfactory to the voters, aud should, by all means, be made. The candidates and many of the voters are not satisfied with the date as it now stands, and the change to the first Saturday in June will meet with the approval of all. Let the chauge be made.

A crowd of boys were out for some fun, last Thursday night, and turned their attention to the buggies and wagons and an occasional door step. Several buggies were taken from the shed at the livery stable and tumbled over into the yards about town, or turned over on the side walks. One buggy was placed in the hall at the court house. It took Charlie Westbay until about noon to collect the several parts of his wagons that were strewn about town. Fortunately none of the vehicles were broken, but how they escaped injury from their apparent rough handling can not be understood, and some of the owners were not in a very good humor when they found their buggies. The frolic was carried to excess. The usual custom of ringing the old year out and new year in, was carried out, and at fifteen minutes of 12 o'clock every bell in town pealed forth the disappearing of the year 1896, and was kept up until some time after the advent of the new year—1897.

SUGAR DUTIES.

Ways and Means Committee Hears Importers' Arguments—Attitude of the United States in Reference to the Cuban Revolt Satisfactory to Spain.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The session of the committee on ways and means Wednesday was given to the question of sugar duties. The opening was given to the sugar importers whose views were voiced by John Farr, of New York.

He said that at a recent meeting of the sugar importers of that city it was unanimously decided that an ad valorem rate of duty was unfair, unreliable and exceedingly difficult in practice; that one cent a pound should be imposed on all sugar below 75 degrees polarizcope, and that additional discriminating duties should be levied on all sugars coming from bounty paying countries. The beet sugar interest was represented by Mr. Henry Axnard, of Grand Island, Neb.; Mr. Herbert Myrich, of Chicago, editor of the American Agriculturist, and Mr. R. M. Allen, of Ames, Neb., president of the Beet Sugar association. The cane sugar interest of Louisiana was represented by Mr. J. D. Hill, of New Orleans. No representative of the sugar refining industry had applied for a hearing, and there was a conspicuous absence of the members of the sugar trust.

The recent reports that the Spanish government was endeavoring to secure the co-operation of the great European powers to prevent by force, if necessary, the intervention of the United States in the Cuban insurrection, have no better authority than many other startling rumors that have been industriously circulated during the past few months.

There is authority for the statement that the Spanish government is, generally speaking, entirely satisfied with the attitude of the United States with reference to the Cuban revolt. If evidence were needed to assure the world that Spain can find no fault with the attitude of the Washington government it will be found in the notification which the Madrid foreign office has made to the Spanish diplomatic representatives in Great Britain and on the continent. Through advices which reached the state department Wednesday it is learned that as soon as that portion of the president's recent message to congress relating to the Cuban situation had been translated, copies were sent to the Spanish ministers at the various European capitals, with the added statements that the Spanish government was entirely satisfied with the president's utterances. In these circumstances the reports which convey the impression that Spain is testing the friendship of the European powers with a view to securing their assistance in preventing an anticipated intervention on the part of this government, are pronounced absurd.

Dauntless May Clear for Cuba.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—For the first time since the present struggle in Cuba began this government has given permission to a customs officials to clear for Cuba a vessel loaded, according to her manifest, with munitions of war and presumably intended for the insurgent army. The vessel in this case is the well known and alleged filibuster Dauntless, but the concession that under these circumstances she is entitled to clearance papers leaves the situation so far as she is concerned quite as involved as before, as the statutes prescribe that before clearance shall be granted for any vessel bound to a foreign port, the owners, shippers and consignees of cargo shall state under oath at what foreign port the cargo is to be landed, and severe penalties are prescribed for violations of this requirement, including the confiscation of the vessel.

"MACEO IS ALIVE,"

Is the Joyful Cry in Havana—The General Dangerously Wounded, But Recuperating.

HAVANA, via Key West, Dec. 31.—"Maceo is alive," is the Cubans' joyful cry. The first rumors accepted with incredulity are now gaining ground. Information is coming into the city daily giving precise details. It is said that when he fell from his horse his followers thought him dead but found that he was still living and spread the news that he was dead in order to carry him to a place of safety. Under a strong escort they carried him to the Signanes hospital, where, under the skillful treatment of doctors, the chief is now slowly recuperating. The acute point has passed. It seems that only one wound is dangerous, that being in the stomach.

TARIFF HEARINGS.

Discussion of Schedule I by Different Cotton Manufacturers.

Under the Present Law Cotton Spinners Can Not Manufacture Fine Yarns—The Makers of Cotton Cloth Not Sufficiently Protected—Hosiery, Etc.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—The second day of the tariff hearings before the committee of ways and means of the house of representatives opened with the discussion of schedule I, cotton manufactures.

The first section of the schedule relates to the duty on cotton thread and carded yarns and on warps or warp yarn.

Mr. Andrew B. Sanford, of Fall River, Mass., said that the provisions placed in the present tariff bill had practically made it an ad valorem measure. It was impossible for the spinners of this country to put out any fine yarns. As far as these yarns went the bill was inoperative, and the bills had been compelled to stop making fine yarns.

S. B. Chace, of Fall River, Mass., spoke for the makers of cotton cloth. They were not sufficiently protected on the find end of the business, he said, and would ask for a few amendments to the present law in this direction. They wanted a new classification for cloths exceeding 300 threads to the square inch, otherwise they were satisfied with the present duties.

They also desired to have goods known as "figured weaves" specially provided for. He complained of ad valorem duties and the under valuation practiced under them.

Robert Pilling, of Philadelphia, a maker of stockings and underwear, said that later he would submit a statement covering what hosemakers desired. The present law was not satisfactory especially on "fashion goods."

On underwear no change would be asked.

R. W. Cooper, of Olneyville, R. I., a manufacturer of finer grades of stockings, asked for a tariff of 40 cents a dozen and 30 per cent. ad valorem on all goods costing $1.50 per dozen under. His company had been doing business for 12 years and had never paid a dividend. It was beginning to get on its feet under the McKinley law, and under the present tariff had just managed to exist.

W. H. Bilyeu, of the Philadelphia Knitting Mills Co., agreed with Mr. Talcott and with him would submit rates. W. R. Craig, of Mississippi, on behalf of producers of "extra staple" cotton of the Mississippi valley asked for protection against Egyptian cotton. This cotton he said came into direct competition with domestic product, and to a large extent had driven the domestic grower out. C. P. Bakers, treasurer of the Lawrence Manufacturing Co., said that the Egyptian cotton was used in preference to the American product, as there was less waste in working it. The two could not always be used for the same purposes. The American article could not entirely take the place of the Egyptian product.

Mr. Wheeler asked if the south would not be selling its birthright for a mess of pottage to ask for this?

Mr. Baker said that he would not like to say.

Mr. Wheeler was asked what this birthright was.

He replied: "Free trade and free institutions."

The Huitfeldt-Bonaparte Wedding.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—The wedding of Count Adam DeMoltke Huitfeldt, of Denmark, and Miss Louise Eugenie Bonaparte, daughter of the widow of the late Col. Jerome Bonaparte, took place Tuesday morning in St. Paul's Catholic church. It was one of the most interesting international marriages which have taken place in Washington for many years. Owing to the recent death of the father of the groom, while Danish ambassador at Paris, the plans for an imposing ceremony had to be abandoned and comparatively few invitations to the marriage and wedding breakfast were issued. His eminence, Cardinal Gibbons, archbishop of Baltimore, an old friend of the Bonaparte family, performed the ceremony, and Father Foley, priest of the parish of St. Paul's, was celebrant of the nuptial mass, which succeeded the marriage ceremony.

Gladstone's 87th Birthday.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—Mr. Gladstone celebrated his 87th birthday at Hawarden Tuesday, surrounded by his family. There was the usual demonstration by the villagers in honor of the occasion, consisting of the ringing of the church bells and the assignment of deputations to proceed to the castle and congratulate the venerable statesman. Throughout the day there was an enormous flow of congratulatory telegrams into the castle from all parts of the United Kingdom, the United States and the continent.

Spain Must Come to an Agreement.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—The Daily News, Wednesday publishes a dispatch from Paris saying it is quite clear that Spain is carrying on negotiations with the United States, although her pride compels her to do so in an underhand manner. The dispatch adds that the proceeds of the popular loan recently is sued by the Spanish government is virtually exhausted, that the buoyancy that followed the death of Maceo is evaporating and that the government is unable to avoid seeking an agreement with the United States.

A Mob After a Wife-Murderer.

WILLIAMSBURG, Ky., Dec. 30.—Word has been received here that Charles Herndon, who murdered his wife at the home of his brother-in-law, on Jellico creek, a few days ago, is surrounded in a house near Flat Lick, Knox county, with several men who swear they will die before they will be taken. The house is guarded by a mob. Herndon says he will never be arrested.

Death of Adm. Milne.

THE POWERS

MADRID, Dec. 31.—A report of an interview with ex-Premier Sagasta, the leader of the Spanish liberals, is published in El Liberal, in which Senor Sagasta is reported as saying that Europe is in sympathy with Spain in her maintenance of Spanish sovereignty in Cuba, but that Europe also desires to see the establishment of reform in Cuba. Senor Sagasta further expresses his belief that Premier Canovas only awaits a report from Gen. Weyler that the Pinar del Rio and Havana provinces are cleared of rebels when he will introduce reforms in Cuba which will virtually be tantamount to autonomy. The ex-premier further says that Capt. Gen. Weyler himself is the chief obstacle to the pacification of the island, he being impotent to quell the rebellion and he believes that the insurgents will reappear in the Pinar del Rio province as soon as the Spanish troops are withdrawn.

Senor Sagasta advocates concurrent military and diplomatic action on the part of Spain and the immediate granting of constitutional and tariff reforms in Cuba.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The Standard, Thursday, publishes a dispatch from its Madrid correspondent, saying that a strong movement in opposition to Gen. Weyler is on foot in political and military circles. Gen. Weyler's failure to make any progress in the direction of the suppression of the revolution in Cuba is regarded in Madrid, the correspondent says, as involving his recall at an early day unless he soon meets with striking success.

The correspondent also says that Gen. Polavieja, the newly appointed governor of the Philippine islands, has initiated vigorous repressive measures for the crushing out of the rebellion in those islands. He has issued orders that only the more prominent of the rebel leaders shall be sent to Manila for trial, and all other rebels who are captured, including the leaders of less note, shall be tried by court martial where they are captured and their sentences summarily executed.

The Standard will also publish a Madrid dispatch saying that the execution at Manila on December 28, of Dr. Rizal, accused of being the promoter of the revolt against Spanish rule in the Philippines, has created a great sensation in the Spanish capital. According to Manila advices Dr. Rizal denied that he was guilty and steadfastly refused to make any revelations regarding the conspiracy in which he was accused of being concerned. The Jesuit priests, who were with him in the conspiracy during the 24 hours preceding his execution, endeavored to elicit from the condemned man some statement regarding the conspiracy, but failed to do so. Rizal begged the authorities that a civil marriage ceremony be performed between himself and his mistress, a Canadian woman, but the officials refused his request. They also rejected the petition of Rizal's family that his body be turned over to them for burial, fearing, they said, that his funeral might incite revolutionary manifestations. Great military precautions were taken to prevent an outbreak when Rizal was executed. An immense crowd was present at the execution and trouble was feared. The squad detailed to carry ont the execution were native soldiers.

The official report of the execution states that Rizal at the last moment embraced religion and expressed penitence.

On the same day that Rizal was shot 11 prominent persons who were suspected of being connected with the rebellion, were tried by court martial. Among them were the dean of the Manila cathedral, two other priests, a banker and a millionaire notary. The public prosecutor demanded that sentence of death be imposed upon the prisoners. The result of the trial has not yet been made known.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The Daily Chronicle Thursday publishes a special dispatch from Washington for which it claims high authority, saying that Senor Dupuy de Lome, the Spanish minister to the United States, has intimated in an unofficial way to Secretary of State Olney that Spain will accept the mediation of the United States for the settlement of the Cuban trouble after Capt. Gen. Weyler shall have cleared the province of Pinar del Rio of rebels, when the Spanish government will be prepared to grant the Cubans virtually every thing they demand except complete autonomy and independence.

FOR BIGAMY.

A Traveling Agent, Alleged to Have Three Wives, Arrested in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—W. N. Voss, a traveling agent of Crawfordsville, Ind., was arrested here Wednesday on the charge of bigamy. Ten years ago it is alleged Voss was married in Cincinnati. After living with his wife four years he left her and, it is claimed, was married to Anna Mitchell in the same city. This latter marriage resulted as did the first and after four years Voss is acused of having deserted her and fled to Danville, Ill. There he made the acquaintance of Ella Brewer, with whom he was quite recently married, and they have since lived in Chicago at 208 West Randolph street, where he was arrested Wednesday night. Abraham Brewer, father of his present wife, is the complainant. He claims to have learned of Voss' former marriages a few days ago, and came here Wednesday to secure his arrest.

IN CONGRESS.

In the House the Loud Bill to Amend the Postal Laws

Will Be Disposed of—After That the Pacific Railroad Funding Bill—In the Senate Our Foreign Relations and Olney's Position Will Come Up.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Just before the holiday recess the house of representatives, upon the recommendation of the committee on rules, arranged the business of the house for the first week in the new year.

On Tuesday and Wednesday the Loud bill to amend the postal laws so as to prohibit the transmission in the mail of serial novel publications and "sample" copies of newspapers at the second class rate, will be the special order. Discussion under the general rule will continue from immediately after the reading of the journal on Tuesday, the 5th inst., until 2 p. m. on Wednesday, and under the five-minute rule upon proposed amendments until 4 o'clock, when voting will begin upon pending amendments and the final passage of the bill. When the bill was called up rather unexpectedly several weeks ago it developed surprising strength, but since then the opposition has been active, and the chances of its passage are now considered rather doubtful.

After this bill has been disposed of, the rest of the week—Thursday, Friday and Saturday—will be devoted to the consideration of the Pacific railroad funding bill reported by Judge Powers, chairman of the committee on Pacific railroads. Two days will be given to general discussion and one day to debate and action in committee of whole upon proposed amendments. The bill will be reported to the house at 5 o'clock Saturday and the vote on its passage taken on Monday, the 11th inst., immediately after the reading of the Journal. The debate on this measure will doubtless be interesting owing to the opposition which exists among members of the house to the action of the majority of the committee. The bill proposes to extend the government lien over all the physical properties of the companies which, it is claimed, the present lien does not cover, and substituting for all outstanding obligations a new four per cent. mortgage, the government's debts to be carried at two per cent. per annum. In addition to this, the Southern Pacific Co. is required to pay the amount charged against the Central Pacific Co. so long as it remains lesseo thereof. The amount of the Union Pacific mortgage will be $54,731,000, and of the Central Pacific, net, $52,801,000. Messrs. Hubbard, of Missouri, and Bell, of Texas, have made minority reports, opposing the recommendations of the committee, the former recommending that the bill be drawn by Attorney-General Harmon and introduced by Senators Brice and Morgan to enforce the government liens upon the property by proceedings in the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, and the latter that the debts of the companies be extended at three per cent. instead of two, secured by a first mortgage upon all their properties. They will probably lead the debate against the committee's bill.

By the terms of the order making these measures the special business, consideration of any other matter is shut out, and it will take unanimous consent to act on anything else until the orders have been exhausted. The only exception is that on Friday night private pension bills will be discussed for two hours and a half as usual without a quorum.

When the senate meets Tuesday morning it is quite likely that the debate on matters pertaining to our foreign relations and the position assumed by Secretary Olney for the executive, will at once begin to take shape. Whether Mr. Cameron will call up the Cuban resolution on the opening day of the session is not known, for that senator has not yet returned to the city, and the subject is entirely in his hands.

Mr. Hale, who is looked upon as the leader of the anti-Cuban recognition sentiment in the senate, said Saturday that several senators who had been heretofore silent on the subject, had come ont against the Cameron resolutions and there was now no possible chance for its passage.

On the other hand Messrs. Cameron, Lodge, Chandler, Morgan and Mills assert that the sentiment favoring action by congress is becoming more vigorous and that the fighting will be forced from the start. Mr. Hale, who in the absence of Mr. Allison, is acting chairman of the committee on appropriations expects to have the army bill reported to senate Wednesday and this will be put forward to antagonize the Cuban proposition.

Two speeches are booked for the coming week, one by Mr. Peffer, probably Wednesday, on his resolution for the appointment of a national monetary conference, and another by Mr. Proctor on the joint resolutions providing for the election of president and vice president and senators by popular vote.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 4.—Wm. J. Bryan has accepted an invitation to visit Mr. Robt. Southall, at his place in Amelia county, for the purpose of having a deer hunt. Somebody has found out that animals are left-handed, if the expression may be used about creatures that have no hands. Several different zoologists have noticed this condition. TRUTH has nothing to fear from the future. —Ram's Horn.

When an innocent man is jailed by mistake he prefers to come out the same way he went in. He may break jail and be caught and put back again. He'd rather have the door unlocked and walk out and stay out.

A sick man is a prisoner in the jail of disease; he has gone in by some door or necessary or neglect or irregular living, and he must unlock this same door by careful, sensible habits if he wants to be a free, well man again.

If dyspepsia and biliousness or constipation is the way he got into disease, he has got to overcome just those troubles before he can get out.

The majority of diseases begin with some trouble of the digestive organs or of the liver, which prevents the supply of proper nourishment to the system. The best remedy for these troubles is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, because it gives the digestive and blood-making organs power to assimilate food and transform it into pure, nourishing blood, vitalized with an abundance of red corpuscles.

It acts directly upon the liver and gives it capacity to filter all bilious impurities out of the circulation. It builds up solid, muscular flesh and healthy nerve-force.

"In obstinate constipation the 'Discovery'" should be used in conjunction with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the most natural and thoroughly scientific laxative ever devised. The "Pellets" regulate and invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. One is a gentle laxative; two act as a mild cathartic.

PRINCE JESUS,

When the World Was Wrecked in Sin, Laid Aside His Purple

Dr. Talmage's text was II. Corinthians viii., 9: "Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for our sakes he became poor."

That all the worlds which on a cold winter's night make the heavens one great glitter are without inhabitants is an absurdity. Scientists tell us that many of these worlds are too hot or too cold or too rarefied of atmosphere for residence. But, if not fit for human abode, they may be fit for beings different from and superior to ourselves. We are told that the world of Jupiter is changing and becoming fit for creatures like the human race, and that Mars would do for the human family with a little change in the structure of our respiratory organs. But that there is a great world swung somewhere, vast beyond imagination, and that it is the headquarters of the universe, and has a population in numbers vast beyond all statistics, and appointments of splendor beyond the capacity of canvas, or poem, or angel to describe, is as certain as the Bible is authentic. Perhaps some of the astronomers with their big telescopes have already caught a glimpse of it, not knowing what it is. We spell it with six letters and pronounce it Heaven.

That is where Prince Jesus lived nineteen centuries ago. He was the King's Son. It was the old homestead of eternity, and all its castles were as old as God. Not a frost had ever chilled the air. Not a tear had ever rolled down the cheek of one of its inhabitants. There had never been a headache, or a sidecache, or a heartache. There had not been a funeral in the memory of the oldest inhabitant. There had never in all the land been woven a black veil, for there had never been anything to mourn over. The passage of millions of years had not wrinkled or crippled or bedimmed any of its citizens. All the people there were in a state of eternal adolescence. What floral and pomonic richness! Gardens of perpetual bloom and orchards in unending fruitage. Had some spirit from another world entered and asked, What is sin? What is bereavement? What is sorrow? What is death? the brightest of the intelligence would have failed to give definition, though to study the question there was silence in Heaven for half an hour.

The prince of whom I speak had honors, emoluments, reclamations, such as no other prince, celestial or terrestrial, ever enjoyed. As he passed the street the inhabitants took off from their brows garlands of white lilies and threw them in the way. He never entered any of the temples without all the worshipers rising up and bowing in obeisance. In all the processions of the high days he was one who evoked the loudest welcome. Sometimes on foot, walking in loving talk with the humblest of the land, but at other times he took a chariot, and among the 20,000 that the Psalmist spoke of, his was the swiftest and most flaming; or, as when St. John ecribed him, he took white palfrey with what prance of foot, and arch of neck, and roll of mane, and gleam of eye is only dimly suggested in the Apocalypse. He was not like other princes, waiting for the Father to die and then take the throne. When years ago an artist in Germany made a picture for the royal gallery representing the Emperor William on the throne, and the crown prince as having one foot on the step of the throne, the Emperor William ordered the picture changed, and said: "Let the prince keep his foot off the throne till I leave it."

Already enthroned was the Heavenly Prince side by side with the Father. What a circle of dominion! What multitudes of admirers! What unending round of glories! All the towers chimed the Prince's praises. Of all the inhabitants, from the center of the city, on over the hills and clear down to the beach against which the ocean of immensity rolls its billows, the Prince was the acknowledged favorite. No wonder my text says that "He was rich." Set all the diamonds of the earth in one scepter, build all the palaces of the earth in one Alhambra, gather all the pearls of the sea in one diadem, put all the values of the earth in one coin, the aggregate could not express his affluence. Yes, St. Paul was right. Solomon had in gold six hundred and eighty million pounds, and in silver one billion twenty-nine million three hundred and seventy-seven pounds sterling. But a greater than Solomon is here. Not the millionaire, but the owner of all things. To describe his celestial surroundings, the Bible uses all colors, gathering them in rainbow over the throne and setting them as agate in the temple window, and hoisting 12 of them into a wall, from striped jasper at the base to transparent amethyst in the capstone, while between are green of emerald, and snow of pearl, and blue of sapphire, and yellow of topaz, gray of chrysoprase, and flame of jacinth. All the lovelliness of landscape in foliage, and river, and rill, and all enchantment of marine, the sea of glass mingled with fire as when the sun sinks in the Mediterranean. All the thrill of music, instrumental and vocal, harps, trumpets, doxologies. There stood the Prince, surrounded by those who had under their wings the velocity of millions of miles a second, himself rich in love, rich in adoration, rich in power, rich in worship, rich in holiness, rich in "all the fulness of the Godhead bodily."

But one day there was a disaster in a department in God's universe. A race fallen! A world in ruins! Our planet the scene of catastrophe! A globe swinging out into darkness, with mountains, and seas, and islands, an awful centrifugal of sin seeming to overpower the beautiful centripetal of righteousness, and from it a groan reached Heaven. Such a sound had never been heard there. Plenty of sweet sounds, but never an outcry of distress or an echo of agony. At that one groan the Prince rose from all the blissful circumjacence and started for the outer gate and descended into the night of this world. Out of what a bright harbor into what a rough sea! "Stay with us," cried angel after angel, and potentate after potentate. "No," said the Prince, "I can not stay; I must be off for that wreck of a world. I must stop that groan. I must fathom that abyss. I must redeem those nations. Farewell, thrones and temples, hosts cherubic, seraphic, archangelic! I will come back again, carrying on my shoulder a ransomed world. Till this is done I choose earthly scuff to Heavenly acclamation, and a cattle pen to a king's palace, frigid zone of earth to atmosphere of celestial radiance. I have no time to lose, for hark ye to the groan that grows mightier while I wait. "Farewell! Farewell!" "Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor."

Was there ever a contrast so overpowering as that between the noonday of Christ's celestial departure and the midnight of His earthly arrival? Sure enough, the angels were out that night in the sky, and an especial meteor acted as escort, but all that was from other worlds and not from this world. The earth made no demonstration of welcome. If one of the great princes of this world steps out at a depot, cheers resound and the bands play and the flags wave. But for the arrival of this missionary Prince of the skies not a torch flared, not a trumpet blew, not a pluma fluttered. All the music and the pomp were overhead. Our world opened for Him nothing better than a barn door. The Rajah of Cashmere sent to Queen Victoria a bedstead of carved gold and a canopy that cost $750,000, but the world had for the Prince of Heaven and Earth only a litter of straw. The crown jewels in the Tower of London amount to $15,000,000, but this member of eternal royalty had nowhere to lay his head. To know how poor he was ask the camel drivers, ask the shepherds, ask Mary, ask the three wise men of the east, who afterward came to Bethlehem. To know how poor he was examine all the records of real estate in that Oriental country, and see what vineyard or what field he owned. Not one. Of what mortgage was he the mortgagee? Of what tenement was he the landlord? Of what lease was he the lessee? Who ever paid him rent? Not owning the boat on which he sailed, or the beast on which he rode, or the pillow on which he slept. He left so little estate that in order to pay his tax he had to perform a miracle putting the amount of the assessment in a fish's mouth and having it hauled ashore. And after his death the world rushed in to take an inventory of his goods, and the entire aggregate was the garments he had worn, sleeping in them by night and traveling in them by day, bearing on them the dust of the highway and the saturation of the sea. St. Paul in my text hit the mark when he said of the missionary prince: "For your sakes he became poor."

The world could have treated him better if it had chosen. It had all the means for making his earthly condition comfortable. Only a few years before when Pompey, the general, arrived in Brindisi he was greeted with arches and a costly column which celebrated the 12,000,000 people whom he had killed or conquered, and he was allowed to wear his triumphal robe in the senate. The world had applause for imperial butchers, but buffeting for the Prince of Peace. Plenty of golden chalices for the favored to drink out of, but our Prince must put His lips to the bucket of the well by the roadside after he had begged for a drink. Poor? Born in another man's barn and eating at another man's fishing smack, and buried in another man's tomb. Four inspired authors wrote his biography, and innumerable lives of Christ have been published, but He composed His autobiography in a most compressed way. He said: "I have trodden the wine press alone."

Poor in the estimation of nearly all the prosperous classes. They called him Sabbath-breaker, wine-bibber, traitor, blasphemer, and ransacked the dictionary of opprobrium from cover to cover to express their detestation. I can think now of only two well to do men who espoused the cause, Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea. His friends for the most part were people who, in that climate where opthalmia or inflammation of the eyeball sweeps ever and anon as a scourge, had become blind, sick people who were anxious to get well, and troubled people in whose family there was some one dead or dying. If he had a purse at all it was empty, or we would have heard what the soldiers did with the contents. Poor? The pigeon in the dove-cote, the rabbit in its burrow, the silk worm in its socoon, the bee in its hive is better provided for! better off! better sheltered! Aye, the brute creation has a home on earth, which Christ had not. A poet says:

> If on windy days the riven
> Gambol like a dancing skiff,
> Not the less for this is driven
> On the bosom of the cliff.
> If almost with eagle pinion
> O'er the Alps the chamois roam,
> Yet he has some small dominion
> Which no doubt no calls his home.

But the Crown Prince of all Heavenly dominion has less than the raven, less than the chamois, for He was homeless. Aye, in the history of the universe there is no other instance of such coming down. Who can count the miles from the top of the throne to the bottom of the cross? Cleopatra, giving a banquet to Antony, took a pearl worth $100,000 and dissolved it in vinegar and swallowed it. But when our Prince, according to the evangelist, in His last hours, took the vinegar, in it had been dissolved all the pearls of His heavenly royalty. Down until there was no other harassment to suffer, poor until there was no other pauperism to torture. Billions of dollars spent in wars to destroy men, who will furnish the statistics of the value of that precious blood that was shed to save us? "Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor."

Only those who study this text in two places can fully realize its power, the Holy Land of Asia Minor and the Holy Land of Heaven. I wish that some day you might go to the Holy Land and take a drink out of Jacob's well, and take a sail on Galilee, and read the Sermon on the Mount while standing on Olivet, and see the wilderness where Christ was tempted, and be some afternoon on Calvary at about 3 o'clock—the hour at which closed the crucifixion—and sit under the sycamores and by the side of brooks, and think and dream and pray about the poverty of Him who came our soul to save. But you may be denied that, and so here, in another continent and in another hemisphere, and in scenes as different as possible, we recount as well we may how poor was our Heavenly Prince. But in the other holy land above we may all study the riches that He left behind when He started for earthly expedition. Come, let us bargain to meet each other at the door of the Father's mansion, or on the bank of the river just where it rolls from under the throne, or at the outside gate. Jesus got the contrast by exchanging this world for that. There and then you will understand more of the wonders of the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, who "though he was rich, yet for your sakes became poor."

Yes, grace, free grace, sovereign grace, omnipotent grace! Among the thousands of words in the language there is no more queenly word. It means free and unmerited kindness. My text has no monopoly of the word. One hundred and twenty-nine times does the Bible eulogize grace. It is a door swung wide open to let into the pardon of God all the millions who choose to enter it.

John Newton sang of it when he wrote:

> Amazing grace; how sweet the sound,
> That saved a wretch like me.

Philip Doddridge put it into all hymnology when he wrote:

> Grace, 'tis a charming sound,
> Harmonious to the ear,
> Heaven with the echo shall resound,
> And all the earth shall hear.

One of John Bunyan's great books is entitled, "Grace Abounding." "It is all of grace that I am saved" has been on the lips of hundreds of dying Christians. The boy Sammy was right when being examined for admission into church membership, he was asked; "Whose work was you salvation?" and he answered; "Part mine and part God's." Then the examiner asked: "What part did you do, Sammy?" and the answer was "I opposed God all I could, and He did the rest!" Oh, the height of it, the depth of it, the length of it, the breadth of it, the grace of God! Mr. Fletcher having written a pamphlet that pleased the King, the King offered to compensate him, and Fletcher answered, "There is only one thing I want, and that is more grace." Yes, my blood-bought hearers, grace to live by and grace to die by. Grace that saved the publican, that saved Lydia, that saved the dying thief, that saved the jailer, that saved me. But the riches of that grace will not be fully understood until Heaven breaks in upon the soul. An old Scotchman, who had been a soldier in one of the European wars, was sick and dying in one of our American hospitals. His one desire was to see Scotland and his old home, and once again walk the heather of the Highlands, and hear the bagpipes of the Scotch regiments. The night that the old Scotch soldier died, a young man, somewhat reckless, but kind-hearted, got a company of musicians to come and play under the old soldier's window, and among the instruments there was a bagpipe. The instant that the musicians began the dying old man in delirium said: "What's that? What's that? Why, it's the regiments coming home. That's the tune, yes, that's the tune. Thank God, I have got home once more!" "Bonnie Scotland and Bonnie Doon!" were the last words he uttered as he passed up to the highlands of the better country.

And there are here hundreds homesick for Heaven, some because you have so many bereavements, some because you have so many temptations, some because you have so many ailments—homesick, very homesick, for the fatherland of Heaven, and the music that you want to hear now is the song of free grace, and the music that you want to hear when you die is free grace, and forever before the throne of God you will sing of the "grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, who, though he was rich, for your sakes became poor!"

Yes, yes; for your sake! It was not on a pleasure excursion that He came, for it was all pain. It was not on an astronomical exploration, for he knew this world as well before he alighted as afterward. It was not because he was compelled to come, for he volunteered. It was not because it was easy, for he knew that it would be thorn, and spike, and hunger, and thirst, and vociferation of angry mobs.

"For your sakes!" To wipe away your tears, to forgive your wrongdoing, to companionship your loneliness, to sooth your sorrows, to sit with you by the new-made grave, to bind up your wounds in the ugly battle with the world and bring you home at last, kindling up the mists that fall on your dying vision with the sunlight of a glorious morn. "For your sakes!" No; I will change that. Paul will not care and Christ will not care if I change it, for I must get into the blessedness of the text myself, and so I say: "For our sakes!" For we all have our temptations and bereavements and conflicts. For our sakes! We who deserve for our sins to be expatriated into a world as much poorer than this as this earth is poorer than Heaven. For our sakes! But what a frightful coming down to take us gloriously up!

ROYAL DECREE,

MADRID, Jan. 2.—In the council of ministers, presided over Friday by her majesty, the queen regent, a royal decree was signed which apply to the island of Porto Rico the laws of reforms voted in the cortes on the 15th of March, 1895.

The preamble to this decree is of the greatest importance, because of the statements it contains regarding Cuba. It begins by explaining the reasons why the reforms are applied to-day and wherefore this has not been done before. Amongst other paragraphs it contains the following:

In the actual circumstances the government considers that the proper time has arrived for giving to the world ample proof of its firm resolve to fulfill the engagements voluntarily contracted by the nation by implanting and carrying into effect in Porto Rico the reform of the system of government and civil administration, voted by the cortes and sanctioned by her majesty, and which, conveniently enlarged and extended, will be applied in the time to Cuba.

In unfolding the basis of reforms with that scrupulous care which the complex nature of the case and its many and varied problems demand, the undersigned minister has been inspired with a sense of the necessity of ample administrative decentralization, and has proceeded to the utmost limit, which the actual law allows without diminution of the inherent sovereignty of the nation. At the same time, true to the solemn promise made before parliament by its president, the government proposes to give a more ample scope to the reforms when, as a herald of peace, the happy moment arrives for the definite application of the reforms to both the Antilles. As soon as possible her majesty's government will hasten to apply to Cuba, not only the reforms which form the groundwork of the law applied to Porto Rico, but also will extend to both provinces the reforms which have been offered with the view of conferring upon both Antilles an administrative and economic personality of a local character, which shall facilitate the complete intervention of the country in its own affairs, maintaining, at the same time, intact, the right of sovereignty and the conditions necessary to the maintenance of that right, as was stated in the words her majesty deigned to address to the cortes by the advice of her responsible government upon the opening of parliament.

Briefly the law of reforms voted by the cortes and sanctioned by the crown, which is to-day to be applied to Porto Rico, will form the foundation stone of the new regime; but, an additional decree, account of which will be given to the cortes, will amplify to such an extent these reforms that a genuine home administration will be constituted in our Antilles in the first instance for Cuba, but to be extended to Porto Rico as soon, and at the same time as it may be possible to apply to the former island.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.

SECRETLY PLOTTING

With Spain to Crush the Republic of Cuba—Alleged Dealings of Secretary Olney and Minister De Lome.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—The Journal Friday published the following startling cablegram from its very excellent correspondent at Madrid, Mr. James Creelman:

"It has taken me many days to trace out the astounding dealings of President Cleveland and his administration with the Spanish monarchy, but I am now in a position to give the American public some light on the subject. Actual facts show that Cleveland's offer of mediation was simply a cover under the American government secretly proposed to help Spain to overthrow and suppress the republic of Cuba and to enforce peace in that island on terms which the patriot army would not accept. This offer was not made in the form of a written document, transmitted through the usual channels, but, for the sake of greater secrecy, was conveyed in a verbal statement made by Secretary Olney to the Spanish minister at Washington, De Lome, who cabled the whole matter to Madrid. The understanding was that if Cuban leaders refused to lay down their arms upon conditions of local self-government to be proposed through the United States, the whole influence and power of the American government would be exerted to crush the new republic.

"The slightest investigation by congress will reveal the truth of this statement.

"I have the facts upon unimpeachable authority, but the most surprising fact in this well-concealed conspiracy against the Cuban republic is that in order to help Spain in her pitiless campaign of massacre, Secretary Olney has not presented any of the claims for damages arising out of the destruction of American property in the present war.

"My investigations in Madrid show that, notwithstanding Cleveland's empty expressions of sympathy for Cubans, he has been their most vigilant and deliberate enemy.

"He has searched the records for pretexts to avoid pressing the just claims of Americans upon Spain.

"At the same time he has intimated to the monarchy, through more than one channel, his desire to prevent Cuba from achieving independence."

A Successor to Senator Palmer.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 2.—The Illinois legislature will convene January 8. The most important business before it and the topic which is at present all absorbing is the election of a United States senator to succeed Hon. John M. Palmer. There are six candidates: William E. Mason, Clarke E. Carr, exminister to Denmark and for some time speaker of the lower house; John M. Hamilton, of Chicago; Samuel W. Allerton, the millionaire pork packer, also of Chicago; Congressman Robert R. Hitt and Martin B. Madden, a Chicago alderman.

THE PRODUCTION

Of Minerals and Metals for the Year 1896 in the United States.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—The Engineering and Mining Journal Saturday says:

The production of minerals and metals in the United States for the year 1896 is given at a total value of $653,311,468, showing a decrease as compared with 1895 of $24,688,266, or about 3½ per cent. This decrease was largely in values rather than in quantities; in none of the chief articles was there any marked decrease, while in several there were considerable increases.

The total production of metals in the year 1896 was valued at $242,317,481, an increase of $1,694,111 over the previous year, while the value of nonmetallic substances was $410,999,987, a decrease of $26,383,377 from 1895. A large part of this was due to the lower values of coal, stone and a few other important substances, very little resulting from the smaller quantities.

The increase in copper has been extraordinary, the total gain amounting to 67,370,156 pounds. The production of gold reached the great total of $57,000,000, a gain of $10,169,800. This extraordinary advance, which far surpasses the gain reported from any other country in the world, puts the United States far in the lead of the producing countries. Our output of gold was no less than 26 per cent. of the total reported for the entire world.

The production of pig iron has been 8,768,869 long tons. The decrease from 1895 being only 677,439 tons or about 7 per cent.

The production of lead from domestic ores amounted to 175,777 short tons, showing an increase of 20,863 tons over the preceding year. In addition to this there were 79,000 tons produced from imported ores or refined from imported bullion.

The output of quicksilver was 33,012 flasks of 76½ pounds each, showing a decrease of 966 flasks from the previous year. The production continues to come wholly from the California mines.

The production of silver from domestic ores reached a total of 45,465,173 fine ounces, showing a decrease of 865,093 ounces. There were produced or refined from foreign ores and bullion by our smelters and other works no less than 40,000,000 fine ounces of silver, making the total quantity refined or put into final marketable form in this country 85,465,173 fine ounces.

The total production of spelter or commercial zinc for 1896 amounted to 77,044 short tons, showing a decrease of 4,774 tons from that of 1895.

The output of bituminous coal was 141,770,699 tons, showing a gain of 4,371,752 tons. On the other hand there was a decrease of 6,782,057 short tons in the anthracite production.

The total coal production was, therefore, 193,351,937 short tons, and the total decrease, as compared with 1895, was 2,410,305 tons.

THE PROPOSED REFORMS

Will Grant Three Administrative Bodies in Cuba—The Cubans Will Have a Large Share in the Control of Local Affairs.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—According to custom, the secretary of state and Mrs. Olney entertained the diplomatic corps at breakfast at their residence at noon Friday. About 150 were present. Mrs. Olney was assisted in receiving by Mrs. George Gray, Mrs. Sheridan, Mrs. McClellan, Mrs. Charles H. Davis, Mrs. Hogne, Mrs. Endicott, Mrs. Thomas Nelson Page, Mrs. Minot, her daughter and a number of young girls.

In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Olney received callers.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The effect of the reforms proposed by the Spanish government for Porto Rico, when extended to Cuba, as is proposed when the insurrection has been brought under further control, will be to create three series of administrative bodies in the island, independent of the representatives of Cuba in the Spanish cortes. The voters under a system of limited suffrage, are already permitted to choose the boards of aldermen of municipalities and the mayors are to be chosen from these boards by vote of their members. The next body in rank is the provincial assembly, of which there is only one in Porto Rico, but one for each of the six provinces of Cuba. The functions of the provincial assembly are largely united with those of the proposed council of administration in the case of Porto Rico, because there is but one body. The council of administration will be an independent body in Cuba, and will, for the first time, give the Cubans a large share of control over their internal domestic concerns. The home government will retain control of the laws levying taxation, and will reserve the right to renew the budget of appropriations, but the appropriations will be made by the council of administration, subject to the approval of the ministry at Madrid. The Spanish government does not propose at present to widen the limits of the suffrage which extends to persons paying a combined tax of five dollars and to several of the learned professions. The reforms in contemplation for Cuba are largely those which were embodied in the decree of March 15, 1895, but which have not yet been put in force because of the insurrection. Changes which have been proposed in this law will require to be submitted to the cortes at their meeting in the spring, but it is not doubted that the plans proposed by the ministry will be accepted.

The national guard consists of 851 commissioned officers and 12,556 enlisted men.

COMMODORE SINKS,

Ten Americans and Six Cubans Were Either Killed or Drowned.

The Ship, It is Alleged, Was Scuttled and the Pumps Deranged by a Traitor—The Commodore Was Loaded With Arms and Ammunition for Cubans.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Jan. 4.—The filibustering steamer Commodore, which left Jacksonville, Fla., Friday evening, was sunk off New Smyrna bar at 3:30 o'clock Saturday morning, carrying its precious cargo of arms, etc., for the Cuban army to the bottom, 20 fathoms deep.

The consignment consisted of 208,000 cartridges, 1,000 pounds giant powder, 40 bundles of rifles, 3 electric batteries, 300 machetes, 14 cases of drugs, 4 bundles of clothes, valued at $44,465. Not an article was saved.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 4.—All of the crew of the Commodore were not saved, as reported Saturday night. Twelve from Jacksonville, three alive and one dead at Daytona. Four are reported to have arrived near Armond, but the report has not been confirmed, and eight are at sea on a life raft.

Capt. Murphy, Stephen Crane, the novelist, C. B. Montgomery, the cook, and Wm. Higgins, a stoker, landed at Daytona Sunday morning. Their boat was turned over in the surf, and Higgins received a wound which caused his death soon after getting ashore. The party on the raft are all Cubans. They left the boat before Capt. Murphy's party and nothing more has been heard of them.

J. M. Barrs requested the collector of customs to secure permission for the Three Friends to go the rescue of the Commodore immediately upon receipt of the wreck Saturday. The collector telegraphed to Secretary Carlisle at once, but no reply was received until Sunday afternoon. Permission was granted, and the Three Friends left Sunday night. The boat is being patrolled from St. Augustine to New Smyrna. It is reported that there was treachery aboard the Commodore but no details can be learned. The party landed at Daytona can not get to this city until Monday as there are no Sunday trains on the East Coast railroad. The party that landed Saturday night and reached here are: Maj. Ricardo A. Delgado, Paul Rollo, Paquito Bencamo, Franco Blanco, Miguel Condisburry, Wamon Hernandez, Gabriel Martinez, Santiago Diaz, Emilie Marquez, Jose Hernandez and Buenevenuo Linoveas.

The following was received from Daytona at 8 o'clock Sunday night: About ten o'clock Friday night a suspicious leak was discovered in the fire room and Capt. Murphy immediately started the pumps which undoubtedly had been tampered with, as they were in working order when Capt. Murphy and Chief Engineer Redigan left watch at eight o'clock. The fires were extinguished and the boat came to a standstill about 13 miles from Mosquito Light. Capt. Murphy took full charge of the handling of the ship while the first mate superintended the launching of the boats. The Cubans took possession of the big boat and loaded it with baggage so that only 13 men left the tug in it. They reached shore at 4 o'clock Saturday and left for Jacksonville. The second boat was occupied by six Cubans, and the empty boat washed ashore at Port Orange Saturday night. The third boat to leave the craft's side was filled with Americans, leaving a ten-foot wing for Capt. Murphy and se, who refused to quit the ship until all were saved. C. B. Montgomery, the steward, Stephen Crane and Wm. Higgins remained with the captain and with him launched the dingy and stood by the tug until 7 o'clock, when she sank. The mate's boat, containing nine Americans, was smashed, and the mate, two engineers, six firemen and sailors were lashed to a raft which Capt. Murphy attempted to tow ashore two miles away, but the terrible sea and the northeast gale swept them away. The dingy occupied by the captain and companions was 27 hours at sea, Montgomery and Crane holding Capt. Murphy's overcoat as a sail, until the beach was sighted. High seas were breaking a half a mile from shore. Montgomery, Crane and Murphy were washed to the beach, where citizens provided them with medical attendance.

SIMPLE SERVICES

Over the Remains of the Late Joseph H. McCullagh, the Veteran Journalist.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 4.—The funeral of the late Joseph H. McCullagh, editor of the Globe-Democrat, took place Saturday afternoon at his late residence on West Pine Boulevard. The services were conducted by Rev. John Snyder, of the Unitarian Church, and Rev. Dr. W. W. Boyd, of the Second Baptist Church.

The services were exceedingly simple in character, in accordance with the well known wishes of the deceased. Among the visitors in attendance at the funeral was Hon. Henri Watterson, of the Louisville Courier Journal.

The active pall bearers were 20 workers of Mr. McCullagh on the Globe-Democrat, and the honorary pall bearers were selected from men prominent in nearly every walk of life.

The remains were interred in the McKee family lot in Bellefontaine cemetery.

The editor of the Louisiana News has been grossly swindled. He took a bushel of hickory nuts from a Salt river bottom man on subscription, only to find that the nuts were bad and the holes had been plugged with matches.

A Rhode Island woman has just married her sixth husband, having four of her ex-husbands as ushers at the wedding. The fifth was unable to be present on account of an accident. The newly wedded couple will spend their honeymoon with the sick ex-husband.

George Stoner, a negro who was sent from Bourbon county three years ago to serve a life sentence in the Kentucky Penitentiary for murdering his wife, died in prison last week. He was the meanest prisoner in the pen and had to be kept in solitary confinement.

If the loafers around this place had gone out last season and plowed the "craps" instead of shooting them, they would have been able to have worn socks the year round, but as it is too late for regrets, and as advice is no good, we recommend an early death.—Georgetown News.

From Jessamine, Woodford, Fayette and other rich land counties, come constant reports of private land sales on a large scale, not only large farms are sold, but they bring big prices. With a decided upward tendency in the horse market and good prices for export cattle, why should there not be a demand for blue grass land?—Richmond Register.

The tendency now is for neat, healthy not extra large hogs. The use of oleo and cotton seed oil has done the work for lard, and it is meat now—meat that we can eat—rather than a mass of fat that is wanted. Make your hogs as near perfect as you can at about 200 to 225 pounds and they bring the top of the market. It is believed the greater profit is realized too for this weight, if properly fed by it.

Isaac Bullen, who died last week, at Langford, Rockcastle County, was interred in burial garments and a coffin ordered for the purpose by himself 25 years ago. He ordered a coffin for his wife at the same time, but she is still living, and 80 years old. A week ago Bullen's sister died and then he said "One week from to-day I will be buried." His reason for so thoroughly preparing for death and burial was that he wanted to owe no man anything when he died.

The Cynthiana Democrat has this to say of justice as it is dispensed in Kentucky: "A Paris fellow stole a hog one night week before last, and in less than forty-eight hours afterward had been sentenced to six years in the penitentiary. If he had committed murder his case in all probability could not have reached a trial within a year and a half. Which goes to show, gentle reader, that our courts of justice do not consider Kentuckians hogs—that is, dead Kentuckians, at any rate."

The tobacco growers of Montgomery county held a meeting at Mt. Sterling Saturday which was largely attended. After discussing the situation they adopted a resolution declaring it to be the sense of the meeting: "That the tobacco growers of Montgomery county raise no tobacco during the year 1897, and that the tobacco growers of the state be asked to join the movement. It was further resolved that the chairman appoint a committee from each precinct to solicit names to an article, binding the signers thereto not to raise or have cultivated any tobacco during the year 1897."

POLITICAL.

Green R. Kellar, of Carlisle, says he is not a candidate for clerk of the Court of Appeals.

Gov. Bradley says that if he should resign it will not be until such time as Lieutenant-Governor Worthington is entitled to fill out the term.

Mayor Todd, of Louisville, has incurred the displeasure of the Frankfort Capital, by allowing Democrats to share in the city offices, which is good cause for a kick.

The Louisville Commercial has been polling the members of the legislature on the question of a special session. Nearly all of them heard from favor a special session.

They are having a warm contest over the selection of a postmaster in Newport. There are two applicants for the vacancy, one of whom is backed by Congressman Berry and the other by Judge Helm.

The Republicans say the "sound" money Democrats have carried Kentucky twice for them. This looks very much like they are preparing an excuse to invite them to participate in their Senatorial caucus for the express purpose of defeating Dr. Hunter.

The senatorial situation in Kentucky is assuming an interesting phase. Eevcything points to the conclusion that the McKinley influence has been exerted for the purpose of eliminating Hunter from the situation and securing the election of John W. Yerkes, of Danville. Gov. Bradley is for Yerkes, and it is believed that St. John Boyle would step aside for the Danville man.—Courier Journal.

Capt. Todd Hall, the famous old "Harmonizer" from Clark, is a candidate for representative in the next Legislature. Todd Hall in spite of his surname has devoted his life to the promotion of harmony in the Democratic party. If he should be returned, and Dr. James and Jack Gross should be on hand, white winged peace would hover over the State Capital as it has not hovered since Charley Bronston came in to make—trouble for the good people.—Capital.

There is no doubt about an extra session of the Legislature in March next. This is necessitated because the Republicans have an opportunity to elect the United States Senator. They need the vote of a Republican in the Senate, and coming from Kentucky it is a great gain for that party. Republicans have the control of the Legislature on joint ballot, but it is too close to put an extra session off, because life is uncertain. The demand for revenue is a fake, because it is now just as it was one year ago.—Argus.

The fact of the business is, the Capital is going to print the news and leave the consequence to providence and the public. Up to this time Dr. Hunter has all the opposition divided into small bodies and he has been beating it in detail which was the method pursued by Napoleon. The Capital has not been able to learn of any prominent Republican who intends to fight Hunter openly, and the policy of the sound money Democrats has apparently been to let the Republicans beat Blackburn, but if he should be beaten with Hunter to then disclaim any responsibility for the latter. The Louisville Times says of the Capital's statement that Hunter may get some sound money Democratic votes, "there is no reason to believe that it (the Capital) has any authority to speak for sound money Democrats. Under stress of circumstances they might vote for an anti-silver-Republican, but it is not to be believed that Hunter could under any circumstances get their votes. Matters would have to be in a very desperate shape before the sound money Democrats would turn to the man who signed those Jerry Porter pledges last winter."—Capital.

Kentucky is threatened with an extra session of her Legislature. This, coming right on the heels of the reign of lawlessness in that State, looks as if Kentucky might soon succeed Kansas in the bleeding business.—N. Y. Journal.

That the white people of the South have been liberal in their efforts in preparing the colored population of that section for good and useful citizens cannot be denied. In the last twenty years they have expended $80,000,000 in educating them, while they have assisted them in many other ways.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 13, 1897. NO. 12.

MESSRS HANNA and McKinley are preparing their inaugural address.

WILL Grover Present Mc. with his fowling piece when he leaves the White House?

WITH the new year the Georgetown Times began its thirty-first year. It is a most excellent paper and long may its prosperous career continue.

THE RECORDER'S neighborhood correspondents made a most excellent beginning for the new year, and it hopes they will find it agreeable to keep up the pace they have set.

THE Capital charges the Louisville Commercial with forging the signature of representative Carson, of Louisville, to a letter it published, favoring an extra session of the General Assembly. Carson says he wrote no letter. The Commercial is put in an awkward attitude to say the least.

THOSE Louisville papers that did all in their power to assist in the election of McKinley, knew what to expect on the tariff question if he was successful, and the kick now coming from them because of the prospects of an increase of the tariff is silly in the extreme. Take your medicine.

THE Owen News has the following entries for district offices: For Circuit Judge, J. W. Greene, John S. Gaunt, C. C. Cram. For Commonwealth's Attorney, M. D. Gray, Robert Wood, of Gallatin, and Clay Castleman, of Boone county. The News does not name the above as sure starters in the race. Clay Castleman is meant for D. E. Castleman.

IN this issue M. C. Carroll, of Big Bone, is announced as a candidate for Sheriff, subject to the action of the Democratic party. Mr. Carroll is a young man of good habits, has always been an active Democrat, and if made Sheriff of Boone county he will devote his energy to the duties of the office and make a good public servant. He will make an active canvass of the county.

IN this issue appears the announcement of J. N. Pearson, of Florence, as a candidate for assessor. Mr. Pearson is a consistent Democrat and has been a faithful and efficient member of the Boone County Democratic Executive Committee for thirteen years last past. He is an upright, clever gentleman, and should the Democrats choose him as their candidate for assessor he will serve the county faithfully and efficiently.

DR. HUNTER claims to have enough signed pledges to give him the Republican nomination for United States Senator. Some of those signed pledges he is carrying about in his pocket may prove to be as little binding as the Doctor says he intended the one given Populist Poor during the heated Senatorial contest in the General Assembly of last winter. If Hunter wins the caucus nomination again he will do so over the opposition of the McKinley machine in this State.

THE fiscal court has manifested all along a desire to reduce the salary of the County Superintendent of schools, and the candidates for that office during the next term should make up their minds to be confronted with an effort in that direction. The office of Superintendent of Schools is one of importance, and the court should be thoroughly posted as to the labor and duty of that official before a cut in his salary is made. This, no doubt will be done, and if the court is satisfied a reduction in the salary is justifiable, the cut will be made. This much is said to put candidates on their guard.

THE warrant on the State Treasury for the money with which to pay the jurors at the December term, 1895, of the Boone Circuit Court, was sent to the Treasurer, early last week, for payment. He lost no time in returning it unpaid, accompanied by the information that it would have to be held until the legislature meets and makes provisions for the payment of the outstanding old warrants. The money for the payment of the jurors at the last term of the Circuit Court was forwarded immediately upon the reception of the order certifying the deficit. The powers that be at Frankfort may have the right to thus prefer creditors of the State, but there is no justice in it. The claims against the State ought to be paid in the order in which they are presented, and the treatment of those holding old claims against the State is repudiation, pure and simple.

A GOOD MAN GONE.

Died, on the 29th day of December, 1896, Sebern Perry Brady, in the 81st year of his age.

Bro. Brady was born in Boone county, Ky., May 1st, 1816, on the farm now owned by John E. Walton, situated on the Bellevue and Burlington turnpike. His residence during his entire life was in his native county, and at no time did he live as far as five miles from the place of his birth.

SEBERN PERRY BRADY.

His father, John Brady, was also a native of Boone county, and married Miss Polly Jack, of Gallatin county, she being a native of Woodford county. Their respective ages at the time of their marriage were 18 and 14 years. To them were born two sons and seven daughters, Sebern, William, Matilda, Jane, Harriat, Missouri, Effie Ann and America. His grandfather, William Brady, was a Revolutionary soldier and served under Gen. Marion.

Bro. Brady was thrice married. His first marriage was to Miss Eliza Garnett, Nov. 19th, 1835. To them were born one son and four daughters, viz: R. A. Brady, Mrs. J. J. Lillard, Mrs. Laura Carver, Mrs. John Scott, of this county, and Mrs. B. L. Gaines, of Carrollton, Carroll Co., all of whom survive him. Mrs. Brady died August 17th, 1849. His second marriage was to Mrs. Sarah Ingram, a sister of his first wife, February 9th, 1850. This union was dissolved by the death of his wife which occurred June 20th, 1878. His last marriage was to Miss Isabella Hill, September 20th, 1883, who survives him and who has shared his joys and assisted him in carrying his burdens even to the close of his life. He leaves eighteen grandchildren and nineteen great-grandchildren.

Brother Brady was a man who made an enviable history. As a husband, brother, father and grandfather, he was kind, loving and gentle. The testimony of those who were most closely related to him is, that they never received a cross nor harsh word from him. As a neighbor and friend he was most selfsacrificing, congenial and true. As a citizen he was of the highest type, loyal to himself, to his fellows and to his country, attending strictly to his own affairs but ever ready to assist in the affairs of others when called upon. His wisdom and general efficiency were recognized by the public, and he was often called to business positions of trust and responsibility. As a christian he was one of God's most noble specimens.

He made a public profession of his faith in Christ and united with the Middle Creek Baptist Church (now Bellevue) on the second Saturday in January, 1840. The church was not slow in recognizing his worth, so in April, 1843, he was chosen as clerk. He filled this office continuously and efficiently till his death, covering a period of nearly fifty-four years. His church saw manifested by him talents for greater usefulness; and in February, 1854, he was elected to the office of Deacon, which office he filled with credit to himself and perfect satisfaction to his church until the time of his death, covering a period of nearly forty-three years.

In every department of church work and worship, Bro. Brady was ever found in the first ranks. He was a judicious disciplinarian, a wise councellor in dealing with complicated questions, and most liberal in contributing his means for the furtherance of the cause which he so dearly loved. He was a faithful and active Sunday School worker, having taught several generations during his long career. The weather was never too hot nor too cold, too wet nor too dry for Bro. Brady and his faithful wife to go to their church and Sunday School. Whenever he was able he was found in his pew on the Lord's day.

But the narrow limits of his church did not afford the only field of labor for him. He was an aggressive man in the work of his denomination. Neither could the circumscribed limits of one church contain his influence. The North Bend Association, of which he was a member, discovered his ability and elected him to the office of Clerk in September, 1864. He filled this office with perfect satisfaction for thirty consecutive years, and was finally released from this work by his own urgent request.

Such a history is made by few men, and when such an one is brought to a close by the death of the noble character, O! what a large vacancy is left in our midst. In the language of a brother who assisted me in a revival meeting, and who had the privilege for the first time of associating with him in the work "his silent presence was a benediction." But God, Who is rich in mercy, and Who is ever ready to reward His people for faithful service, has said, "Come up higher," and Bro. Brady is now with his Saviour in Paradise. PASTOR.

FISCAL COURT.

A Three Days' Session And Many Claims Passed Upon,

Some of Which Went Through as Slick As If Greased, While Others Had a Rough Road to Travel.

Usual Allowances to County Officials.

The Fiscal Court was in session two days last week with Judge Stephens presiding and Justices M. B. Green, Henry Bannister, R. L. Roberts, O. W. Gaines and T. E. Roberts in attendance, while county Attorney Lassing was on hand to keep the court in the middle of the road, Sidney Gaines keeping the record.

Considerable business was transacted during the session, and several carefully prepared claims went down the chute into the wast basket, some of them never to be resurrected, while a few bobbed up occasionally to annoy the court.

The first business disposed of by the court was ordering paid the allowances made last January to the several doctors for pauper practice during the year 1896, the only change made from the amount fixed one year ago was in the claim of Drs. Williamson & Wright, Dr. Ryle being allowed $10 for pauper practice done in their territory, which amount was ordered deducted from the $40 for which they had agreed to do the practice.

For 1897 the pauper practice was let out as follows: Burlington precinct, including jail and County Infirmary, to J. F. Smith, $250; Florence to Corey, $30; Walton to Jones & Duncan, $30; Verona to Finnell, Menifee & McCormick, $20; Beaver to Ambrose, $20; Hamilton to W. W. Smith, $30; Union to Crouch, $30; Petersburg to Grant, $30; Bullittsville to Frank Sayre, $30; Constance to Murat, $25; Bellevue and Carlton to Williamson, Wright & Ryle, $50. Total, $555.

Dr. Robinson asked an allowance of $25 for an autopsy held on Annie Spillman, but the court thought $10 was enough for his services and ordered the sheriff to pay him that amount.

J. B. Berkshire's claim of $31 15 for labor and material furnished for repairing the benches in the circuit court room was favorably considered.

M. E. Harris was allowed $3 for conveying Ann Vernon to the County Infirmary.

R. T. Clements, R. L. Howlett, Florence Odd-Fellows and K. of P. at Rabbit Hash, were each allowed $1 for providing a room in which to hold the last November election.

Blyth & Clutterbuck were allowed $10 for merchandise furnished the county.

J. M. Lassing and Benjamin Stephens, committee on delinquent taxes reported as follows: Collected on poll tax for county purposes, $74 45; collected for road purposes, fines included, $30. Total, $104,45. Of the delinquent road tax $307 were worked out at $1 per day. The committee was directed to pay the $104,45 collected over to the Sheriff.

The salaries of the following county officers were fixed as follows for this year: County Judge, $400; County Attorney, $400; County Superintendent of schools, $500. J. F. Blyth was chosen keeper of the County Infirmary for the year 1897, at $250. Out of this sum he is to pay for the hauling of 1,200 bushels of coal and the hauling of the goods for the institution. He is to cultivate the garden, and bury those who die at the Infirmary.

The following is the full text of an order the court made in regard to working on the roads:

"Ordered by the court that hereafter ten hours shall constitute a day's work on the roads of this county, and that there shall be paid by the overseers of this county not to exceed $2,50 per day for each two-horse team and driver; and not to exceed $3,50 for each four-horse team and driver per day, and not to exceed $1 per day for each hand."

The county levy was fixed as follows: For county purposes, 5 cents on each $100 worth of taxable property and $1 50 on each poll; for road purposes, 10 cents on each $100 and $1 on each poll, over 18 and under 50, years of age.

County Clerk's claim of $12 allowed.

The Assessor was allowed $52 05 for listing 1,041 dogs, and $2 95 for listing 57 bitches.

C. C. Roberts was allowed a claim amounting to $170,68.

Delinquents were allowed the sheriff as follows: Tythes, 768; dogs, 240; bitches, 5.

The report of J. F. Blyth, keeper of the County Infirmary shows the expenses of that institution for last year to be $2,000 27, with an average of 34½ inmates, making the cost $58 per inmate.

Bradley & Gilberts' bill of $18 50 for three election booths for Petersburg precinct, was allowed. The booths originally purchased for that precinct were burnt with the building in which they were stored.

B. W. Adams was allowed $11 45.

C. L. Crisler, jailer, was allowed $115 35.

J. M. Lassing, Benj. Stephens and B. W. Adams were appointed a committee to settle with the sheriff.

WEYLER'S EDICT.

Owners, Managers and Overseers of Estates and Farms Must Prove Ownership or the Capacity in Which They Are Employed.

HAVANA, Jan. 7.—Another edict has been issued by Gen. Weyler by which all owners, managers and overseers of estates and farms in the provinces of Pinar del Rio, Havana and Matanzas, shall within eight days from the date of the edict appear before the mayors of the fortified towns nearest to their homes and prove their ownership of estates or the capacity in which they are employed thereon. Owners of estates will be required to show their receipts for the last taxes paid by them and statements will have to be made of the number of hands employed on each plantation. In all cases where the authorities discover any irregularities in these statements, the persons examined will be obliged to remove at once to the fortified towns nearest their homes. All foreign residents of the three provinces named who are employed in agricultural or industrial pursuits, either as owners, managers or overseers, must prove their nationality and furnish full information regarding the persons employed by them, exhibiting their police documents.

A party of insurgents, under command of the leader, Enrique Penalver, made an attack Tuesday night upon the town of Arroyo Narajo, near Havana. The garrison lost one sentinel killed.

The trial of the case of Louis Somillan, the naturalized American citizen who was arrested some time ago on the charge of being a rebel and conspiring against the Spanish government, has been set down for Friday next at noon. A largely attended meeting of merchants, planters and others was held Wednesday night in the Spanish casino, at which it was resolved to send a cable dispatch to the government at Madrid expressing the loyalty of those people and their regret at the attacks of the Madrid press upon Gen. Weyler.

BUTCHERIES

Of Cubans by the Orders of a Spanish Major—The Bodies of the Victims "Only Fit to Feed to Dogs."

HAVANA, Jan. 7.—Horrible details are now known in Havana of the assassinations last week at Gnanabacoa by order of the Spanish major, Fondeviels. The bodies of the young baseball players, Pastoriza, Para and Castillo, murdered by the troops without cause, were left to the dogs to be eaten. The mothers and sisters of the three unfortunate young men applied to Maj. Fondeviels, asking permission to bury the bodies. "Bodies of Cubans," answered Fondeviela, "are fit only to be fed to dogs."

About eighty Cuban families have fled from Guanabacoa to Havana, terrorized by the massacres and the present insecurity of life. Weyler does not pay the least attention to the charges made against Fondeviela, and merely says when he mentions him: "He is a good man, doing his duty and, like every one who does his duty, he is calumniated by the Cubans."

Arrests of Cubans are made daily in Havana, the charges being only that the victims sympathize with the revolution.

It is not true that Gen. Gomez has issued a proclamation ordering his troops to retaliate against Spanish barbarities. It is said here, however, that Gomez has written to Weyler, telling him that if the Spanish policy of assassination continues, and also the massacre of prisoners and wounded, he will be obliged to retaliate.

"Yours and only yours," says Gomez, "will be responsible for such barbarous warfare before history and humanity."

SILVER SPRINGS, N. Y., Jan. 7.—One hundred and six cars, loaded with 5,450,000 pounds of salt, left here Wednesday, consigned to New England firms. The throttle of the engine on the first section was opened and the train started by a unique electrical contrivance operated by wire by President-elect McKinley in his home in Canton. The train was the Worcester salt special, bearing a consignment of orders to New England which has been given contingent upon President McKinley's election. The vast shipment made up the finest freight train ever put together. The cars were handsomely decorated with tri-colored banners.

A big crowd was gathered about the train and as it started there was great cheering.

Tillman's Contested Election Case.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 7.—The notice of contest in the governorship election was filed Wednesday in the house of representatives. At the same time a bill was introduced by a democratic member which requires the contestee to give bond for $25,000 to defray the expenses of the contest. If this bill passes it may deter G. N. Tillman, late republican candidate for governor, from prosecuting his contest.

FIVE PERSONS

Murdered by Simon Cooper, Colored, Near Sumpter, S. C.

The Murderer Made His Escape But Three Posses Are Scouring the Country for the Wretch, and If Captured He Will Be Summarily Dealt With.

SUMPTER, S. C., Jan. 8.—All Sumpter was aroused Thursday over a report that Simon Cooper had killed old Mr. Bet. Wilson, his son Wesley, Mrs. Wesley Wilson and two Negroes—a man and a girl. Sheriff Pierson as soon as possible organized a posse and chartering a special train left for Lynchburg. The train was stopped at Maysville, near which point the Negro had been seen and a part of the posse left for St. Charles and the others took the public road coming towards Sumpter. These two parties, in conjunction with posses from Maysville, are scouring every foot of the land between Maysville and Sumpter. The facts in regard to the killing of five persons as received in Sumpter are as follows: Simon Cooper went to Lynchburg Wednesday evening for the purpose of forcing a young colored girl to marry him. The girl and her mother by some means escaped and ran into the swamp. As soon as possible after Cooper's appearance in the town a posse was organized and went in pursuit of him. The posse came within 200 yards of him at one time, when he shot at them and retreated. He forced some Negroes to go with him and kept them with him all night. He came out of the woods about daylight and went to the house of a Negro named Boyle, took his horse and compelled Boyle's son to accompany him. From there he went to the Wilsons, about a mile distant, where the crime was committed.

Mr. Baker, who lives near by, says he heard considerable shooting and saw Mrs. Wilson go to the buggy house with Cooper to get the harness and then go back into the house, Cooper following her. Cooper a short time afterward came out on the piazza, shooting in every direction, and forced Boyle's boy to harness their horse to Mr. Wilson's buggy. He got in the buggy and only went a few yards when he met a colored man named Smith. He killed him, and as he passed Backer's house shot at the latter's children, who were on the porch.

When the bodies of the Wilsons were found Thursday morning the old gentleman, 75 years old, was sitting up in bed with a shotgun in his hand, his son Wesley was in another bed his head split, while on the floor lay the body of the woman, her head mashed in and her throat cut. Smith, the Negro, who was killed on the road, was found with an ax still in the back of his neck and his head nearly severed from the body.

CRAZY OR SHAMMING.

A Prisoner in the Louisville Jail Claims to Be One of the Murderers of Frank P. Arbuckle.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 8.—Frederick Bauman, alias Wilson, confined in the county jail on the charge of forgery and obtaining money under false pretenses, claims to have been one of the murderers of Frank P. Arbuckle, of Denver, in New York, November 19. Bauman says his father is G. Edward Bauman, a banker at Dearborn and Monroe streets, Chicago. Bauman says his partner in crime was Dave Edmunds, an actor, who is now in Evanston, North Chicago.

The police discredit Bauman's story and say that he is either crazy or shamming.

A dispatch from Chicago says that nothing is known of Frederick Bauman alias Wilson there. The name of G. Edward Bauman who, the prisoner claims, is his father and is a banker in that city, does not appear either in the banking or city directories. Neither Bauman nor Edmunds is known in the theatrical profession.

THE OWNER

Of the Dauntless Applies for Clearance Papers to Go to Cuba With a Cargo of Arms and Ammunition—Refused.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 8.—Although the steam tug Dauntless is in custody of an officer of the revenue cutter Boutwell as a result of her last trip, from which she returned Monday night, her owner Thursday morning applied for clearance papers for the steamer to go to Nuevitas, Cuba, with a cargo of arms and ammunition.

Deputy Collector Hopkins, who is in charge of the office during the absence of Collector Bisbee, refused to grant the clearance until authorized to do so by the secretary of the treasury. Secretary Carlisle has ordered the collector to refuse clearance until further orders. The officers of the Dauntless still deny that they have been to Cuba. All that can be gotten from them is that they transferred the men and cargo taken from No Namo Key to another vessel, presumably the Bermuda.

SIMON COOPER,

The Negro Outlaw, Captured and Hanged to a Tree by a Mob.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Jan. 9.—Simon Cooper, betrayed by his half brother and uncle, was located in his uncle's house, five miles from Sumpter, early Friday morning and the building surrounded by a posse of 20 men under Sheriff Pierson, of Sumpter. Cooper kept the men at a safe distance with a Winchester rifle, none dared to rush on what seemed certain death. The sheriff telegraphed the conditions to the governor and asked that a cannon with solid shot and supply of long range rifles be sent to him on a special train. Gov. Evans replied that no cannon was available and ordered Cooper's capture dead or alive. Balked in this, the sheriff got a cannon in Sumpter, but while it was being conveyed to the seat of war Cooper was killed. It seems that under protection of another house some members of the posse got within a short distance of where Cooper was and, kept up a hot fire.

He hailed them and offered to talk. One of their members told him it would be best to give himself up, but he blasphemed terribly at the suggestion. He was told if he came out unarmed with his hands up he would not be killed. Finally Cooper did come out. One member of the posse keeping him covered, walked up and took hold of him. The others then surrounded the Negro who began to resist. Then he was shot in the head with a pistol and afterwards with a rifle. He fell, but regained consciousness and kept up his cursing. It was suggested to burn him, but the half dead man was started for Sumpter. On the road, the posse, which had assumed the proportions of a mob, tied the officers of the law, hauled Cooper out of the cart in which he was and strung him up to a tree, riddling him with bullet

FOR CONTEMPT.

Millionaire Stensland and George H. Schilling Found Guilty by the Court.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—P. O. Stensland, the Milwaukee avenue banker and George A. Schilling were found guilty of contempt by Judge Haney Friday for refusing to turn over the assets of the International Building, Loan and Investment Co., which they held in their possession as receivers, to Thos. Bradwell and James Furlong, who were appointed receivers by the court a few days ago. Stensland was fined $7,901.16, the amount he is alleged to have withheld, and Schilling was ordered to turn over the keys to the deposit vaults, which contain the assets of the above company. Failing to comply with the court's orders, they were taken to the county jail, but were afterwards released on their own recognizance.

One Man Dead, Two Dying and Five Others Badly Carved In a Drunken Brawl.

SCRANTON, Pa., Jan. 9.—A free fight followed an Hungarian christening at the house of Tucetz Krutchan, in Mayfield, this county, Wednesday, as the result of which one man is dead, two dying and five others are badly carved. Strong liquor flowed freely and many of the men were mad with drink. The drink-maddened men continued stabbing each other until a constable and a posse broke into the house. A physician was hastily summoned. Krutchan was so terribly cut that he died in a short while. The injuries of the other men show the savage nature of the fight. The men are under guard in the hospital and an investigation of the affair is being held.

GOMEZ RETALIATES.

The 114 Men of the Garrison Captured Near Moron Were Notified

That According to Spain's Precedent They Should Prepare to Meet Their God—In Squads of 25 They Were Then Shot to Death.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 8.—The Constitution has a dispatch from Key West saying that Gen. Gomez has begun work of reprisal against Spaniards. In an attack upon the central trocha near Moron he captured the Spanish garrison at Iago Aville, 114 men. They were notified that according to the precedent set by their own government they should prepare to meet their God. They were given an opportunity of writing messages to their friends in Spain and then in groups of 25 they were shot to death.

Weyler's announcement of pacification of Pinar del Rio does not stand. He left over 3,000 insurgents in the province. He took additional soldiers from the military cordon to Havana to demonstrate that there were no insurgents there, when, as soon as he removed them, Cuban Gens. Raoul, Arnago and Castillo marched into the province of Pinar del Rio with 3,000 men to reinforce the 3,000 already there. This all goes to prove how much dependence can be placed in the statements of Weyler as to the attitude of the Cubans. They are not afraid of the Spanish, and not one man has surrendered in the province of Pinar del Rio.

The Spanish have recently established a military zone around the city of Havana, inclosing a space of five miles on all sides, for the purpose of cultivating for the sustenance of the people of that city, which shows still further to what ends they are driven and how little sympathy and support they can depend upon from the surrounding country; also that they are daily losing ground and so hard pressed are they that that is all that they can call their own, and that has to be maintained by a military cordon from the attacks of the insurgents.

MADRID, Jan. 8.—An official dispatch from Havana states that Capt. Gen. Weyler will turn over the military operations in the province of Pinar del Rio to another commander, while he himself will direct decisive operations against the rebels in the provinces of Havana and Matanzas. It is also stated that he has given permission to the sugar planters to resume work on their estates.

JACKSON DAY.

Hon. Wm. J. Bryan, the Guest of the Bryan League, Chicago, at a Banquet.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—Wm. J. Bryan was the guest of the Bryan League at a big banquet given Thursday night at the Tremont house in celebration of the anniversary of Andrew Jackson's birth. Four hundred democrats who believed in the Chicago platform assembled in the large dining hall. With a few exceptions they were residents of Chicago. Their enthusiasm when the name of Mr. Bryan was mentioned was unbounded and a flattering display of admiration followed his rising to speak to the toast "Andrew Jackson." To a man each banqueter arose and waived anything available, accompanying the demonstration with vociferous cheers of "Bryan." The late candidate of his party was fully at his ease and although tired from his long travel and day's work of receiving friends, he met all expectations when he spoke.

The decorations of the hall consisted of a liberal draping of American flags, with crayon pictures of Mr. Bryan, Mr. Sewall and Jefferson, but none of Jackson. For nearly two hours before the procession to the banquet hall was formed Mr. Bryan held a reception in the parlors of the hotel. He had previously spent several hours with his publishers and remained seated in an easy chair while a line of admiring democrats filed past him and shook his hand. It was originally intended to have the banquet on Friday, which is the actual Jackson day anniversary, but Mr. Bryan had received a previous invitation to attend a banquet in Omaha that night and he accepted, giving Thursday night to the Chicago democrats.

The speech making began after midnight purposely.

United States Senator Dubois, of Idaho, was expected, but his fight for another term in the senate prevented his attendance. Hon. John W. Tomlinson, of Alabama, spoke with typical southern eloquence and fervor to the toast "Memories of Heroic Conduct."

Ex-Postmaster R. M. Ridgeley, of Springfield, Ill., who was dismissed from his office by President Cleveland for officious partisanship in advocating free silver, spoke pointedly about civil service reform.

George W. Ambrose, of Omaha, spoke of the "Past and Future of Allied Silver Forces."

The concluding address was delivered by Gov. John P. Altgeld, of Illinois, on "The Character and Mission of a Minority Party."

Mr. Bryan left for Omaha at 2:45 a. m. Friday on the Northwestern fast mail.

EXPRESSED AN OPINION.

What a Countryman Thought of the Work of a Physician.

One of the most prominent physicians in Washington owns a farm somewhere in New England, and whenever he gets unbearably tired of his fashionable patients in town he goes there, puts on his oldest clothes, lays in a stock of corncob pipes and rusticates. One day last summer, says the Washington Post, he was jogging lazily along a country road in a rickety old cart drawn by a horse almost as rickety. A countryman walking on the same road asked for a lift and the two fell into conversation.

"Who are you working for?" asked the countryman.

"Oh, I'm working for Dr. J——, down there," answered the physician.

"What doin'?"

"Oh," went on the doctor. "I do everything for him. I take care of him, you know. I dress him and I feed him, and I even wash his face and put him to bed. I do everything he needs done."

"How much do you get for it?" asked the native.

"My board and clothes."

"An' you do all that for him—wash him, an' dress him, an' feed him, an' all that?"

"Yes."

The countryman looked at the doctor a moment in silence. Then he leaned over the wheel and spat solemnly.

"Well, of all the dern fools I ever see!" was all he said.

Out into the Darkness.

What mother would turn her young daughter out alone unprotected into the stormy night? Yet many loving mothers allow their daughters, who are just coming into the time of womanhood, to proceed without proper care and advice all unprotected and alone into the perils of this critical period.

Young women at this time often suffer from irregularity and weakness which may afterwards develop into dangerous disease and fill their whole lives with wretchedness.

It is a mother's duty not to pass over such matters in silence, but to promote her daughter's womanly health and regularity by every reasonable means.

These delicate ailments are easily overcome in their early stages by judicious self-treatment without any need of the obnoxious examinations which doctors uniformly insist upon. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive specific for all diseases of the feminine organism.

It restores perfect health and regularity to the special functions, and vital vigor to the nerve-centres. It is the only medicine of its kind devised for this one purpose by an educated, experienced physician.

During nearly 30 years as chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., Dr. Pierce has acquired an enviable reputation. His medicines are everywhere recognized as standard remedies. His "Golden Medical Discovery" alternated with the "Favorite Prescription" constitutes a thorough and scientific course of treatment for weak and impoverished conditions of the blood.

THE CONGRESS.

It is Believed the Pacific Railway Bill Will Be Defeated.

The Nicaragua Canal Bill Will Not Be Passed by the Present Congress.

Senators Awaiting the Return of Mr. Cameron—There Does Not Appear to Be Any Def...te Push His Resolutions Recognizing Cuba.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—Voting upon the Pacific railroad funding bill and amendments will occupy the house Monday. The vote is likely to be close but it is believed the bill will be defeated. For the remainder of the week appropriation bills will probably have the right of way. The managers of the house are determined that no measures imposing additional charges either upon the credit or the revenues of the government shall receive consideration at this session if they can prevent it. The Nicaragua canal bill and several other propositions involving financial responsibilities may therefore be considered dead so far as this congress is concerned.

On Saturday afternoon the house will constructively listen to eulogies upon the late Speaker Crisp, of Georgia.

In the senate Monday Mr. Mills, of Texas, is booked for a speech on Cuba. His text will be the resolution he introduced a few days ago recognizing the independence of the republic of Cuba, declaring it to be the duty of the executive to act in harmony with congress in recognizing a new state and appropriating a sum sufficient to pay a diplomatic representative to the republic when the president shall have appointed one. The extreme position taken by Mr. Mills leads to the belief that his speech may be, to some extent, sensational, and that his criticism of the attitude of Mr. Olney may be severe.

Senators are awaiting the return to the city of Cameron, who is in charge of the Cuban question. There does not appear to be any desire just now to push the recognition resolutions.

Mr. Proctor, of Vermont, has given notice that Monday he will address the senate on his resolution for a constitutional amendment, making the presidential office a six-year term and the occupant ineligible for two terms in succession; also making the terms of members of congress three instead of two years.

Early in the week the attempt will be made to secure a vote on the Oklahoma free homestead bill, and when that is out of the way the senate's Pacific railroad refunding bill may be taken up, unless the house shows such hostility to Pacific railroad legislation as to make the attempt hopeless.

No little interest is being manifested in the forthcoming national congress of mothers, which will assemble in this city on February 17 next. Several ladies, active in the movement, having in view the education of children, will be prominent in the congress, among them being Mrs. Alalie Hofer, editor of the Kindergarten magazine; Mrs. Sangster, editor of Harper's Bazaar; Miss Anna Schrieve, State Normal school, Michigan; Miss Frances Newton, superintendent of kindergarten works, Chautauqua, and others. Leading measures that will engage the attention of the congress will be those of inculcating into the minds of children principles of patriotism and humanity, the development of all qualities tending to ennoble the minds of the young and pure, and thorough mental training generally. The first meeting of the congress, which will open at the Arlington hotel on that date, previously mentioned, will be followed immediately after its organization by a reception to the congress by Mrs. Cleveland, which will be given at 11 o'clock a. m.

In addition to the ladies several gentlemen interested in the cause will attend the congress. Among them will be Anthony Comstock, Mr. Hamilton Marble and Frank Hamilton Cushing.

THE CAPITAL.

The House Wants Information on the Chicago Railway Strike—Further Consideration of the Pacific Railroad Funding Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Upon request of Mr. Turner (dem., Ga.) a resolution was agreed to instructing the attorney general to add to his last annual report full copies of all correspondence and the telegrams between the department and public officers, and all persons relative to the great railroad strike in Chicago in 1894, and the action of the government in suppressing same. The house then went into committee of the whole to further consider the Pacific railroads funding bill.

Mr. Patterson (dem., Tenn.) opened the day's proceedings in a brief speech supporting the bill. Mr. Harrison (dem., Ala.) then followed in opposition.

American Mediation for Cuba.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Secretary of State Olney has received a dispatch from American Minister Hannis Taylor in Madrid announcing that Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs Duke Tetuan had formally invited him to give an opinion of the Porto Rico reforms as a practical measure of self-government for Cuba. Taylor declared the scheme to be worthless and the reforms too vague to inspire confidence in America. Taylor urged the Spanish government to grant full local self-government to Cuba, coupled with economic reforms, as a basis for negotiating peace. Secretary Olney is delighted at the news that Spain had at last officially recognized the consultative rights of the American government in the settlement of the Cuban war.

After a conference with Cleveland Olney cabled to Minister Taylor: "Your opinions emphatically indorsed." He instructed the minister to urge upon the Spanish government the necessity for prompt action.

Ray's Contempt Bill Indorsed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—The bill limiting the power of judges to punish for contempts of court which Representative Ray, of New York, framed as a substitute for a bill passed by the senate last session, was noted upon favorably by the house committee on judiciary Friday. By a vote of 8 to 4 the committee decided to report favorably the bill to the house. Those voting for it were: Republicans—Henderson, of Iowa; Ray, of New York; Broderick, of Kansas; Updegraff, of Iowa; Gillett, of Massachusetts; Connelly, of Illinois; Burton, of Missouri. Democrats—Miles, of Maryland. Those voting against: Republican—Baker, of New Hampshire. Democrats—Culberson, of Texas; Terry, of Arkansas; De Armond, of Missouri.

American Seamen.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—American war ships can at least be manned by American seamen as demonstrated in the case of the Brooklyn, which has just been made ready for sea at Philadelphia. Secretary Herbert announced that a report from commander Cooke, commanding the vessel, showing in the complement of that vessel 401 sailors were enlisted, of whom but 13 were aliens. This proportion is insignificant compared with that of other war ships hertofore commissioned, and it is believed that in a short time it will be possible in the navy to "put none but Americans on guard."

Glassblowers Heard.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—The schedule of the tariff inelnding earthenware, glassware, marble and stone brought fewer business men to the ways and means committee than had the other schedules considered this week. F. W. Walker, of Beaver Falls, Pa., spoke on tiles, asking for a reclassification and specific duties. There was a large delegation of glass blowers, representing the workmen of the United States in the committee room. For them Louis Arrington, of Alton, Ill., announced that they desired the re-enactment of the McKinley rates.

Newport's New Postmaster.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Acting Postmaster Shanks, of Newport, Ky., was at the capitol Friday and leaves for home Friday, having laid his case before the postmaster general. Congressman Berry filed all the papers in favor of Mr. Shanks for postmaster, and Mr. Wilson promised to take up the nomination this week.

To Blockade Charleston Harbor.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Adm. Bunce's squadron of evolution is to blockade Charleston, S. C., early in February. The scheme involves the maintenance of a strong blockading fleet off Charleston harbor and the assignment of one or more fast vessels, including the Vesuvius, to duty as blockade runners. Stores and coal will be massed at Port Royal as a base for the smaller blockading cruisers, but the battleships and perhaps the big cruisers will have to take turns going to Hampton roads for supplies unless it proves feasible to serve them on the high seas. The fleet will be the most powerful gathered in recent years including the battle ships Massachusetts, Indiana, Maine and Texas; the cruisers New York, Brooklyn, Columbia, Newark, Raleigh, Montgomery, Marblehead and Castine; the ram Katahdin; the monitors Puritan and Amphitrite; the torpedo boats Cushing and Ericsson; the dispatch boats Dolphin and Vesuvius, and the transport Fern.

EXECUTED.

Robt. Laughlin, Double Murderer, Hanged at Brookville.

The Mob Tore Down the Inclosure Surrounding the Scaffold.

The Trap Was Sprung at 9:59 Saturday Morning and Laughlin Died Almost Instantly—Sent a Half Dollar to Walling and His Good Will to Jackson.

BROOKVILLE, Ky., via Augusta, Ky., Jan. 11.—The law of Kentucky was fulfilled when Robert Laughlin was hanged Saturday morning. The trap was sprung at 9:29 o'clock. The crowd which had gathered to see the execution, tore down the high board inclosure about the scaffold before Laughlin came from the jail, and there was much excitement. No one was hurt. Laughlin died almost instantly. In 10 minutes Drs. Bradford and Wallin allowed the body to be cut down. It was placed on a stretcher and taken to the place of burial.

A number of people whose names are well known were present. Sheriff Jule Plummer was with a party made up of Jailer Bitzer, of Newport, and Fred Maurer, city turnkey of Covington, George Cook, of Avondale, was with a party from Cincinnati.

Fred Maurer, of Covington, called on Laughlin just before Sheriff Hook appeared with the death warrant. Laughlin told Maurer that he felt all right and that he had rested well.

"Give Jackson and Walling my regards and tell them I wish them luck," the doomed man said.

Then he reached down into his pockets, and pulling out a 50-cent piece, he said: "Here, Fred, here is the last money I own in this world. Give it to Walling, and tell him that I hope that it will do him some good."

Sheriff Hook entered Laughlin's cell at 8:30 o'clock, and by the flickering rays of an oil lamp he read the death warrant. Laughlin said nothing. Just before the last word was spoken, Laughlin's attorney, Judge Donaphin, entered at the prisoner's request and accepted a letter that was prepared for him by Laughlin.

It read: "To my lawyer," and then followed Laughlin's thanks and his assurance that he felt that all that could be done was done.

AUGUSTA, Ky., Jan. 11.—The last scene in the Bob Laughlin tragedy was enacted Sunday afternoon when in the presence of a large concourse of people the body of the double murderer was buried in a grave which was dug in one corner of the stable lot. The relatives made several efforts to bury him in a place in a regular graveyard, but none would have it. Laughlin's old mother was carried by tender hands from her sick bed to view the body. The shock, it is thought, will kill her.

THE DAUNTLESS' TRIP

Was One on an Errand of Mercy Rather Than a Filibustering Expedition.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 11.—The official report of Capt. John W. Myers, of the steamer Dauntless, regarding the last trip of the vessel, was completed Saturday and forwarded by the collector of customs to the secretary of the treasury. In this report Capt. Myers gives a detailed account of the trip. He tells all about finding the men left on No Name Key by the steamer Three Friends and of taking the men off the Key and transferring them to another steamer. As the report shows that the Dauntless was on errand of mercy rather than a filibustering expedition, it is very probable that the vessel will not be libeled for any violation of the neutrality or navigation laws.

W. A. Bisbee, the owner of the vessel, is anxious to secure clearance for the vessel for the port of Neuvitas, Cuba, as he has a contract to deliver a cargo of arms and ammunition at that port.

TURKISH AUTHORITIES

Intervened in the Fight Between the Roman Catholic and Orthodox Greek Churches in Jerusalem.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 11.—Official advices received here from Jerusalem show that there has been further trouble among the worshipers at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre. It appears that the Roman Catholics were opposed to members of the Orthodox Greek church entering the church by a certain door on the eve of January 6, the day observed by the orthodox church as Christmas. The latter insisted upon their right to enter and the result was that the two factions became involved in a serious fight, which did not end until the Turkish authorities intervened to restore order. Some of the combatants were badly injured, but it is not known whether anybody was killed.

More Spanish Atrocities.

TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 11.—Advices from Havana, per steamer Olivette, tell of renewed butcheries of Cubans by Spaniards. It is asserted that Thursday night at Guanabacoa Spanish troops under Col. Fondevicla killed 30 men, women and children and burned many houses. In Pinar del Rio Spanish troops are accused of ravishing many Cuban girls.

Employment for Idle Men.

JOHNSON, Pa., Jan. 11.—The Cambria Rail Mill No. 1, the 12 and 16-inch mills and the scrap mill resumed operations Monday, giving employment to many idle men. The Cambria steel mill was put in blast Sunday night. Two hundred men went to work Monday morning at the Johnson Co. steel motor works.

Post Office Robbery.

BRINNAWR, Pa., Jan. 11.—The post office, which is located in the railroad station, was robbed of $2,000 in cash and $75 worth of stamps. The work was done by some one familiar with the office, and the combination was worked and the safe opened in the regular way.

TRUSTS AND PROTECTION.

The Star Feature of the Proposed Republican Tariff Law.

The Buffalo Courier quotes Senator Sherman as saying, once upon a time, to the body of which he is a distinguished member: "The primary object of a protective tariff is to invite the fullest competition by individuals and corporations in domestic production. If such individuals or corporations combine to advance the price of the domestic product and to prevent the free result of open and fair competition, I would, without a moment's hesitation, reduce the duties on foreign goods competing with them, in order to break down the combination. Whenever free competition is evaded or avoided by combinations of individuals or corporations the duty should be reduced and foreign competition should promptly be invited." The Courier says that "opportunity for putting this principle to a practical test will soon be presented to Senator Sherman and the republican leaders," and it asks: "What will they do about it?"

The public was treated not long ago to an exploitation of the theory that there is nothing in the protective policy to make it helpful to the trusts, and that the republican party could, therefore, provide no tariff that would invite condemnation on the ground that it catered to monopolistic combinations. Senator Sherman appears to hold a very different opinion on this subject, however, and the senator is a man whose opinions are regarded by republicans as amounting to something. Mr. Sherman understands how easy it is for the trusts to use the protective system to their exclusive advantage, and he has let it be known that when they so use it he would put a spoke in their wheel by reducing the protection under which they operate. He explained that this reduction would have the effect of letting in foreign competition, against which the trusts are practically helpless.

A great deal was said during the late campaign about Maj. McKinley's silence on the subject of trusts, but all the talk that was indulged in did not have the effect of inducing the major to break that silence. Chairman Dingley now says that protection will be the star feature of the proposed tariff law, in relation to which hearings have begun to be given to interested parties. In view of one thing and another, it is probably reasonable to expect that the trusts will be competently represented at those hearings, and that they will make a powerful plea for the kind of protection they can use to advantage in their business. And still returning prosperity lags.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

MR. BRYAN'S RETIREMENT.

Motives of Modesty and Manliness Prompted the Move.

According to a dispatch from Omaha Mr. Bryan had good and sufficient cause to cancel his contract and withdraw from the lecture course which had been announced. It appears that Mr. Bryan wanted his tour to be conducted with the greatest modesty, the advertising in the newspapers and by bill posters to be of the most unostentatious description. Indeed this had been stipulated in the contract, but when Mr. Bryan arrived in Atlanta he was horrified to find that his ideas of simplicity and dignity were far removed from those of the syndicate which had charge of his tour. It is to be inferred from the Omaha dispatch that the posters announcing the lecture were of the same retiring modesty which characterized the mammoth sheets of many colors with which the Hanna syndicate announced the "Advance Agent of Prosperity" on the walls of all the towns of the country last summer—a kind of flaming circus-poster style. When Mr. Bryan saw himself thus pictured in all the colors of the rainbow standing in a group with Washington and Lincoln ornamented with flaming eagles and "E Pluribus Unum" in gaudy colored letters, he realized that he had been calused, and that the syndicate intended to force him into a vulgar notoriety, and keep him there as long as it paid. And although he was received by the people with immense enthusiasm, and greeted by an audience limited only by the capacity of the hall, he decided he could not in justice to his sense of propriety acquiesce in the style of advertising adopted. It is to Mr. Bryan's credit that he at once dissolved his relations with his managers, returned to them the sum of $10,000 which he had been paid in advance for ten lectures and retired from the compact with his managers with his dignity and self-respect in his own keeping, and not at the mercy of a syndicate which was speculating on his reputation.—Illinois State Register.

——To the horde of tariff robbers now besieging the ways and means committee the shoe manufacturers of Massachusetts present a startling contrast. By means of better workmanship American shoes lead the world. The ugly, clumsy, ill-made footgear of foreigners stands no show against the trim elegance combined with durability which distinguishes the American product. The export trade is large and steady, and the manufacturers, instead of petitioning for higher tariffs, ask that sole leather be placed upon the free list, that American-made shoes may be produced at a still lower cost for American wearers and the export trade be still further increased.—Chicago Chronicle.

——The ways and means committee may go ahead with its tariff hearings, but those interests which expect to be favored in the new law will do well to see Mr. Hanna as soon as possible.—Washington Post.

——Defeat has its compensations. Mr. Bryan can't be charged with responsibility for the dismal failure of the prosperity performance.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

FACTS AGAINST PROTECTION.

Republicans in Favor of a License to Rob the Consumer.

Secretary Carlisle in his annual report states the proposition that "a large and continuous export of a particular class of articles proves an ability to manufacture as cheaply as any foreign competing nation."

There is no denying the truth of this proposition. Manufacturers of cotton goods, for instance, may export at a loss for one year, or may be two years, in order to prevent a breakdown in home high tariff prices. But they will not go on exporting at a loss any great length of time. Rather than make a sacrifice continuously they will curtail production. Therefore the fact of continued and increasing exportations conclusively proves the ability of our manufacturers to hold the home market without the help of congress.

The fact is proof conclusive that tariff protection upon an article which is largely, continuously and increasingly exported is merely a device which enables an American manufacturer to extort more from his own countrymen than he is perfectly willing to accept from the people of other countries.

The fact of continuous exportation in open competition against manufacturers the world over is proof conclusive of extortion and an abominable wrong of which deluded and too compliant Americans are the victims.

Here is a case in point: The producers of pig iron in Alabama are shipping large quantities to Liverpool. They do not pretend that they are shipping at a loss. The fact that they are doing this business proves that they are able to compete against the world. It proves that the duty on pig iron enables them to get from their own countrymen more than they are glad to take from Englishmen.

There can be no excuse for the protection of an industry which demonstrates its abundant ability to take care of itself by selling its product in the world's market, where it has no protection. Mr. Dingley's committee can find no reasonable excuse for increasing the duty on pig iron or iron ore or iron in any of its more advanced forms.

And what is true of iron is true of other things. There can be found no reasonable excuse for compelling consumers of woolen goods or crockery or glass or lumber to pay higher prices for these things. The producers can compete against all the world, not in spite of the high wages they pay, but because they get more product for every dollar of wages they pay than any other producers of like articles in the world. Those who clamor for more protection clamor for nothing but license to rob.—Chicago Chronicle.

PROTECTING FAVORITES.

Republican Methods of Taking Care of Capitalists.

It is not at all surprising to learn that most of the men who appear before the ways and means committee to make recommendations respecting the tariff are asking higher rates of protection for their own individual interests. This is what various manufacturers and producers have been doing ever since congress began to grope with the tariff question.

The spectacle is no whit more tolerable than it was years ago, however, and gives an extremely unpleasant suggestion as to why some men have so assiduously worked for a congress easily disposed to a general high plane of tariff duties. Some of the articles for which protection is asked are so free from foreign competition that the requests are bald impudence. Yet they are heard, and, to some extent, at least, heeded.

If the leaders in the house and the members of the ways and means committee are sincerely devoted to their party—to say nothing of the claims of their country—they will accord scant satisfaction to the demands of selfishness. The elections of the last eight years have shown how quick the American people can be in rebuking unpatriotic legislation. Unjustifiable "protective" schedules will be quickly detected and their authors held to severe account. The republican leaders in the house should take fair warning that if the forthcoming tariff measures savor of favoritism to special interests the new tariff will merely provoke another period of agitation and prove a stumbling block to the republicans who may want to get back to office later on.—Chicago Record (Ind.).

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

——The republicans are determined to take the currency out of the hands of the people.—Kansas City Times.

——March 4 next will be a very important occasion. Mark Hanna will be inducted into office on that date.—Chicago Record (Ind.).

——If Maj. McKinley were subject to the usual conditions which affect advance agents he would have to count the ties to Washington.—St. Louis Republic.

——If you want your Uncle Sam to protect you from competition and give you a lot of money which does not belong to you and which you never earned, go to Washington and demand a "hearing" of the ways and means committee. That is what the committee is for—so it seems.—Sioux City Tribune.

——So long as the republican party can stand for protection and still win victories we shall have such spectacles as that now disgracing the republic at Washington. There is no cure for the robbery and scandal short of republican defeat, for protection has come to be synonyme for republicanism.—N. Y. Journal.

——Revision of the tariff is a very solemn business. Nobody can guess where tariff tinkering is going to lead to when the business is taken up. Already there are indications that the gentlemen who have been invited to make themselves heard before the committee on ways and means have more thought of higher prices for their goods than of revenue necessities and general business advancement.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

FIFTY-FOURTH CONGRESS

Second Session.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—SENATE—There were, as shown by a call of the senate, 49 senators present Tuesday only four more than the number necessary to constitute a quorum. The proceedings were as unimportant as they were uninteresting. Mr. Peffer (pop., Kas.), read a speech in favor of a joint resolution introduced by him on the 14th of December for the appointment of a national monetary commission to examine and study the general subject of finances in its practical relations to the business affairs of the people of the United States. After Mr. Peffer's speech the joint resolution was on motion referred to the committee on finance. A memorial was presented from the Massachusetts Historical society for the repair and preservation of the famous old frigate Constitution as a naval museum, just as Nelson's battleship Victoria is preserved at Portsmouth. A joint resolution was introduced by Mr. Call (dem., Fla.) instructing the president to demand the "immediate release" of Julio Sanguilly, condemned to perpetual imprisonment for his connection with the Cuban insurrection. The matter went over until Wednesday, when Mr. Call is to address the senate upon it. At 2:20 o'clock the senate adjourned until Wednesday.

HOUSE—Only about half the members of the house were in their seats Tuesday when that body was called to order after the holiday recess and entered upon the work of the week of the last session of the Fifty-fourth congress. A resolution introduced by Mr. Broderick (rep., Kas.) was agreed to, calling upon the secretary of the interior to report to the house the reason why patents for lands in Kansas granted to the old Kansas Pacific Railroad Co. had not been patented to the company and why homestead entries upon them were being permitted to be made by the officers of the Topeka land district. By the terms of the order adopted December 19 the house received itself into committee of the whole to consider the Loud bill to amend the postal laws by excluding "sample copies" and serial novel publications from second-class mail matter which is the flower of the weed of the day. The passage of the bill was advocated by Messrs. Kyle (dem., Miss.), Burton and Bromwell (reps., O.) and Ogden (dem., La.), and opposed by Messrs. Quigg (rep., N. Y.), Johnson (rep., Cal.) and Cummings (N. Y.).

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—SENATE—Senate bill to amend the act repealing the timber culture law was passed Wednesday. Also the house bill for the appointment by brevet of active or retired officers of the army. The senate joint resolution requesting the government of Spain to release Julio Sanguilly was referred. The house bill providing for free homesteads on the public lands in Oklahoma territory, amended so as to apply to all lands obtained from Indians, was taken up as the unfinished business and was discussed for nearly two hours, and went over until Thursday without action. At 4 p. m. the senate adjourned until Thursday.

HOUSE—After two days' debate the house Wednesday afternoon, by a vote of 144 to 100, passed the bill introduced by Mr. Loud, chairman of the committee on post offices and post roads, to amend the laws relating to second-class matter. The principal features of the bill were those relating to sample copies, send-class matter, sample copies of newspapers and serial novel publications, and withdrawing from news agents the privilege of returning to their principals at the pound rate unsold copies of periodicals. Immediately after the reading of the journal, Mr. Grosvenor (rep., O.) addressed the house on a question of personal privilege. He called attention to the fact that a resolution introduced by him and adopted by the house June 3 last, calling upon the heads of the executive departments at Washington to report to the house the operation of the civil service law, had as yet received no response from any one of the cabinet officers. He felt justified, he said, in raising the question whether or not congress had been properly treated in this regard, expressing the opinion that this silence of seven months showed that the heads of the several departments as well as the executive himself, had begun to ignore the demands of congress. A resolution, asking each cabinet officer to inform the house by no response had been made to the original resolution, was agreed to without division.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8. SENATE.—A joint resolution was introduced by Mr. Mills (dem., Tex.) declaring that the action of congress recognizing the independence of a foreign government belongs to congress, and that the president shall act in harmony with congress; also declaring that the independence of Cuba ought to be and is hereby recognized," and appropriating $10,000 for the salary and expenses of a minister to the government of Cuba. A resolution was offered by Mr. Morgan and agreed to, directing the committee on expenditures in the executive department to inquire into the circumstances of the abstraction of certain papers as to Pacific railroad matters from the files in the treasury department. A substitute was passed for the house bill of last session to amend the laws relative to navigation, and a substitute for another house bill to amend the laws relating to American seamen were discussed up to adjournment. Adjourned to Monday next.

HOUSE—Thursday, under the terms of the order passed last month, entered upon the discussion of the Pacific railroad refunding bill. Mr. Powers (rep., Vt.) chairman of the committee, and Mr. Grow (rep., Pa.) supported the measure and Messrs. Hubbard (rep., Mo.) and Bell (dem., Tex.) opposed it. The latter and Mr. Harrison (dem., Ala.) each presented a substitute for this committee measure, which announcement that it would be formally offered for consideration at the proper time. The general debate will be continued Friday, and on Saturday the bill will be open to amendment. A vote on its passage will be taken Monday next. A bill was passed providing for the appointing of a surveyor-general of Alaska at $3,000 a year.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—SENATE—No in session.

HOUSE—The second day's discussion of the Pacific railroad refunding bill of the house of representatives developed much more interest from a popular point of view. Mr. Johnson (rep., California) opened a speech supporting the bill alluded to Mr. W. R. Hearst, of the San Francisco Examiner and the New York Journal in most vituperative terms. In answer to Mr. Cooper (rep., Wis.), who characterized the incident as the most disgraceful he had ever known in the history of the congress. The bill was opposed by Messrs. Harrison (dem., Ala.) Poutney (dem., La.), Swanson (dem., Va.), McCall (rep., Mass.) and Bell (pop., Col.). A resolution was agreed to directing the attorney general to furnish in any case to the house report the correspondence in the department of justice upon the great railroad strike of Chicago in 1894. The house at 5 p. m. under the rules took a recess until 8 o'clock, the evening session to be devoted to private pension bills. The evening session was rendered of no avail Friday night by absenteeism. Adjourned until Saturday.

FROM GRANT COUNTY.

[Courier]

A gang of horse thieves seem to be operating in Grant county. There is hardly a week that passes that one or more horses are not stolen from some part of the county. To cover up their traces so well there must be several in the gang and some of them must live in this part of the country and know the roads and locate the horses. One night, a couple of weeks ago, five horses were stolen from one neighborhood in the western part of the county and almost every week some one loses a horse from the neighborhood of town. The last to suffer at this place is Mr. J. D. Doubman, who lives about a mile north of town. One night last week some one stole a good horse from his barn, and while he could track the horse for a considerable distance, he has not been able to recover it. Usually the thieves either take a buggy or a saddle from the same neighborhood from which they get the horse. They are growing bold and desperate. It has been but a few weeks ago when one of them with a stolen mule came into Williamstown as early as 9 o'clock at night and boldly, under the street light and while the family were up and almost watching him, hooked up to Dr. J. T. Scott's buggy and drove off. The man, the mule and the buggy disappeared as completely as though swallowed up by the ground. Where this thing is going to end we can not tell. The patience of a long suffering and honest people is being taxed to the uttermost and there may be another neck-tie party in the good old county of Grant one of these days if a horse thief is taken red-handed with his plunder.

THE MAN IN THE TRAIN.

The northern express was about to leave the Tedcroft Junction when two girls rushed into the station. They had just time to hurry into the first carriage at hand and have their bags and rugs bundled in after them, when the whistle sounded and the train started.

"How I hate a rush!" exclaimed Angela Trevor, the elder of the two sisters, a handsome, resolute-looking girl, as she sank breathless into her place. "It is so upsetting to one's nerves."

"Disarranges one's clothes, too," added Molly.

"To think of our not having had time to select a carriage for such a long journey!" said Angela.

Both glanced involuntarily to the other end of the carriage, where their one fellow traveler sat in the corner seat on the same side with Angela. His head and face were hidden from view by the ample pages of the Times spread out before him. Two long, tweed-clad legs were stretched out, finished with flattish feet in well-finished boots. At the side glimpses showed of a shoulder, an arm, and a thin, nervous-looking hand.

"Undeniably a gentleman," said Angela, with decision. "He has a good tailor, and his boots are unexceptional."

The girls settled down for the journey, extracting from among the surrounding impedimenta the usual literary solaces in the way of newspapers and vividly-bound books. First, however, they talked over in low tones the visit on which they were going in Yorkshire. Their hostess was a friend and contemporary, who had lately married the squire of Mapledene. The girls were full of excitement, surmise and pleasant anticipations regarding the visit to their friend in her new place and position. It was some time before the flow of conversation ceased, and they took up their books. Angela was soon engaged in following the unwholesome career of a modern heroine through all its risky intricacies. Mollie had chanced on a volume of short stories, plainly inspired by the triumphs of Sherlock Holmes. They were full of ghastly adventures with criminals and lunatics; the situations, though infinite in variety, were all alike thrilling and blood-curdling. Mollie's youthful imagination took fire; one story, an adventure with a lunatic in a railway carriage, especially excited her. It was not a particularly happy selection for a railway journey. She looked up from the pages with a shudder, her blood running cold. It was only in books, however, that awful, creepy adventures happened to travelers. She had never known a real person who was unlucky enough to meet a criminal or lunatic in a train. As the reassuring thought entered her mind, her eyes wandered to the far end of the carriage. They unexpectedly met those of the man in the corner seat; the shock was sharp and violent. He was sitting up, the Times folded on his knees, allowing his whole face to be seen. Such a face! Just like so many of those described in the stories Mollie had been reading. The coincidence was extraordinary and startling. The girl's imagination rushed off on a series of wild flights, and she drew quickly back, cowering behind her book. She had never seen a stranger looking man; hollow-cheeked, gaunt, grim, but, above all, with the most peculiar eyes, staring and prominent. She had so little expected such a development in the harmless-looking man behind the Times that the shock and surprise were very great. She retained, however, self-control enough not to appeal to Angela on the impulse of the moment. Mollie was used to having fears ridiculed. She therefore decided to wait before giving any alarm, for it was possible that her excited imagination was running away with her.

After a few minutes she ventured to peep cautiously from behind her book. The man had turned away, and was looking out of the window, the gaunt face only showing in profile. Mollie breathed more freely, relieved from the stare of those terrible eyes; she made a quick, close study of the stranger. As the scrutiny progressed, however, another change came over her face—the composure she had regained began to diminish rapidly. Her eyes noted the man's bare head, then went from it to the rack above, to the seat opposite, to the floor. No trace of hat or hat box, of bags, rugs or luggage of any kind could she discover. Her heart stood still. Who but an escaped lunatic or criminal would be traveling hatless and without baggage? The ghastly ideas, vague before, now took terrible and definite shape. She bent quickly across and touched the unconscious Angela, whom the doubtful heroine's adventures still held wholly absorbed.

"Take care," Mollie whispered. "Don't start and look around. I want to tell you something."

"Good gracious! What has happened? Are you ill?"

Angela, so suddenly aroused from her reading, found it hard not to exclaim aloud at her sister's words and the sight of her pale face.

"No, no, I am all right. Only it's a great deal worse. It's about the man in the carriage." Mollie's voice sank to the lowest whisper.

"What do you mean? Has he been doing anything?"

"No, but he is dreadful-looking; such a strange face and staring eyes. He must be an escaped criminal or a lunatic. A lunatic, I think, he looks so queer. Oh, it's dreadful!"

"Why should you rush at such awful conclusions," Angela expostulated, "merely because a man is queer-looking?"

"But it's not only that. Oh, I wish it was!" Mollie's teeth chattered with fright.

"What else? What is it? For heaven's sake, speak plainly."

"He is traveling without a hat; his head is bare," Mollie gasped out, in strangled whispers. "And he has no hat in the carriage, no luggage of any kind, either."

"Good gracious! Are you quite sure?"

"Quite. He has nothing with him but the Times. Would any ordinary man travel like that?"

Angela's face bleached to the color of her sister's; her fears started into just as acute life. No ordinary man would travel bareheaded. There was an awful probability about the conclusions drawn by Mollie from his hatless condition.

"Oh!" she gasped under her breath. "It is awful! And to think that we're nearly half an hour from the next station!"

A movement at the other end of the carriage made both girls sink back in their places with beating hearts. As Angela sank against the cushions she caught a sudden and unexpected glimpse of the suspected stranger. He had turned again from the window, and was reopening the Times. Alas! Mollie had not exaggerated, as fear sometimes made her prone to do. The man's face was dreadful in its gaunt grimness. And thea the staring eyes and bare head.

Angela could not but accept the situation, as the more suspicious and timid Mollie had accepted it. There was something wrong with the man; he had all the appearance of being a lunatic. Awful though the thought might be, that they were alone in the carriage with a madman, it had to be faced. Angela, less helpless than Mollie, rapidly began to consider what could be done. The train was not due to stop for at least 20 minutes longer. Would the quiet phase in which the man evidently then was, last during that time?—a terrible and vital question. And if it did not? Angela clenched her hands in the agony of the thought, and thrust it from her resolutely. Better not to think of the worst, not to anticipate a situation which would find them helpless. The thing was to save off danger, to do all that they could to preserve the man's present state of calm.

Angela made a rapid mental review of all her knowledge—principally gathered from sensational literature—concerning the insane. As a result, she concluded that what they had to do now was to avoid everything which could attract the man's notice, or excite him in any way. They must not, for the world, let him see them looking at him, nor rouse any suspicions in his mind that they were talking or thinking of him. The difficulty was to communicate these decisions to Mollie without exciting suspicion.

Angela first ventured a swift glance from behind her book to the other end of the carriage. The man was again concealed by the newspaper; the peaceful, ordinary way in which his long legs were stretched across the carriage would have been more reassuring were it not for the top of the bare head that showed above. He was quiet, however. A gleam of hope kept up Angela's spirit. That calm state, if undisturbed, might very well last until their arrival at the next station.

She snatched the opportunity to stoop over and communicate with the trembling Mollie. It was difficult to restore her to the appearance of a moral state to prevent her little gasps becoming audible.

"Try not to look so frightened, for heaven's sake, Mollie," Angela softly whispered. "Quiet and calm are our best chance. Don't give way like that, it may not be so bad after all. If we do nothing to attract his attention he will not notice us. They often do not. Perhaps he will fall asleep; he must be drowsy going over that paper so often."

A smothered "Oh!" answered Angela's well-meant attempt to reassure her sister.

"He's not a bit drowsy," she gasped. "I've just caught his eye over the newspaper. And—and—he looked as if he—was—going—to—talk. Oh! what are we to do! Oh, Angela!"

Angela had turned deadly pale, but her presence of mind did not desert her.

"Let us pretend to be admiring the view," she whispered. "How lovely the light on those fields is!" she said, in a louder tone, turning to the window. "Do look, Mollie."

"He might spring on us—"

"Look," Angela severely interrupted the faltering whisper, "at that effect. Out of the window beside you, a little to the right; the shadows on the trees."

"Yes—yes—I—see."

"Go on looking, and talking about what you see," admonished Angela in undertones, "and when you can think of nothing more to say we will go on to the weather, and to Yorkshire, and the hours of arrival at the stations."

She gave the lead, taking up the prescribed topics in a quiet, level tone, the least calculated to arouse interest and attention. Her ears, all the time, were fairly alert, listening for the slightest sound from the other end of the carriage. The chief burden of the conversation rested on her, for Mollie's part in it, even with the most heroic efforts, was very weak and disjointed. Sometimes it broke off altogether, when a rustle, or movement in the far corner, made her teeth chatter and all power of speech fail. Though the stronger-minded Angela's heart beat just as quickly at these awful moments, she always rose to the emergency and kept up the discourse with unvarying calmness.

To those, stretched in agony upon a rack, minutes are as hours. Never had the sisters dreamed that 20 minutes could be drawn out to such dreadful length. Ten times 20 seemed to have passed, when at last the engine began to whistle and the train to slacken speed, before pulling up in the station. On the instant the stop was made the man sprang from the carriage and disappeared in the crowd on the platform. It was hard for the girls to realize at once that the danger was over; the reaction after the great strain had such a bewildering effect.

Angela found her voice first.

"Oh,"—she drew a deep breath—"what an escape we have had! He is stark, staring mad."

"To think of his rushing off like that! We need not leave the carriage now. Oh, it was dreadful while it lasted!" sighed Mollie.

"He is evidently evading pursuit. I hope he may be caught. I wonder if we ought to tell anyone about him, Mollie?"

The girl had not decided the question when the signal for departure was given and the train began to move. At the moment there was a rush and a shout, the door was dragged open, the bareheaded man precipitated himself into his former place in the carriage, breathless and panting. The girls, literally paralyzed by the terror of the awful surprise, were struck dumb. They could not call for help until it was too late and the station had been left behind.

Several moments passed in silence. Although Angela did not look, she felt the staring eyes fixed on her, as surely as if she saw them.

The man moved uneasily and cleared his throat. Angela's heart beat wildly; the crisis had come.

"I beg your pardon—" he jerked out the words in a peculiar and awkward way—"I frighten you?"

"Yes," she agreed, hastily. "You did."

"I failed in my attempt, though I ran half way through the town. I hope have better luck next time. I shall try again at Darlingham, the next station."

"Oh! I hope so. Indeed, I am sure you will succeed at Darlingham."

"You know the town? Then perhaps you can direct me where to go."

"Yes, I know the town very well," said Angela, boldly.

"But how do you know what I want?"

"I don't know what you want. Certainly not. I haven't thought about it at all."

"But you said you were sure I would succeed at Darlingham."

"Yes—that is no—that is, I should be very glad if you succeeded in whatever it is."

"Success would be very convenient," he said, drolly. "I was looking for a hatter." He gave a short laugh. "I suppose that does not surprise you, does it?"

"No," Angela managed to answer. "Not at all; it is very nice—very natural, I mean."

Mollie's heart gave a first, faint throb of hope on seeing how closely the lunatic was attending to Angela's words. To have his mind well fixed on Darlingham was the best way of keeping deadly thoughts out of it.

"Do you know a hatter? And can you direct me to the shop?"

"Certainly."

With his staring eyes fixed straight before him, he began fumbling in his pockets. From one of them he finally produced a small leather case. The eyes of the girls followed his movements with a terror far more deadly than any which had before possessed them. Mollie's pupils dilated still more; the man had drawn something from the case. What was it—that thing clasped within his hand? The lunatic's sudden drawing forth of a razor from a bag, his address to the other occupant of the carriage, "I am about to sharpen this for you. I have been studying your throat; it looks as if it would cut well."

"I shall follow your directions closely," he paused in the doorway of the carriage to say. "Excuse me, I have not a moment to lose. Au revoir, young ladies."

He disappeared from sight at once. Angela's nerves broke down completely in the sudden relation of the strain.

"Let us call the porter. Quick, quick."

Even as she spoke the train—which still had to make up for lost time—was in motion. For some awful instants the girls' eyes were riveted in agony on the door.

Next morning as Angela passed through the hall, a fly, with luggage, drew up at the door. The interchanged greetings, "Hello, professor!" "Well, Tom!" reached her ears. The first voice was the squire's, hearty and welcoming; the sound of the second made Angela start and turn abruptly round. Descending from the vehicle appeared a long, thin figure, with a gaunt face and staring eyes. His head was not bare but covered by a soft hat. Still there was no mistaking—the lunatic!

Some hours later the Trevors were holding a private conference with the lady of Mapledene in her boudoir. Tears of laughter still filled the eyes of the latter.

"I cannot help it, girls, you mustn't mind. It is too killing!" she said. "Anyone would have made the mistake. I never saw the man until now. Such a being. No wonder you thought him a lunatic."—London Punch.

Parlor Curtains.

When it is necessary to use sash curtains at front windows, especially those of a parlor or drawing-room, the ugly bedroomy effect that they often have may be changed into one quite pleasing and artistic by setting across the lower third or half of the window a narrow frame of Venetian bent-iron in a simple pattern, which frames in a curtain of colored China silk very prettily. The two pieces of the frames that make the top and bottom should be wider than the sides. The curtain should be secured at the top by running it through a very small brass rod.—N. Y. Post.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

The Song of the Drunkards Goes Ringing Down the Ages,

Chanted by Old and Young, Rich and Poor, in a Chorus of a Million Voices —It Was Begun by Noah After Leaving the Ark.

Dr. Talmage's text Sunday was Isaiah lxix., 12: "I was the song of the drunkards."

Who said that? Was it David or was it Christ? It was both. These Messianic Psalms are like a telescope. Pull the instrument to a certain range and it shows you an object near by. Pull it to another range and it will show you objects far away. David and Christ were both such in his own time, the song of the drunkards. Holiness of doctrine and life always did excite wicked merriment. Although David had fully reformed and written a psalmody in which all subsequent ages have sobbed out their penitence, his enemies preferred to fetch up his old career, and put into metric measures sins long before forgiven. Christ, who committed no sin, was still more the subject of unholy song, because the better one is, the more iniquity lashes him. Of the best Being whose voice ever moved the air or whose foot ever touched the earth it might be said:

The reward of the passing throng.
The ruler's scoff, the drunkard's song.

The earth, fitted up for the human race, in congratulation the morning stars sang a song. The Israelitish army safe on the bank of the Red sea and the Egyptians clear under the returned water, Moses sang a song. One of the most important parts of this great old Book is Solomon's song. At the birth of our Lord the Virgin Mary and old Simeon and angelic prima donnas in hovering clouds sang a song. What enrichment has been given to the world's literature and enjoyments by the ballads, the canticles, the discants, the ditties, the roundelays, the epics, the lyrics, the dithyrambs. But my text calls attention to a style of song that I think has never been discoursed upon. You sometimes hear this style of music when passing a saloon, or a residence in which dissipation is ascendant, or after you have retired at night you hear it coming out of the street from those who, having tarried long at their cups, are on their way home—the ballad of the inebriate, the serenade of the alcoholized, or what my text calls the Song of the Drunkards.

For practical and saving and warning and Christian purposes I will announce to you the characteristics of that well-known cadence mentioned in my text. First, I remark that the Song of the Drunkards is an old song. Much of the music of the world and of the church is old music. First came the music of percussion, the clapping cymbal, which was suggested to a hammer on an anvil, and then the sighing of the wind across the reeds suggested the flute, and then the strained sinews of the tortoise across its shell suggested the harp. But far back of that, and nearly back as far as the moral collapse of our first parentage is the Song of the Drunkards. That time was sung at least 4,243 years ago, when, the deluge past, Noah came out of the ark, and as if disgusted with too much prevalence of water, he took to strong drink, and staggered forth, for all ages the first known drunkard. He sounded the first note of the old music of inebriacy. An Arab author of A. D. 1310 wrote: "Noah, being come out of the ark, ordered each of his sons to build a house. Afterwards they were occupied in sowing and in planting trees, the pippins and fruits of which they had found in the ark. The vine alone was wanting, and they could not discover it. Gabriel then informed them that the devil had desired it, and indeed had some right to it. Hereupon Noah summoned him to appear in the field, and said to him. 'Oh, accursed! Why hast thou carried away the vine from me?' 'Because,' replied the devil, 'it belonged to me.' 'Shall I part it for you?' said Gabriel. 'I consent,' said Noah, 'and will leave him a fourth.' 'That is not sufficient for him,' said Gabriel. 'Well, I will take half,' replied Noah, 'and he shall take the other.' 'That is not sufficient yet,' responded Gabriel. 'He must have two-thirds and thou one, and when thy wine shall have boiled on the fire until two-thirds are gone, the remainder shall be assigned for thy use.'" A fable that illustrates how the vine has been misappropriated.

Benhadad and 32 allied kings, reveling in a pavilion, took up the same drunkard. Naboth was rendering that drunkard's song when his wife, beautiful Abigail, came back from her expedition to save her husband. Herod was singing that song when the daughter of Herodias wheeled in the dance before him. Belshazzar and a thousand lords renewed that song the night the handwriting came out on the plastering of the wall and the tramp of the besieging host was heard on the palace stairs. Ahasuerus sang that song when, after seven days of carousal, he ordered Vashti to come into the presence of the roaring guests without her veil on—a January storm trying to command a June morning. Oh, yes! The song of the drunkard is an old song. King Cyrus boasted that he could drink more wine than his brother. Drunkenness was so rife among the Lacedaemonians that Lycurgus had all the wines of the vineyards destroyed. Paul excoriates the Corinthians for turning the communion of the Lord's supper at church into a carousal. Isaiah mentions the drunkards of Ephraim. So much were the Athenians given to wassail that a law was passed giving a man double punishment for crime while intoxicated, the first punishment for the crime and the other for the intoxication. It was a staccato passage in that song when Alexander the Great arose from a banquet and struck a spear through the heart of Clitus while putting up the curtains, and horrified at what was done withdrew the sword from the dead body and attempted to take his own life. In the time of Oliver Cromwell the evil was so great that offenders were compelled to wear what was called "the drunkard's cloak," namely a barrel with one end of it knocked out and a hole in the opposite end, the arms thrust through holes at the sides of the barrel. Samuel Johnson made merry of his own inebriacy. Oh, this old song! All the centuries have joined in. Among the first songs ever sung was the Song of the Drunkards.

Again, the Song of the Drunkards is an expensive song. The Sonntags and the Parepa Rosas and Nilssons and other renderers of divine solos received their thousands of dollars per night in coliseums and academies of music. Some of the people of small means almost impoverished themselves that they might sit a few evenings under the enchantment of those angels of sweet sounds. I paid $2 to hear Jenny Lind sing when it was not very easy to afford the $2. Very expensive is such music, but the costliest song on earth is the drunkard's song. It costs ruin of body. It costs ruin of mind. It costs ruin of soul. Go right down among the residential streets of any city and you can find once beautiful and luxurious homesteads that were expended in this destructive music. The lights have gone out in the drawing room, the pianos have ceased the pulsations of their keys, the wardrobe has lost its last article of appropriate attire. The Belshazzarean feast has left nothing but the broken pieces of the crushed chalices. There it stands, the ghastliest thing on earth, the remnant of a drunkard's home. The costliest thing on earth is sin. The most expensive of all music is the Song of the Drunkards. It is the highest tariff of nations—no protective tariff, but a tariff of doom, a tariff of woe, a tariff of death. This evil, whets the knives of the assassins, cuts the most of the wounds of the hospital, makes necessary most of the almshouses, causes the most of the ravings of the insane asylum, and puts up most of the iron bars of the penitentiaries. It has its hand to-day on the throat of the American republic. It is the taskmaster of nations, the human race groaning under its anathema. The Song of the Drunkards has for its accompaniment the clank of chains, the chattering teeth of poverty, the rattle of executioner's scaffold, the creaking door of the deserted home, the crash of shipwrecks, and the groan of empires. The two billion twenty million dollars which rum costs this country in a year, in the destruction of grain and sugar, and the supporting of the paupers and the invalids and the criminals which strong drink causes, is only a small part of what is paid for this expensive song of the Drunkards.

Again, the Song of the Drunkards is a multidinous song—not a solo, not a duet, not a quartet, not a sextet; but millions on millions are this hour singing it. Do not think that alcoholism has this field all to itself. It has powerful rivals in the intoxicants of other nations; has hashcesh, and arrack, and pulque, and opium, and quavo, and nastic, and wedrow. Every nation, barbaric as well as civilized, has its pet intoxicant. This Song of the Drunkards is rendered in Chinese, Hindoo, Arabian, Assyrian, Persian, Mexican—yea, all the languages. All zones join it. No continent would be large enough for the choir gallery if all those who have this libretto in their hands should stand side by side to chant the international chorus. Other throngs are just learning the eight notes of this deathful music, which is already mastered by the orchestras in full voice under the batons in full swing. All the musicians assembled at Dusseldorf, or Berlin, or Boston Peace Jubilee, rendering symphonies, requiems, or grand marches of Mendelssohn or Wagner, or Chopin, or Handel, were insignificant in numbers as compared with the innumerable throngs, host beside host, gallery above gallery, who are now pouring forth the Song of the Drunkards.

Years ago, standing before a bulletin board in New York on the night of a presidential election day, as the news came in and the choice of the American people was finally announced, there were people in the streets who sang roystering and frivolous songs, but in the street one man, in deep, strong, resonant voice, started, to the tune of "Old Hundred," "Praise God, from Whom all blessings flow," and soon all up and down the street the voices joined in the Doxology. May God speed the day when the song of rescue and salvation shall drown with an overwhelming surge this mighty Song of the Drunkards!

Again the Song of the Drunkards is a suggestive song. You hear a nursery refrain and right away you think of your childhood home and brothers and sisters with whom you played, and mother, long since gone to rest. You hear a national air and you think of the encampment of 1863, and the still night on the river bank, and the camp fires that shook their reflections up and down the faces of the regiment. You hear an old church tune, and you are reminded of the revival scenes, amid which you were brought to God. Nothing so brings up associations as a song sung or played upon instrument, and the Drunkard's Song is full of suggestion. As you hear it on the street quite late some night, you begin to say to yourself, "I wonder if he has a mother? Is his wife waiting for him? Will his children be frightened when he enters the front door and staggers, whooping, up the stairs? What chance is there for that young man started so early on the downgrade? In what business will he succeed? How long before that man will run through his property? I wonder how he got so far astray? Can any influence be wielded to fetch him back? He must have got into bad company who led him off." So you soliloquize and guess about this man whose voice you hear on the street under the starlight.

Notice the second noun of my text is in the plural. Not "drunkard," but "drunkards." It would be dull work to sing that song solitary and alone. It is generally a chorus. They are in groups. On the downward way there must be companionship. Here and there is a man so mean as always to drink alone, but generous, big-hearted men, drinking at bar or in restaurant or in clubhouse feel mortified to take the beverage unaccompanied. There must be some one with whom to click the rim of his glasses, some one's health to propose, some sentiment to toast. There must be two, said still better if four, and still better if six, to give zest to the "Song of the Drunkards." Those who have gone down could mention the name of at least one who helped them down. Generally it was some one who was a little higher up in social life or in financial resources. Our friend felt flattered to have an invitation from one of superior name. Each one drank not only when he felt like it, but when the other felt like it. Neither wanted to seem lacking in sociality when he was invited. So a hundred thousand men every year are treated into hell. Together they are manacled of evil habit, together they travel toward their doom, together they make merry over the cowardice or puritanical sentiment of those who never indulge, together they join their voices in the "Song of the Drunkards." If the one proposes to stop, the other will not let him stop. When men are getting down themselves they do not want their associates to turn back. Those who turn back will be the scoff and caricature of those who keep on, and there will be conspiracy to bring them back to their old places and their old environment, and so have them renew the "Song of the Drunkards." There was a tragedy in New York, September, 1845. A man of marvelous natural gifts had, after retiring from his home in England, fallen into dissipated habits, and being a fine singer as well as impersonator, entertained many a bar-room group at Newburyport, Boston and New York, but by the grace of God and the kindness of one Joel Stratton, had been rescued and took the platform for temperance, and moved vast audiences toward a better life. "Destroy him!" said some of his old associates, and they set a trap for his feet. "How do you do, Mr. Gough?" said some one on the street in New York. He pretended to be an old acquaintance and said: "I suppose you are so pious now and have got to be so proud that you will not drink a glass of soda water with an old shipmate." "Oh, yes," said Mr. Gough, "I will drink a glass of soda water with anybody. I will drink a glass with you."

They went down Chambers street to Chatham street, and into a place where "Best Soda" was announced at the door. After a delay there was handed to him a glass of soda water, said to be flavored with raspberry, but alas! it was rum, that flew to his brain and sent him through the street an insane man, and weeks passed be ore he came to himself and implored the pardon of the Christian church that he had joined, and resumed his wondrous career for God and righteousness. But all the grogshops and places of dissipation rang with merriment at the temporary downfall. All the grogshops and wine cellars of America took up with new voice and new gusto and new enthusiasm and new diabolism the Song of the Drunkards.

There looms up in my memory one of the best and noblest friends I ever had. He had been for 30 years a consistent member of the church. I knew not that at about twenty-one years of age he had followed the sea and habits of inebriacy had been fixed upon him. But converted to God he began a new life. Yet it was a 30 years' war against an old appetite, but about this struggle I knew nothing until he was dead. While absent during my summer vacation I received a telegram announcing his death and asking me to come and officiate at his obsequies. I arrived at the moment the service was to begin, and had not much time to make inquiries about his last hours. In my remarks, without any limitations, I extolled his virtues while living and spoke of the heavenly raptures into which he had entered. Afterward I found he had died of delirium tremens in the hospital, because he was so violent he could not be sufficiently restrained in his beautiful home. He had been seized in the street with violent pains of body and went into an apothecary store to get medical relief. Something there given him set on fire his old appetite for strong drink, and utterly irresponsible, he went from liquor store to liquor store, until, a raving maniac, the officers of the law found him and took him to the hospital, where he died. Some time after I said to the doctor in the hospital, "Of what did he die?" and the answer was, "Congestion of the brain." I said, "Doctor I want to know the bottom facts, for I was his pastor and he was one of the best friends I ever had. Was it delirium tremens?" and the doctor responded "Yes." Did I regret that at his obsequies I had extolled his virtues and spoken of the heavenly joys upon which he had entered? No. I do not think that my friend was any more responsible for the mode of his taking off than a typhoid fever patient in delirium is responsible for leaping out of the fourth story window. But while we were heartbroken about his going away, I think that in the saloons, to those who heard of his membership of the church and the tragedy of his departure, he became, as did the David and the Christ of my text, the Song of the Drunkards.

RELIABLE reports received from the Jackson's Hole country, Wyoming, are to the effect that in no previous winter has there been so great a number of elk wintering as this season. A conservative estimate, made by the warden of the district, fixes the number at 30,000. They are on every hill and in every valley, and the night's sounds are piteous from the crying calves lost from their mothers. Every morning thousands are seen traveling from the great swamps along the Snake river to the Gros-Ventre hills.

WORKING THE ROADS.

Farmers Can Well Afford to Devote Their Time to This Task.

Much has been said and written about country roads and the proper way to construct them to insure good ones the year round. But much of it applies only where gravel or crushed stone can be obtained with which to make a road bed unaffected by rains and standing water. In many sections of the country gravel can be had by hauling it from creek and river beds, and where it can be so obtained or purchased at a low figure the best possible use of time and money is in securing and spreading this upon a read bed previously graded into the proper form. If the gravel is dumped upon a perfectly flat surface it becomes mixed with the soil during wet weather and soon is lost. The first thing to be done is to grade the road. The graveling or macadamizing can then be done at leisure. The upper illustration shows the best form of the road. The dirt from the ditches at the sides is carried to the middle and left in a rounded form, highest in the center. Care must be taken to make the sides slope all the way from the center to the bottom of the ditches, or the water will stand in the sags and percolate into the roadway, making it soft and muddy. Make good outlets for these ditches to carry the water off and keep the road dry, and also that they may serve for outlets for tile and for all other farm drains.

Keep the surface of the road smooth and free from sods, for those traveling will not make martyrs of themselves and bump over the rough places to wear them down if the sides are smooth.

THE NEW AND THE OLD WAY.

Leave the sods at one side. They will decay in a year or two. A large amount of road work can be done in a short time with comfort to man and beast, by using one of the improved road grades. Four men with their teams make a good force; one man and team for the plow, the others for the grader. It will pay any town handsomely to invest in the most improved machinery for road work. When grading the road be careful not to get the grade too wide. Make it just wide enough for teams to pass. It will flatten out with use and wet weather.

A great aid in keeping the road dry is a row of tiles laid on either side at the outer edges of the grade. These should not be laid too deep, for the surface will become packed so that the water will not readily soak through. But if the grade is the proper form the water will run off the surface so rapidly that comparatively little will soak in; and as the tile and laying them add largely to the cost of the road they may usually be dispensed with. All doubtless realize the truthfulness of the lower illustration and the difficulty of getting about over such highways, the loss of time and money, the wear and tear of horses, harnesses and wagons, resulting from attempts to move loads at the very season when farmers have the most time to do such work. In the summer when the farmers are busy with their crops, the roads are usually dry and any kind is good enough. The low price for which farm lands sell is due in a large measure to the poor highways. With better roads the value of the lands rapidly increases. Examples of this can be found in every county. Farms located along good, hard roads are in constant demand at prices far in excess of those situated at a distance from such roads. Wherever other work will permit, farmers can well afford to give a few days' work on the roads instead of feeling it a hardship to have to work the time required by law. Work them thoroughly, each neighborhood for itself. The labor and time spent will return 100 fold in the increased value of property and in the ease and comfort of traveling. — Farm and Home.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

One item in renovating an old orchard is to provide good drainage.

Generally grapes give a good return for the land and labor required to grow them.

Wood ashes make a good fertilizer for strawberries, raspberries, currants and grapes.

Many injurious insects winter among the dead leaves and branches. The safest plan is to gather up and burn them.

On warm soils the buds of fruit trees often start early and are liable to be nipped by frost. Mulching heavily in the fall or early winter will largely prevent this.

It is not best to dig the hole for the tree any deeper than the tree is to be planted, otherwise it will stand in a puddle of water.—St. Louis Republic.

Kill Off the Poor Calves.

If the calf is not a good one, it would be better to knock it in the head and feed it to the chickens rather than raise it for the dairy. It does not cost five cents more to raise a good calf than it does a poor one, and the cow that will make 300 pounds of butter a year has eaten no more up to the time she drops her calf than one that will make only 150. There is not a fortune in the dairy business at any event, but if we raise calves from poor cows from which to make up our future herd there is a loss.—National Stockman.

REALLY GOOD MILKERS.

They Are By No Means as Numerous as They Should Be.

Almost anybody can milk after a fashion, but really good milkers are not as plenty as they might be. A good milker is patient and gentle of touch, not only incapable of lifting a milking stool at a cow, but wise enough and thoughtful enough never to show an irritability or harshness of manner that might excite or disturb a nervous animal. Milking should be done as rapidly as possible without worry. It should be done thoroughly to the last drop; otherwise a little milk carelessly or unintentionally left in the udder will begin the work of "drying off" the cow.

Milking should be done regularly, beginning at the same hour, and the milker should go through his stint of cows in the same order, thus making it easier and less disturbing for the cow that from habit knows when to expect her turn. To the good milker, cleanliness is indeed next to godliness. The hands should be clean, the clothing clean, and the skin and udders of the cows should be kept clean. Hard milking cows are much less valuable than their yield or test would at first blush seem to indicate. They require more time. Once in awhile this might be endured, but when the milking is a test that recurs regularly twice a day for 300 days in the year, it becomes an important item.

It is hard to milk with the rapidity that good milking requires, and it is difficult, too, to milk as clean as the maintenance of the milk flow requires, and hard milkers are much more liable, other things being equal, to fall off in milk flow and dry off early. They become nervous, too, as a rule, and very frequently develop into kickers. They are not perhaps to blame for this. The milking disturbs them and makes them irritable, and they naturally come to resent anything that irritates them. Their irritation reacts, too, upon the person who does the milking, and he in turn is liable to be less valuable as a milker because less patient and gentle. Good milking bears so important a relation to the best results which constitute profit, as compared with results not quite so good, that it is a faculty which everyone who has to handle cows should cultivate. There is more in the cheerful, good-humored, picturesque milkmaid idea than mere poetry. The cheerful, wholesome, womanly milkmaid is, as a rule, much more likely to harmonize with the disposition of a good milk cow than is the ruder and less patient farm hand.—Western Farm Journal.

DAIRY ESSENTIALS.

Summarized by R. A. Pierson, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

A roomy, clean, dry, light and well-ventilated stable or cow house. To produce good milk, cows must be comfortable, and these conditions not only add to their comfort, but are absolutely necessary to keep them in the best of health.

Healthy and clean cows, which appear well-fed and contented.

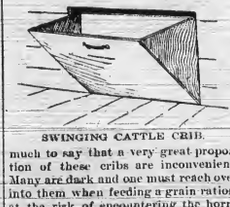
An abundance of pure water to which cows are given access at least twice a day.

Feed of good quality; the grain and coarse fodder should be free from dirt, decay, or a musty condition.

A spirit of kindness toward the stock, exhibited by everyone employed about them, and gentleness of the animals themselves.

Provision for washing and sterilizing or scalding all utensils which come in contact with milk.

Provision for straining, aerating and cooling the milk in a clean atmosphere, free from all stable and other odors. This treatment should take place immediately after the milk is drawn from each cow.



Facilities for storing the milk and keeping it cold.

Especially great cleanliness in regard to everything connected with the dairy. The atmosphere of the stable should be pure and free from dust when milking is being done. Employes should carefully wipe the udders and wash their hands before milking, and should be in clean clothes. Whitewash is a good disinfectant, and should be seen in many more stables, and land plaster should be sprinkled about to absorb moisture and odors.—Farm News.

SWINGING CATTLE CRIB.

Description of a Convenient Contrivance of This Kind.

There are almost as many varieties of cattle cribs as there are individual farms in the country, and it is not too much to say that a very great proportion of these cribs are inconvenient. Many are dark and one must reach over into them when feeding a grain ration, at the risk of encountering the horns of the animal to be fed.

SWINGING CATTLE CRIB.

A convenient swinging crib is shown in the accompanying illustration. It is triangular in shape and is hinged at the point at the bottom just on the edge of the feeding floor. When swung forward into the feeding floor, as shown, it is in a most convenient position to fill with hay, or to place in it a grain ration. It is then tipped back into the space before the animal and is entirely out of the feeding floor, and in a most convenient position for the animal to eat from. The bottom of this crib is a three-cornered piece of timber. This gives rigidity and prevents there being a narrow space at the bottom, into which an animal could not get his nose. —N. Y. Tribune.

POISON IN ROSES.

Scratches from Thorns Often Cause Unsightly and Painful Sores.

"Be careful and do not scratch your hands with the thorns on those roses. They are poisonous and the scratch means painful and unsightly sores."

The speaker was the wife of a well-known florist on Wabash avenue. She was exhibiting to a customer a lot of American Beauty roses and had laid a large bunch on the counter. The customer in his enthusiasm attempted to take them in his hands, when he received warning.

The florist's wife held out her hands. They were covered with a dozen or more large round spots, whose angry red color showed how painful they must have been.

"My husband's hands are as bad as mine, and we have both suffered greatly. American Beauties have not done well this year, and the growers, in order to kill insects or in some way to help the growth of the flowers, have sprayed them liberally with a substance that contains more or less poisonous matter. If the stems are carefully washed there is not much danger in handling them. But we do not always have time to do that, and in less than a week after the Beauties began coming into market our hands were in the condition in which you see mine now."

"Does the same danger exist in all roses?" inquired the customer.

"Not always," was the reply. "But it is safer," she continued, "to avoid being scratched by rose thorns in any case. Of course, nothing more serious than an ugly sore results, but that is bad enough."

Just then the florist himself came in and corroborated the statement made by his wife. He said there was more trouble from poison in rose thorns this year than ever before, and it was owing to the fact that insects were unusually troublesome. He always warned his customers to be very careful, and he washed the stems of all roses before they were sent out. He added that there was sometimes danger in eating rose leaves and people ought to drop the habit. He had known women, he said, to have sore mouths from eating the leaves of flowers that had been sprayed with poisonous substances.

While the danger is not present in all the flowers that one buys of the florist, it is wise to be careful to avoid scratches and to stop eating rose leaves if one would be entirely on the safe side.—Chicago Tribune.

BOTH FOOD AND POISON.

Something About Tapioca That You May Not Know.

Some of the plants that poison man are very curious. Many persons are poisoned if they merely pass near where the plant is growing or if the wind happens to be blowing in their direction. There is a plant in the West Indies so poisonous that if the raindrops fall from it upon a man's skin great blotches immediately arise. Some of these plants do their deadly work very silently by sending a numbness through the entire body, while others cause terrible convulsions.

There is a curious plant, a native of South America, that poisons or nourishes us according to the part of it we use. It is called the manioc, or cassava. Thousands daily eat preparations of this plant without knowing anything of its strange properties.

There are two principal species spoken of by botanists, the bitter cassava and the sweet cassava. Both are highly important sources of food starches. The bitter cassava has been introduced into most of the tropical regions. It is cultivated in the East Indian archipelago, in Brazil and in nearly all the states of South America.

This plant is a shrub, which grows to the height of six or eight feet. Its roots are very large, often weighing 30 pounds. They grow from three to eight in a cluster, generally one or two feet in length. The root, as well as the rest of the plant, contains an acrid, milky juice, which is so poisonous that it will cause death in a few minutes; but as this poisonous acid may be destroyed by heat, the juice, thickened by boiling, forms an excellent sauce called cassa-reep.

The root, when grated or pounded into pulp, is placed under a heavy pressure. The poisonous juice is thus squeezed out. It is then dried and forms what is known as cassava bread, or it may be heated and stirred on metal plates, when it forms the well-known tapioca, which is sold in all our stores and served up in hotels, restaurants and on our family tables as tapioca pudding.

From the bitter cassava root many different kinds of food preparations are made in Brazil. The roots are preserved for use by being cleaned, sliced and dried, and from them manioc or cassava meal is prepared by rasping. Thus, we see, life or death comes to us from this plant according as we know how to use it.—Philadelphia Times.

Judging Distances.

A lady happened to remark to an athletic friend that it was very strange that most of the bad bicycling accidents seemed to happen to women—and could he account for it—were they more "foolhardy?" "Not at all," he replied; "the real reason is, I think, that women cannot judge distances. Now, from a's earliest youth up a boy is trained through his games to accurately measure yards and feet. You will see a woman rush in between two carts where a man could tell you to a certainty that it would be impossible to avoid an accident. It is just the want of a trained eye that does the mischief."—Philadelphia Ledger.

PECULIARITIES OF MILLIONAIRES

Use Halfpenny Stamps and Have a Poor Dinner.

I have been asked whether I ever receive social invitations from millionaires in open envelopes, with halfpenny stamps, and what I think of the practice on the part of the millionaires, says London Truth. It is not often that I am privileged to receive invitations from millionaires under any circumstances, but it is a remarkable fact that I have had such an invitation addressed to me at the halfpenny rate of postage, and as others have had a similar experience I suppose that millionaires as a class have a weakness for halfpenny postage stamps. Probably this weakness has something to do with their having become or remained millionaires.

A worse failing on the part of millionaires of which I have experience is that they occasionally ask their friends to dinner and sit them down to a meal quite unfit to eat. Personally, I would rather that a man took a halfpenny off the postage of my invitation and spent it on the dinner. So far as the invitation is concerned, there may possibly be many people who, when invited to the houses of millionaires, would wish the fact widely known and would prefer, if possible, that the invitation should be sent on a postcard, so that all who run may read. Perhaps it is from this kindly motive rather than from parsimony that millionaires patronize the halfpenny post. Let us think as well of Dives as we can.

A DOCTOR WHO WAS EQUAL TO THE EMERGENCY.

From the News, Youngstown, Ohio.

An interesting little story was told your reporter recently by Mrs. P. A. Lawson, of No. 367 Custer Avenue, Youngstown, Ohio. She had been an invalid for eighteen years and had been examined and treated by many physicians, among them the skillful Dr. A. M. Clarke. They all diagnosed the case in the same way and all insisted that an operation was necessary, except Dr. Clarke, who maintained that proper treatment could cure her. Her entire left side was paralyzed and her heart became affected. This soon developed into true organic heart disease. In January, '93, she became so bad that she had to take to her bed for three months. Now comes the interesting part of the story. Hear what Mrs. Lawson says:

"One morning, I believe it was April 9, 1893, the doctor changed the treatment and gave me in its place a supply of pills of a peculiarly pinkish color. They were pleasant to the taste. After taking several the doctor, upon his next arrival was greatly surprised to find me considerably stronger and more hopeful. During my illness I read a great deal and in one paper I noticed a testimonial which had been given by a prominent government official relative to the merits of a proprietary remedy. They were called Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

"When the doctor next called I said to him: Doctor, are you prescribing patent medicine to your patients now?' To this he smiled and answered: 'Well, Mrs. Lawson, whether it be patent medicine or not, just so it does you good.'

"To make a long story short, in two weeks I was able to sit up and shortly after could walk ab ut the house. At the doctor's suggestion I bought six boxes of the pills and used them strictly according to directions. I went to the country for a month's visit, thereby hoping to recuperate more quickly and was continually taking the pink pills. At two weeks' time I felt strong enough to go home; as strong as I had felt before I became afflicted, and to-day I am as well as I was when I was twenty. I'm fifty-two years old now."

"Well, do you attribute the excellence of your health now, Mrs. Lawson, to the use of the Pink Pills?" was asked.

"I most certainly do. I realize that had not taken them I should long since have died. No one could help me. To show you again what good they have done me I need only say that to-day I did my own washing and ironing and do not feel in the least fatigued. I attend all of my own household work now and my heart does not give me a bit of trouble. It may interest you to know that I have increased in weight from less than one hundred pounds during my illness to one hundred and forty-three pounds."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes never in loose bulk, and 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Southern Homes in Texas.

A great development is now going on in the Coast Country of Texas, especially that portion known as the "Diamond district."

This is a section with Houston and Galveston at the north and south points of the Diamond, the west side being bounded by the Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe Railroad and the east side by Buffalo bayou, San Jacinto bay and Galveston bay. Less than four years ago this was about raw nature, being one of the richest grazing countries on the face of the globe. Only a few isolated small farms existed, but they were producing phenomenal results, not only with the southern staples of corn, cotton, oats and sugar, but more particul rly with early fruits and vegetables. In fact it was demonstrated beyond any doubt that the net revenue produced yearly from ten or twenty acres would equal and in many cases exceed that of the ordinary quarter section in the north. People of all trades and professions in the north were attracted toward south Texas by the successful result of the cities at Galveston, which increased the depth of the water in that harbor to more than twenty seven feet, deep enough for the largest vessels and the rapid advance of commercial prosperity in both Houston and Galveston. These people were not slow to see the agricultural possibilities in the Diamond district above referred to, and the results of the past four years, depressing as they had been financially speaking, had been astounding. Houston has doubled her population, Galveston has done nearly as well, and the intermediate country is dotted throughout the entire Diamond district with hundreds of small farms in the highest state of cultivation. Railroad and water facilities are simple and reasonable, and the inhabitants of that district are within an hour's ride of the two largest as well as the Metropolitan cities of Texas. Within its borders have grown the prosperous little cities of La Porte, Webster, Alvin, etc., which are attracting the attention of the whole north. The climatic and healthful conditions are all that could be asked for, and it is expected that within a very few years it will be the garden spot of the United states.

Scoff and Cough.

The man who scoffs at the friendly advice, to "take something for that cough," will keep on coughing until he changes his mind or changes his earthly residence. A great many scoffers have been converted by the use of the standard cough remedy of the past half century,—Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. But some are scoffing and coughing yet. They wheeze with asthma, bark with bronchitis or groan with the grippe. Singular, is n't it, the number of stubborn people, who persist in gambling, with health and perhaps life as the stake, when they might be effectually cured of cough, cold or lung trouble, by a few doses of Several farmers in this community have recently bought horses which they will feed to their hogs. Horse-flesh is considered a first-class cure and preventive of diseases among swine, and since horses can be purchased for a song now it would pay those who have many hogs to make use of this remedy.—New Castle Local.

The Ashland Iron Mills have secured the contract for 3,000 tons of steel rails for Mexico. They were enabled to do this because the men accepted a reduction of 25 per cent. on the dollar from late prices, and this is the town where Gov. Bradley promised laborers steady work and increased wages. But that was befor the election. Confidence is a great thing, but the laborer is the one that gets left.—Bracken Chronicle.

A feature of the Kentucky display at the Tennessee Centennial, which begins the first of next May, will be an obelisk made out of coal from the mines in this State. This obelisk will be 140 feet high. The shaft will be 110 feet high and ten feet square at the base, running to an apex four feet square. The apex will be surmounted by a flag-staff, thirty feet high, with the words, "Kentucky coal" on the flag, in large letters.

Webb Smith reports a chicken which had one leg cut off accidentally, for which he made a wooden leg. The chicken seemed to enjoy it, but it was too much trouble. The chicken would come around every evening at dusk and lay on its back and stick up the wooden leg to be taken off so it could go to roost. That was all right, but when it got to doing its own scratching and digging for worms with the per leg Webb drew the line. He couldn't afford to whittle a new leg every day. Anyone doubting the truthfulness of this is at liberty to call on Webb and see the chicken and place where it scratched."—Dover News.

Lexington has a citizen who must be trying to beat the record of Baron Munchausen as a prevaricator. His name is Jerome B. Frazier, and here is a sample of his soaring fancy taken from the Lexington Argonaut: "I am very fond of domestic animals and fowls, and the possess or of a fine intelligent fox-terrier, who answers to the name of Fancy, I attended a sale some months ago and bought a Poland duck. I bought her home and put her among the other poultry in the yard. In a few days I noticed that Fanny and Miss Poland were on good terms with each other, and in a few weeks they were inseparable. Finally Miss Poland thought she had loafed long enough and went to setting. Fanny made regular visits to her and seemed to take great interest in the proceeding. The duck rarely left her nest. After setting for about a week she sickened and died. Fanny seemed almost heart-broken over the untimely death of her friend. The evening of her death I missed Fanny from her accustomed place in the yard and began a search for her. I found her in the duck's nest, with the eggs underneath her. The next morning I visited the poultry house and found Fanny still covering the eggs. I concluded not to disturb her, but await re-ults. This continued for some weeks, and at the end of the usual time allowed for incubation I found that six lively little ducks had become citizens of the poultry yard. Fanny seemed very proud of success as an incubator. The little ducks followed her and seemed to know no difference between Fanny and a barnyard fowl. The strangest part of this story yet remains to be told. Fanny is a remarkable ratter, and these little ducks developed into the finest of rat killers that I ever saw. I am willing to match these six ducks against six terriers for from $100 to $1,000 a side, in a rat killing contest, and I will win the match."

AN OPEN LETTER

To the Democracy of the Fifteenth Judicial District.

Whereas, The Committee has called a primary election to be held Saturday, June 5, 1897, for the purpose of nominating candidates for the offices of Circuit Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney, to be voted for at the November election of that year,

I, therefore take this method of announcing myself as a candidate for re-election to the office of Commonwealth's Attorney and to submit to my Democratic friends some of the reasons that induce me to again become a candidate.

It will be remembered that I was elected at the first election held under the New Constitution of the State and was not elected for a full term. The first full term of said office begins the first day of January, 1898. And that I had been in office but a short time when a great industrial and financial misfortune overtook the country, which reduced all values about one half and cut all salaries dependent upon fees in whole or part, in about the same proportion. Thus rendering it impossible for me, no matter how economic, to have any surplus at the end of my brief term. I think my fellow lawyers will say that I have been diligent in the discharge of my official duties. They better than anyone else how a Commonwealth's Attorney discharges his duties and to them I appeal with confidence.

I have been fortunate in another respect; I have not lost a single day from the discharge of my official duties on account of illness; and therefore have not cost the taxpayers a cent for a special Commonwealth's Attorney. I have labored faithfully to make the expenses attending criminal trials as light as possible, and can point with pardonable pride to the Auditor's report which shows that under my administration the Fifteenth District has been one of the least expensive in the State.

I have tried to discharge all the duties of the office with perfect fidelity to the public interest and a just and proper regard for private right. While I do not desire to appear in the attitude of a beggar or the role of a suppliant I am frank to confess that I need the office. During the four years I served the people as Commonwealth's Attorney, my civil practice has gone to other lawyers, for the duties of the office have been so exacting that they have left little time for private business. This makes it more imperative to me that I should be re-elected.

I have always been a Democrat of Democrats, and voted for all the Democratic candidates for President from Samuel J. Tilden to William J. Bryan and have never voted any other ticket for any office except the straight Democratic ticket.

If honored by your nomination, as I confidently believe I shall be, I will in the future as in the past, do all I can to promote the peace and good order of society and by an honest and upright life vindicate the wisdom of your choice.

Confiding in the justice and generosity of the Democratic party, I have the honor to subscribe myself.

Respectfully yours.

M. D. GRAY.

Date of Primary Election Changed to June 5, 1897.

Pursuant to the call of the Chairman of the county Democratic Executive committee, the committee met in D. E. Castleman's law office in Burlington, last Monday afternoon. The following members were present: D. E. Castleman, chairman; B. L. Rice, Secretary, P. E. Ca-on, proxy for Elijah Parker; Reuben Conner, Richard Stephens, Robt. McGlasson, Geo. Ossman, proxy for J. C. Hughes.

The chairman stated the object of the meeting to be for the purpose of considering the propriety of changing the date of the primary election as fixed at the last meeting. A motion to reconsider the action of the committee on the second Monday in December was made and carried, and the order made on that date is now held for naught.

It was agreed by the committee to hold a primary election to nominate candidates for the various county offices to be filled at the regular election in November, 1897. It was further agreed that said primary election be held on the first Saturday in June, 1897, and the Executive Committee will meet in the Court-house in Burlington, at 2 o'clock p. m., on Monday, June 7th, 1897, and count the votes cast for each candidate for the respective offices, and the candidate receiving the highest number of votes cast for any office will be declared the Democratic nominee for that office.

The committee adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That all persons who voted for Bryan and Sewall at the last November election, and all persons who did not vote but would have voted for Bryan and Sewall had they voted, and all young men who will be legal voters at the next November election, and all persons who will be legal voters at said November election, and will pledge themselves to support the Democratic party and the nominees of said primary election, shall be allowed to vote.

Resolved, That all persons who desire to be candidates before said primary election shall, on or before the 5th day of April, 1897, record their names with the chairman of the county committee, and pay their assessments to him.

Resolved, That only such candidates who pay their assessments to defray the expenses of said primary election, on or before the fifth day of April, 1897, shall be entitled to have their name placed upon the ballots to be voted for.

Resolved, That all candidates for precinct offices and for Coroner who wish their names to appear upon the ballots for said primary, shall pay to the chairman of the county committee one dollar, to help pay the expenses of said primary election.

The chairman and secretary were authorized to assess the candidates to defray the expenses of the primary election.

Elvin J. Curry qualified as notary public.

Mrs. Drusilla Overhelman's will probated, and William Yager qualified as executor. C. B. Myers, T. B. Castleman and Fred Utz appointed appraisers.

William Yager appointed guardian for Stella Myers.

W. H. Rice qualified as Police Judge for the town of Florence.

S. W. Tolin executed bond to the Commonwealth, to operate a ferry at Lawrenceburg, and filed ferry rates.

Commissioner Posey on Monday sold the Kentucky Midland Rail road to Attilla Cox for the creditors and bondholders of the road. The upset price was $150,000 and this was the only bid made. This road cost considerable money to construct. Frankfort and Franklin county paid $250,000, Scott county $100,000; City of Paris $50,000; citizens of Frankfort $170,000; Home Construction Company $225,000; making a total of $795,000. This was Frankfort's venture and all was lost. What will be done with it remains with those who own its bonds and its securities. It is said a new company will be reorganized to operate this road.—Argus.

OUT in Kansas a stateman has drafted a bill which will become a law, emphasizing this remarkable policy. It provides that no person shall own more land than a homestead, if others desire the surplus for a homestead, and, if a tender of a reasonable sum be refused, the intending purchaser may go to the Courts, where the jury will fix the price, the land owner refusing to sell paying the cost of the suit.

IT did not take the Indiana legislature long to dispose of the Senatorial question. Mr. Fairbanks, the choice of President-elect Mckinley, won the nomination with hands down. The opposition did considerable boasting as to how he would be slaughtered, but the caucuss did not show any such result.

SOME of those who are subject to work on the public roads, are not pleased with the order of the Fiscal Court designating ten hours as a days work, and fixing the compensation for a days work for a two-horse team and hand at $2 50 per day. They think the hours too long, and the pay for the hand and team too small.

We believe the Governor will prevent a lynching at Frankfort if the Sheriff does not.—Louisville Commercial.

Yes, and it is very easy for the Governor to imagine that the Sheriff will not prevent the lynching, and then call out the militia.

IN correcting the committee's order for the primary election last week, the following, "and all persons who will be legal voters at said Nov. election," should have been stricken out to make the order as adopted. That correction has been made, and the order as published is now correct.

THE wool-growers, and manufacturers of wool in the East, are at loggerheads on the tariff question. Manufacturers do not want a tariff on wool, while the growers are demanding a high tariff, and threatening to elect silver men to Congress if their demands are not granted.

MR. PLATT had the Republican members of the New York legislature well disciplined, and when the caucuss met to name a candidate for United States Senator only seven votes were recorded against him.

THERE are fifty-two penitentiaries and over 17,000 jails in the United States. They cost $500,000,000 to build them. The criminal expenses to the country is not less than $100,000,000 annually.

W. W. Grimsley, M. C. Carroll, J. F. Blyth, C. L. Crisler and Elmer Beall constitued the force of candidates that left Burlington Tuesday morning to attack the voters' trocha

IT is reported that Mr. Hanna's health is giving way under the strain consequent upon his effort to manipulate everything pertaining to the Republican party.

THE newspaper reports concerning the Cuban war, and the composition of McKinley's cabinet are just about on a par as regards reliability.

SOME of the older leaders of the Republican party have an attack of the mean grins every time Hanna's name is mentioned in their presence.

THE Senate has passed a Free Homestead Bill, which opens up to settlement 33,252,540 acres of public land acquired from the Indians.

SENATOR SHERMAN'S Senatoral slippers are very much in demand in Ohio, hence the prolonged effort to get him into the cabinet.

ONE of the Newport banks put up its blinds last Monday, and the citizens there are considerably worked up over the failure.

AT the present rate of increase the United States Senate will soon be composed entirely of representatives of corporations.

IT looks as though the Cuban war is drawing to a close. Spain wants to quit, but is too plucky to "hollow" enough.

THE Trimble county Republican Committee has endorsed Leiberth, of Newport, for Collector in this Revenue District.

JUDGE DONALDSON, of Carroll county, is recognizing the unwritten law in his court.

BRYAN'S REMARKABLE VOTE.

[Rocky Mountain News.]

Cleveland carried California in 1892 by 147 and Bryan received 22,000 more votes than Cleveland received, and yet McKinley carried California.

Cleveland carried Illinois in 1892 by 26,993 and Bryan received 33,397 more votes than Cleveland received—yet McKinley carried Illinois.

Cleveland carried Indiana in 1892 by 7,125 and Bryan received 42,000 more votes than Cleveland received—yet McKinley carried Indiana.

Harrison carried Iowa in 1892 by 23,729 and Bryan received 4,541 more votes than Harrison received—yet McKinley carried Iowa.

Cleveland carried Kentucky in 1892 by 40,020 and Bryan received 42,336 more votes than Cleveland received—yet McKinley carried Kentucky.

Harrison carried Michigan in 1892 by 20,142 and Bryan received 4,000 more votes than Harrison received—yet McKinley carried Michigan.

Harrison carried Minnesota in 1892 by 21,903 and Bryan received 16,714 more votes than Harrison received—yet McKinley carried Minnesota.

Harrison carried Ohio in 1892 by 1,072 and Bryan received 16,714 more votes than Harrison received—yet McKinley carried Ohio.

Harrison carried Oregon in 1892 and Bryan received 6,000 more votes than Harrison received—yet McKinley carried Oregon.

THE following from the Kentuckian-Citizen, applies, doubtless to every county in the State. It says:

"It has always been said that the poor, and not the rich, pay the taxes, and by a glance over the Assessor's books one is almost convinced that this is true. If a man or some poor widow owns a little home, it is assessed to about its full value, but if a man has thousands in cash in bank he has a chance to hide his possessions and the Assessor can not reach him. In the assessment of this county the past year only about $50,000 in cash is given in but by the statements of five of the banks in the county published since Jan. 1st, it is shown that they have on deposit $450,000 54, and the Northern and Millersburg banks to hear from. They certainly would increase the deposits to $550,000, and deducting the $50,000, which is given in for taxation, would leave a half million on which no tax is paid, making a loss to the county and State of $3,855. The banks are not responsible for this, but the individuals, and when they make oath to the Assessor as to their property they are liable to arrest for false swearing. There should be something done to compel the people who have money to give in their full amount and pay taxes on it."

SEVERAL State legislatures are now in session.

THE voters of the Verona precinct are calling upon Dr. Grubbs to become a candidate for the legislature. The call appears in another column.

IT seems to be a settled fact that Senator John Sherman, of Ohio, is to be the next Secretary of State, and already has he veered on the Cuban question.

ACCORDING to the notion of the promotors of that monetary convention in session in Indianapolis, last week, people who live in a city of less than 8,000 know nothing about the financial question.

THAT Maceo, the Cuban General, is dead, can no longer be doubted, but just how his death was brought about will never be known, certain, except to those who participated in the fight that ended his brilliant military career.

SOME of the State officials, who have been investigating the matter, say that an increase of the rate of taxation to fifty-five cents on the $100 worth of taxable property in the State would bring in apditional revenue to the amount of at least $500,000 per year, and that within three years the State could pay off the bulk of her outstanding obligations.

THIS week C. L. Crisler announces himself as a candidate for a renomination and election to the office of jailer. He is an old time Democrat, and has always responded to his party's call in local campaigns. If nominated and reelected he will continue to look after the public interests intrusted to him, with fidelity, and the promptness resulting from his long official experience.

It is thought that Allen and Barren counties have a great field of oil.

E. J. Thisler of Mercer county, bought about 12,000 bushels of wheat last summer at 50 and 60 cts. a bushel. The other day he sold the whole lot at $1 to Cogar & Davis, of Danville.—Advocate.

It is probable that few appreciate the extent of ravages of swine plague this year. The Iowa Crop Bureau announces that out of a total supply of 6,000,000 hogs this year in that state at least 2,000,000 have succumbed to disease.

Chas. B. Ecton, of Winchester, sold about 2100 bushels of wheat, the crop of 1895 and 1896, to P. J. Petra, of Mt. Sterling, to be shipped from the warehouse at Winchester to Mt. Sterling. Price $1 01 per bushel on board the cars.

Messrs. T. F. Dunlap and Claud Williams returned last week from Atlanta, Ga., where they disposed of 26 cotton mules at an average of $71 per head, about $15 per head less than the price paid at the same time last year.—Midway Clipper.

Mr. Adam Conrad, who lives near Dry Ridge, and who is one of Grant county's progressives farmers, raised last year on two acres of ground 4,285 pounds of tobacco. January 1, he delivered the crop to a buyer, obtaining 5 cents a pound for it.—Williamstown Courier.

J. W. Rice, one of the most extensive and observant farmers in Anderson county, reports that he finds immense quantities of the chinch bug about his farm. They are hidden about old logs and stumps and in the roots of corn stalks. He fears that this pest will greatly damage the next year's crop of wheat, and suggests that where the wheat is rank enough to permit it, sheep should be allowed to graze over the fields during February and March. He cites several instances that have come under his personal observation in which fields that bid fair to make abundant crops turned out to be almost failures, while others that had been pastured until they were bare made a fine yield. He accounts for this on the theory that the sheep killed out the insects, allowed the grain to grow, and those not pastured were destroyed by the chinch bug.—Anderson News.

Date of Primary Election Changed to June 5, 1897.

Pursuant to the call of the Chairman of the county Democratic Executive committee, the committee met in D. E. Castleman's law office in Burlington, last Monday afternoon. The following members were present: D. E. Castleman, chairman; B. L. Rice, Secretary, P. E. Cason, proxy for Elijah Parker; Reuben Conner, Richard Stephens, Robt. McGlasson, Geo. Ossman, proxy for J. C. Hughes.

The chairman stated the object of the meeting to be for the purpose of considering the propriety of changing the date of the primary election as fixed at the last meeting. A motion to reconsider the action of the committee on the second Monday in December was made and carried, and the order made on that date is now held for naught.

It was agreed by the committee to hold a primary election to nominate candidates for the various county offices to be filled at the regular election in November, 1897. It was further agreed that said primary election be held on the first Saturday in June, 1897, and the Executive Committee will meet in the Court-house in Burlington, at 2 o'clock p. m., on Monday, June 7th, 1897, and count the votes cast for each candidate for the respective offices, and the candidate receiving the highest number of votes cast for any office will be declared the Democratic nominee for that office.

The committee adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That all persons who voted for Bryan and Sewall at the last November election, and all persons who did not vote but would have voted for Bryan and Sewall had they voted, and all young men who will be legal voters at the next November election, and will pledge themselves to support the Democratic party and the nominees of said primary election, shall be allowed to vote.

Resolved, That all persons who desire to be candidates before said primary election shall, on or before the 5th day of April, 1897, record their names with the chairman of the county committee, and pay their assessments to him.

Resolved, That only such candidates who pay their assessments to defray the expenses of said primary election, on or before the fifth day of April, 1897, shall be entitled to have their name placed upon the ballots to be voted for.

Resolved, That all candidates for precinct offices and for Coroner who wish their names to appear upon the ballots for said primary, shall pay to the chairman of the county committee one dollar, to help pay the expenses of said primary election.

The chairman and secretary were authorized to assess the candidates to defray the expenses of the primary election.

IN the proper column will be found the announcement of John W. Berkshire, of Petersburg, as a candidate for Sheriff. Mr. Berkshire is a Democrat from the ground up, and an all around clever gentleman, and if made Sheriff of the county will fill the office with honor to himself and credit to the county.

JUDGE DENNY, of Lexington, has not been in a good humor with the Republican party since Col. Breckinridge was taken up and nominated for Congress over his protest; and it seems that he will have to make good his declaration that he will confine himself to the practice of law in the future. The Judge will soon discover that he will lose nothing by adhering to his profession.

STORMING THE HEIGHTS.

They Prove Obstructions in Many Paths, But God Will Make Them Level as the Plain—Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D.

Zerubbabel! Who owned that difficult name, in which three times the "B" occurs, disposing most people to stammer in the pronunciation? Zerubbabel was the splendid man called to rebuild the destroyed temple at Jerusalem. Stone for the building had been quarried and the trowel had rung at the laying of the corner stone, and all went well, when the Cuthaeans offered to help in the work. They were a bad lot of people and Zerubbabel declined their help, and then the trouble began. The Cuthaeans prejudiced the secretary of the treasury against Zerubbabel so that the wages of the carpenters and masons could not be paid, and the heavy cedar timbers which had been dragged from Mount Lebanon to the Mediterranean and floated in rafts from Reynout to Joppa and were to be drawn by ox team from Joppa to Jerusalem, had halted, and as a result of the work of those jealous Cuthaeans for 16 years the building of the temple was stopped. But after 16 years Zerubbabel, the mighty soul, got a new call from God to go ahead with the temple building, and the Angel of the Lord in substance said: "They have piled up obstacles in the way of Zerubbabel until they have become as a mountain, height above height, crag above crag, but it shall all be thundered down and made flat and smooth as the floor of a house. 'Who art thou, O great mountain, before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain.'"

Well, the Cuthaeans are not all dead yet. They are busy in every neighborhood and every city and every nation of every age, heaping obstacles in the way of the cause of God. They have piled up hindrances above hindrances, until they have become a hill, and the hill has become a mountain, and the mountain has become an Alp, and there it stands, right in the way of all movements of the world's salvation. Some people are so discouraged about the height and breadth of this mountain in front of them that they have done nothing for 16 years, and many of those who are at work trying to do something toward removing the mountain toil in such a way that I can see they have so much faith that the mountain of hindrance will ever be removed. They feel they must do their duty, but they feel all the time—I can hear it in their prayers and exhortations—that they are striking their pickaxes and shovels into the side of the Rocky mountains. If the good Lord will help me while I preach I will give you the names of some of the high mountains which are really in the way, and then show you that those mountains are to be prostrated, torn down, ground up, leveled, put out of sight forever. "Who art thou, O great mountain? before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain."

First, there is the Mountain of Prejudice, as long as a range of the Pyrenees. Prejudice against the Bible as a dull book, an inconsistent book, a cruel book, an unclean book, and in every way an unfit book. The most of them have never read it. They think the strata of the rocks contradict the account in Genesis. The poor souls do not know that the Mosaic account agrees exactly with the geological account. No violin or flute were in better accord. By crowbar and pickax and shovel and blasting powder the geologist goes down in the earth and says: "The first thing created in the furnishing of the earth was the plants." Moses says "Ay! I told you that in the Book of Genesis: "The earth brought forth grass and herb, yielding seed after his kind, and the tree yielding fruit.'" The geologist goes on digging in the earth, and says: "The next thing in the furnishing of the earth was the creatures of the sea." Moses says: "Ay! I told you that was next in the Book of Genesis: 'God said: 'Let the waters bring forth abundantly the moving creatures that have life;' and God created great whales.'"

The geologist goes on digging, and says: "The next thing in the furnishing of the earth was the creation of the cattle and the reptiles and the beasts of the field."

"Ay!" says Moses, "I told you that was next in the first chapter of Genesis: 'And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind, cattle and creeping things, and beast of the earth after his kind.'" The geogolist goes on digging in the earth, and says: "The next creature was the human family." "Ay!" says Moses, "I told you that was next in the Book of Genesis: 'So God created man in His own image, in the image of God created He him; male and female, created He them.'" Those prejudiced against the Bible do not know that the explorations in Egypt and Palestine and Syria are confirming the Scriptures—the same facts written on monuments and on the walls of exhumed cities as written in the Bible. The city of Pithom has been unburied, and its bricks are found to have been made without straw, exactly corresponding with the Bible story of the persecuted heroes. On terra cotta cylinder recently brought up from thousands of years of burial, the capture of Babylon by Cyrus is told. On a Babylonian gem recently found are the figures of a tree, a man, a woman, and a serpent, and the hands of a man and woman are stretched toward the tree as if to pluck the fruit. Thus the Bible story of the fall is confirmed.

In a museum in Constantinople you see a piece of the wall that once in the ancient Temple of Jerusalem separated the court of the Gentiles and the court of the Israelites, to which Paul refers when he says of Christ, "He is our peace, who hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us." On tablets recently discovered have been found the names of prominent men in the Bible, spelled a little different, according to the demands of ancient language. "Adamu" for Adam, "Abramu" for Abraham, "Abilu" for Abel, and so on. Twenty-two feet under ground has been found a seal inscribed with the words: "Haggai, son of Shebaniah," thousands of years ago cut, showing that the Prophet Haggai, who wrote a part of the Bible, was not a myth. The royal engineers have found, 80 feet below the surface of the ground at Jerusalem, Phoenician pottery and hewn stones with inscriptions, showing that they were furnished by Hiram, king of Tyre, just as the Bible says they were. The great names of Bible history, that many suppose are names of many imaginary beings, are found cut into imperishable stones which have within a few years been rolled up from their entombment of ages, such as Sennacherib and Tiglath-Pileser. On the edge of a bronzed step, and on burned brick has been found the name of Nebuchadnezzar. Henry Rawlinson and Oppert and Hincks, and Palestine exploration societies and Asyriologists, and Egyptologists, have rolled another Bible up from the depths of the earth, and lo! it corresponds exactly with our Bible, the rock Bible just like the printed Bible, inscriptions on cylinders and brick work cut 3,800 years before Christ testifying to the truth of what we read 1,897 years after Christ. The story of the Tower of Babel has been confirmed by the fact that recently at Babel an oblong pile of brick 110 feet high evidence the remains of a fallen tower. In the inspired book of Ezra we read of the great and noble Asnapper, a name that meant nothing especial until recently in pried-up Egyptian sculpture we have the story there told of him as a great hunter as well as a great warrior. What I say now is news to those prejudiced against the Bible. They are so far behind the times that they do not know that the Old Book is being proved true by the prying eye of the antiquarian and the ringing hammer of the archaeologist and the plunging crowbar of the geologist. No more is infidelity characterized by its blasphemy than by its ignorance, but oh! what a high mountain of prejudice against the Bible, against Christianity, against churches, against all evangelizing enterprises—a mountain that casts its long, black shadows over this continent and over all continents. Geographers tell us that Mt. Everest is the highest mountain in the world. Oh, no! The mountain of prejudice against Christianity is higher than the highest crags that dare the lightnings of Heaven. Before our Zerubbabel can it ever become a plain?

Another mountain of hindrance is that of positive and outspoken immorals. There is the Mountain of Inebriacy. It is piled high with kegs and demijohns and decanters and hogsheads, on which sit the victims of that traffic whose one business is to rob earth and Heaven of the most generous and large-hearted and splendid of the human race. If their business was to take the only mean and stingy and contemptible and useless, we would not say much against the work, for there are tens of thousands of men and women who are a nuisance to the world, and their obliteration from human society would be an advantage to all that is good. The removal of these moral deficits would not arouse in us much of a protest. But insobriety takes the best. The Mountain of Inebriacy stands in the way of the Kingdom of God, and hundreds of thousands of men, but for that hindrance, would step right into the ranks of the Lord's host and march heavenward, each one taking a regiment with him. The Mountain of Inebriacy is not an ordinary mountain; but it is armed. It is a line of fortresses continually blazing away its destructive forces upon all our neighborhoods, towns and cities, their volleys of death pouring down upon the homes and churches. Under this power more than one hundred thousand men and women are in this country every year imprisoned, and an army of six hundred thousand drunkards almost shake the earth with their staggering tread. It causes in this country three hundred murders and four hundred suicides a year. This mountain of inebriacy has not only assaulted the land, but bombarded the shipping of the sea and some of the most appalling shipwrecks on Atlantic and Pacific coast have been the result. What sank the steamer Rothsay Castle, on the way from Liverpool to Dublin, destroying one hundred human lives? A drunken sea captain. What blew up the Ben Sherrod on the Mississippi and sent one hundred and fifty to horrible death? A drunken crew. What drove the breakers a steamer making its way from New York to Charleston, and sent whole families, on the way home from summer watering places, to the merciless depths of the sea? A drunken sea captain. Gather up from the depths of the rivers and lakes and oceans the bones of those shipwrecked by intoxicated captains and crews and you could build out of them a temple of horrors, all the pillars and altars and floors and ceilings fashioned of human skulls. Is it possible that such a Mountain of Inebriacy can ever be made a plain?

Yonder, also, is the mountain of crime, with its strata of fraud and malpractice and malfeasance and blackmail and burglary and piracy and embezzlement and libertinism and theft, all its height manned by the desperadoes, the cut-throats, the pickpockets, the thimble riggers, the plunderers, the marauders, the pillagers, the corsairs, the wreckers, the bandits, the tricksters, the forgers, the thugs, the garrotters, the firefiends, the dynamiters, the shoplifters, the kleptomaniacs, the pyromaniacs, the dipsomaniacs, the smugglers, the kidnapers, the Jack Sheppards, the Robert Macaires and the Macbeths of villainy. The crimes of the world! Am I not right in calling them, when piled up together, a mountain? But we can not bring ourselves to appreciate great heights except by comparison. You think of Mt. Washington as high, especially those of you who ascended as of old, on mule back, or recently by mail train, to the Tip Top house. Oh, no! that is not high, for it is only about 6,000 feet, whereas, rising on this western hemisphere are Chimborazo, 21,000 feet high, and Mt. Sahama, 23,000 feet high, and Mt. Sarota, 24,800 feet high. But this is not the highest mountain on the western hemisphere. The highest mountain is the mountain of crime.

And is it possible that this mountain, before our Zerubbabel, can ever be made a plain?

There is also a Mountain of War, the most volcanic of all mountains—the Vesuvius which, not content, like the Vesuvius of Italy, with whelming two cities, Herculaneum and Pompeii, has covered with its fiery scoria thousands of cities, and would like to whelm all the cities of both hemispheres. Give this mountain full utterance and it would cover up Washington and New York and London as easily as a householder, with his shovel, at ten o'clock at night, banks a grate fire with ashes. The mountain is a pile of fortresses, barracades and armories, the world's artillery heaped, wheels above wheels, columbiads above columbiads, 74 pounders above 74 pounders, wrecked nations above wrecked nations.

This mountain of war is not only loaded to cannonade the earth, but it is also a cemetery, holding the corpses of 30,000,000 slain in the wars of Alexander and Cyrus, 60,000,000 slain in Roman wars, 180,000,000 slain in war with Turks and Saracens, and holding about 35,000,000,000 corpses, not million but billion, which was the estimate made by Edmund Burke more than 100 years ago of those who had been destroyed by war, so that you would have to add many more millions now. Twenty years ago a careful author estimated that about fourteen times the then population of the world had gone down in battle or in hospital after battle. Ah! This Mountain of War is not like an ordinary mountain. It is like Kilauea, one of the Sandwich islands, which holds the greatest volcano in all the earth, and concerning which I wrote from the Sandwich islands a few years ago:

"What a hissing, bellowing, tumbling, soaring force is Kilauea! Lake of unquenchable fire; convolutions and paroxysms of flame; elements of nature in torture; torridity and luridly; congregation of dreads, molten horrors; sulphurous abysms; swirling mystery of all time; infinite turbulence; chimney of perdition; wallowing terrors; 15 acres of threats; glooms insufferable and Dantesque; caldron stirred by the chamber witch of Pandemonium; camp fire of the armies of Diabolus; wrath of the mountains in full bloom; shimmering incandescence; pyrotechnics of the planet; furnace blast of the ages; Kilauea!" But, my friends, mightier, higher, vaster, hotter, more raging is the volcanic mountain of war. It has been blazing for hundreds of years, and will keep on blazing until, until—but I dare not hazard a prophecy. Can it be that its fires will ever be put out? Can it be that its roar will ever be silenced? Can it be that before our Zerubbabel that blazing mountain will ever become a plain?

The mightiest, grandest movement for driving brutal war out of the earth dates from January 11, 1897. The men who on the other side of the sea did most to effect that plan of arbitration have made themselves immortal. The evening of the present administration of the United States government has been honored with the gladdest event of 18 centuries. All civilized nations will copy the sublime example. I implore the illustrious senate of the United States to allow nothing to interfere with a vote of ratification, that the bells of Christendom may ring out, "Peace on earth, good will toward men." Senators, many of you my personal friends, let me say that this is the opportunity of your lives. By emphatic and enthusiastic vote rise to the splendor of the occasion and win favor of all the good on earth and all the mighty in Heaven. Let aye, aye of our American senate resound through all the capitals of Europe and make all the arsenals and armories of the round world know that there shall be no more murder among nations.

There is also the long range of mountains, longer than the Appalachian range, longer than the Caucasian range, longer than Sierra Nevada range—the piled-up opposition of bad literature, bad theatres, bad institutions, bad amusements, bad centuries, bad religions: Paganism, Hindooism, Buddhism, Mohammedanism and buttressed and enthroned Godlessness, devoted to ambition and lust and hydra-headed, argus-eyed abomination, as it stands with lifted fist and mocking lips, challenging Jehovah upon the throne of the universe to strike if he dare. Oh, it is a great mountain, as my text declares. There is no use in denying it. The most authentic statistics declare it. The signs of the times prove it. All Christian workers realize it. It is a mountain. "The mountain can never be brought down," says worldly speculation. "The mountain can never be made a plain," says small faith in the churches. Well, let us see. Let us look about for the implements we can lay our hands on. Let us count the number on our side who are willing to dig with a shovel, or bore a tunnel, or blast a rock. Let us see if there is any foresign help that will come in to re-enforce us. I do not want to make myself absurb by attempting an impossibility. If it is only one spade at the foot of Mount Blanc; if it is only one arm, capable of lifting but a few pounds, against a mountain that weighs a hundred million tons, let us quit before we make ourselves the travesty and caricature of the universe.

THE PROTECTION THEORY.

A Tariff That Prohibits Importations Yields no Revenue.

Secretary Carlisle effectually explodes the notion that protective taxes, under the theories now prevailing, can be used to supply the deficit in the revenue. He says that while the revenue from customs and from internal taxes yielded a surplus, the fact that protection was destructive to revenue was overlooked by the masses. Conditions, however, have changed, and if the usual proportion of taxes hereafter is to be derived from customs, the protective theory must be abandoned.

The protection theory, as practically advocated in this country, would necessarily reduce our revenue to a minimum. The details of the theory have often been stated, so that a bare outline will answer our present purpose. It is as follows:

Articles not produced in this country, or produced in quantities entirely insufficient to supply the demand, should be put on the free list.

Articles produced in this country in sufficient quantity should be subjected to a duty sufficient to protect the native producer.

Under the first head raw sugar was put on the free list because it yielded too much revenue and too little protection. Before the McKinley bill was passed it yielded about $55,000,000 in revenue per year. The free-listing of this article alone was sufficient to produce the deficit in the revenue resulting from the McKinley bill.

The protection demanded by the protected interests is such as will check importations—that is, which will either stop their importation entirely or reduce them to a nominal figure. When this happens the revenue from customs ceases entirely or is reduced also to a nominal figure. The programme has never been fully carried out, but the McKinley act came nearest to it. In the fiscal year 1890 the revenue from customs was about $230,000,000. In the next fiscal year the revennes were largely swollen by importations made before the bill went into effect, but still the customs revenue dropped below $220,000,000. In 1892 it was down to $177,000,000. In 1893 it was up to $203,000,000, but in the fiscal year 1894 it was down to $131,000,000. Two months after the close of that fiscal year the law was repealed and the customs revenue has been increasing and the deficit decreasing in every fiscal year since that time, until the present, which has still more than six months to run.

It should also be noted that the receipts of the fiscal year 1896 were several millions in excess of the expenditures of the year 1890. If expenditures had not been increased there would have been no deficit in the last fiscal year.

Nothing can be clearer than that a tariff which prohibits importations will yield no revenue. The nearer it approaches this condition the less revenue will it yield. Protection and revenue are antipodal. Complete protection, where the tariff is confined to protected articles, means no revenue, while a tariff for revenue only involves no protection if laid on noncompetitive articles.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE HEARINGS ON THE TARIFF.

Developments Which Are Not Pleasing to the Republicans.

There is manifest dissatisfaction in republican circles over the developments in the tariff hearings in Washington. It is clear that the witnesses who were heard were not swayed by the slightest interest in the general welfare, but by a consuming desire in each case to see that "No. 1" is not neglected. The New York Morning Advertiser says that "the only persons who can read the testimony given so far with any great degree of satisfaction are the saturnine free traders, who hold as a matter of faith that a protective tariff is simply an aggregated jobbery of all the self-seeking individuals of a country who can get the ear of the government. With scarcely an exception, every witness heard during the first two sessions has frankly admitted that he wants the present tariff raised merely to increase his own profits in business, without the slightest concern whether such a change would increase or diminish the revenues of the government."

It may be said that when protection organs find fault with the tariff goings-on at Washington, the public is justified in protesting against the proceedings. Everybody knows, of course, that very handsome sums were paid for protection, and everybody expected that a good deal of it would be demanded in return for the cash that was generously paid in advance, but the programme of the tariff hearings is none the less objectionable to a patient and long-suffering people. Commenting on the spectacle that is now presented at the federal capital, the Morning Advertiser says: "This truly is not an exhibition of a very exalted form of patriotism, nor one that advocates of a reasonable degree of protection to American labor can view with pride or pleasure. It is not likely that the country will view any legislation shaped to reflect it with other feelings than those of resentment."

This is a republican view of the proceedings that are supposed to lead up to the tariff bill that will be framed for presentation to the Fifty-fifth congress in extra session assembled. It is hardly to be wondered at that the people are looking forward to the future with considerable apprehension.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

—The year ended in dullness and depression. It might have ended in great activity and abounding prosperity. The reason it did not was simply that Mr. McKinley and his partisans have decided to treat his election as a popular decision in favor of high tariffs, and to hold a tariff-ripping, business-disturbing extra session in the spring, lest by fall there should be no excuse for rewarding the campaign contributors.—N. Y. World.

AN INEQUITABLE SYSTEM.

The word "reciprocity" has a taking sound about it, and it is very pleasant to know that one person reciprocates another person's affection, or that one nation reciprocates another nation's good will. The general idea of reciprocity in business or in commerce partakes also of the same sentiment—that it is pleasant and equitable that nations should interchange commodities on a reciprocal plan.

The ways and means committee of the house of representatives is engaged in the task of compiling a tariff bill to secure a bigger revenue to the treasury, which is to be discussed during the extra session of the Fifty-fifth congress that will be convoked soon after the installation of the president-elect. And we are now assured on unimpeachable authority that "reciprocity" is to be one of the leading features of the new measure. Now, while reciprocity is a very pretty arrangement in the abstract, as well as in any individual case, it often happens that it is an utterly inequitable system of doing business.

It looks well, for example, to say that the United States government expects to have reciprocity with Germany; if she admit free of duty our pork, canned meats, etc., which she has been treating quite scurvily, we shall admit her wine and sugar free of duty. The arrangement may be completely satisfactory and equitable in so far as Germany may be regarded as one individual national entity, and the United States another individual national entity. But if we look at the matter a little more closely, the equitable look of this much-lauded reciprocity will take on quite a different appearance.

The arrangement that Germany shall admit American pork, canned meats, etc., free of duty within her borders is a very delightful arrangement for the millionaire pig-stickers and packers of Chicago. It will give an enormous fillip to their business, and will help multiply rapidly the millions they have already. But in order that this reciprocity should be strictly equitable, the pig-stickers and packers of Chicago should give up some advantage which they already possess in return for the big additional advantage which they foresee coming to them. No other kind or class of industry in the United States should be punished, or be made to pay, for the benefit which the reciprocity will confer on the hog-killers of the west.

But the peculiarity of the proposed reciprocity is that the hog-killers are to get the benefit of it, and that the wine-growers and sugar-growers are to be made to pay for that benefit. And it will be admitted that reciprocity of that sort is not equitable. Hawaii's sugar is already admitted into the United States free of duty; and, if Germany's enormous crop of beet sugar be also admitted free of duty, as is seriously proposed in the reciprocity clause of the coming tariff bill, the sugar planters of the United States will inevitably be ruined.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

WHO CAUSED THE DEFICIT?

Started by the Republicans and the McKinley Bill.

It is much more important to find a remedy for the national deficiency in revenue than to fix the responsibility for it. And yet Senator Sherman's charge that it is due to the Wilson bill ought not to pass unchallenged.

Senator Sherman's memory may not be so good as it once was, but he can easily verify the fact that there was a deficiency in the last three months of the Harrison administration; that in his last annual report (December, 1892) Secretary Foster suggested an increased tax on whisky to meet the impending deficit, and that one of his last official acts (February 20, 1893) was to send a letter to the chief of the bureau of engraving and printing directing that immediate preparations be made for a bond issue, and that "in view of pressing contingencies" the "preparation of the designs and plates be hastened in every possible manner."

It is likewise a fact of record that during the fiscal year of 1894, under the McKinley law, the expenditures exceeded the revenues to the amount of $60,803,260. This is more than the deficiency in any year under the Wilson bill. It was $42,805,000 in 1895 and $25,203,000 in 1896.

The deficiency was started by the republicans when they cut down the revenues over $90,000,000 in the McKinley bill and increased the appropriations more than that in the first billion-dollar congress. Since then it has been continued by the extravagance of both parties in voting money without regard to income.—N. Y. World.

ELECTRIC LIGHT KILLS TREES.

Destroying Branches That Are Near Them —Trees Need Sleep.

Electric light is killing the trees of Chicago. This is the discovery which has been made recently by men interested in botany and forestry, and an examination has convinced the skeptical of the truth of the statement.

Since the city was lighted by the big arc lights, which are placed at the corners of the principal streets and in the middle of some of the long blocks, many of the trees have been gradually dying. The decay has been slow, but that is has been sure is perfectly true in the opinion of those who study trees with care and can note the changes in their physical health day by day. Just as a physician can notice the slow growth of disease in the human being. Of late the decay has become marked, so that it may be noticed by the layman as well as the trained scientist. Dead branches may be noticed on many trees in various parts of the city near electric arc lights. Most of the trees, within 15 feet of arc lights, which have been placed in their present position more than a year or two ago, are dying rapidly, and are nearly stripped to their lowest branches. And then on the other branches the leaves have not been as plentiful as in the past.

The nearer the tree is to the light the greater the damage and the faster they decay under the influence of the electric light, but even those within a hundred feet of the arc lights feel their influence, although to a modified extent.

A stroll around the city shows the same condition of affairs everywhere, and those who have investigated the matter have convinced themselves beyond the possibility of mistake that the electric light is responsible for the injury, and it is not, as some might suggest, due to the smoke and noxious atmosphere of the great city.

A scientist interested in the matter has been corresponding with botanists in other cities, and he finds that the same decay of trees placed near electric lights is noticed in every city. It is especially evident in Montreal and Philadelphia, the two best lighted cities on the American continent.

The trees begin to lose their leaves and the branches to gradually decay on top or on the side facing the light and gradually losing them downward.

The theory of botanists is that the injury is due to the fact that the light has the same effect that it would have on a human being who was compelled to live constantly within its glare. The trees are unable to sleep at night. When they, like the rest of nature, need sleep the great glaring electric lights prevent it. Trees are unable to live in almost eternal day. They are like the rest of nature, whether animals or plants, and demand rest.

It is the theory of some wise scientific men that the electric light is not only responsible for injury to plant life by its immediate vicinity, but that it has an injurious effect on man. They are said by some to be responsible for human slight defects and nervousness and insomnia. The glare of the lights injures the eyes and makes increased nervousness. The lights themselves often interfere to some extent with the sleep of those who are in their immediate vicinity.—Chicago Times-Herald.

WAGON-BOX LIFTER.

A Simple Device That Saves Lots of Backache and Temper.

Below is a description, with cuts, of a wagon-box lifter that we have had in use for ten years. In that time it has paid for itself several times over in the saving of backaches and temper. I think Figs. 1 and 2 will make its construction plain. Fig. 1 shows the frame, or a portion of it, of the wagon shed and corn crib, with apparatus in place, and the wagon-box lifted part way. Fig. 2 shows the roller and drum, with ropes in place, detached.

The first thing we did was to spike (or bolt) two joists to the rafters as shown at L Fig. 1, and far enough between them to take a roller as long, at least, as the wagon-box, Fig. 2. Then we made a roller of 4x4 oak, leaving it square where it passed through the drum, A, Fig. 2. Then we bored an inch hole lengthwise in each end of the roller and drove in each hole a round iron pin for a gudgeon. Then by cutting a notch in the pieces L (as at K, Fig. 1), the roller was placed in position.

The drum is 15 inches in diameter and 8 inches long, with flanges 3 inches deep at A, Fig. 2.

The ropes C and B, Fig. 2, are ⅞ inch and are wound around the roller the same direction and are long enough to reach to the ground. The lower ends of the rope are attached to large rings as shown at D, Fig. 1. To these rings are attached two other ropes that go around the wagon-box; one end of each of these ropes has a hook attached. Around the drum is wound a ½-inch rope, but, of course, in the opposite direction to the ropes C and B, so that when the rope on the drum unwinds the other two wind up. The rope on the drum passes over a pulley B, Fig. 1, then down the side of the wall to the roller I, placed at a suitable height for winding while standing on the ground. The pins, X, work loosely through the roller I, and have knobs on each end to prevent them from dropping out.

After you have everything in place, drive your wagon under the roller, place the ropes under each end of wagon-box, and begin winding the roller I, Fig. 1, and see how easy it is for one man to remove a heavy wagon-box, and that without danger to either man or box.

We use cross-poles under the box after it is up out of the way, that rest on the nailing ties on each side of shed, to prevent any danger of the box falling. A careful examination of the two cuts will make all this plain.—C. L. Reamer, in Ohio Farmer.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

The more a milch cow will assimilate in excess of what is required for maintenance the better.

Cleanliness is as essential as shelter and food. Stock will not eat wet fodder to an advantage.

No matter how good a pedigree an animal may have, individual merit and good conditions are essential.

The principal advantage in using salt as a fertilizer is that it helps to make plant food in the air available.

With quite a number of farm products, low prices are caused not so much by overproduction as by poor quality.

With fattening hogs, allowing food to remain within reach after the appetite is satisfied injures the digestion and decreases thrift.—Farmers' Union.

Needs Careful Investigation.

Dealing in "futures" is a system that should be carefully investigated by congress. Some maintain that it is an advantage to farmers, while others assert that it depresses prices while products are held by the producers; the rise in prices going to a class which simply deposit certain sums as wagers on the results. There is no doubt, however, as long as the system exists there will continue to be an uncertainty in prices, and that the farmer will be compelled to suffer all the losses, but will not share in the profits. Much of the business done by the manipulators of wheat and other grains is not based on the articles at all, as it frequently happens that more grain is sold than exists in the whole country.—Colmes's Rural World.

A Homemade Bag Holder.

We glean the following idea from the Farmer's Advocate: Take an inch board, three feet long by 14 inches wide, and slant it. Then take two slats, three inches wide and three feet long, and nail them upright to the board about five inches from the top, to serve as feet. Drive a wire nail through each corner of board, and turn them up a little to hook the bags on. Nail the board down at the bottom, and one man can fill and tie the bags as fast as two men can clean the grain.

LICE ON LIVE STOCK.

As with All Other Ills Prevention Is Much Better Than Cure.

Lousiness is largely the result of stinted feed and the neglect to groom properly. Stock kept in a thrifty, growing condition are rarely, if ever, infested by these pests unless they come in contact with animals that are infested. But one lousy animal running with other stock will soon communicate the lice to all. When the insects once get a start they multiply so rapidly that in a short time the animal is fairly alive with them and is kept in perfect torment. It is next to impossible to get a lousy animal into a thrifty condition until the lice are gotten rid of.

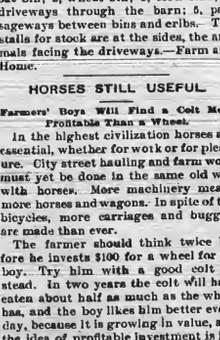
Stock that have to lie out, exposed to cold and storms, and are ill-fed are almost certain to become infested; this is so much the case that it seems that poor condition breeds lice.

As with all other ills to which stock is liable, prevention is much better than cure. Feeding well, giving clean, comfortable quarters with proper grooming, so as to keep the skin clean, will keep lice from getting a start.

One of the best, if not the best, remedies is staves-acre seeds, thoroughly bruised, and vinegar. This lotion will not only kill the lice, but destroy the nests as well. The staves-acre seeds bruised and made into an ointment, with lard is also a good remedy. It will be a good plan to repeat the application in ten days or two weeks, especially if the animals are badly affected.

In mild cases common tobacco steeped in water and sponged over the skin will rid the animal of lice. Still another remedy is to take one ounce of tobacco, two ounces of ground white hellebore, with about two pints and a half of vinegar; boil all well together, strain and then sponge the animals with it.

Feeding sulphur is also a good aid in ridding animals of lice. The objection to it is that if while it is in the system the animal should get wet considerable injury may result.



The quarters should be thoroughly cleansed up and whitewashed. It will help if carbolic acid is added to the whitewash. Generally it will pay to repeat the whitewash in a week or ten days.

When stock have been allowed to run together, if a portion of them show that they are infested with these pests it is best to treat all of them.—St. Louis Republic.

STOCK FARM BARN.

A Plan That Has Given Great Satisfaction to Its Designer.

The barn building illustrated below may be of any size desirable, the arrangement of stalls, bins, etc., fitting it for various dimensions. The upper plan represents the front elevation of the structure; 1 are the driveways through the barn; 2, the central portion containing bins and cribs; 3, stalls for stock; 4, driveway over the entrance to basement; 5, doors into stalls; 6, mangers; 7, mows for hay and straw; 8, entrance into sheep fold. The floor of the middle part of the barn (all of the barn except stalls) is 5 feet from the ground and under this floor is the sheep fold. The lower figure, 2, represents the raised floor; 1, oat bin; 2, wheat bin; 3, corn bins; 4, driveways through the barn; 5, passageways between bins and cribs. The stalls for stock are at the sides, the animals facing the driveways.—Farm and Home.

HORSES STILL USEFUL

Farmers' Boys Will Find a Colt More Profitable Than a Wheel.

In the highest civilization horses are essential, whether for work or for pleasure. City street hauling and farm work must yet be done in the same old way with horses. More machinery means more horses and wagons. In spite of the bicycles, more carriages and buggies are made than ever.

The farmer should think twice before he invests $100 for a wheel for his boy. Try him with a good colt instead. In two years the colt will have eaten about half as much as the wheel has, and the boy likes him better every day, because it is growing in value, and the idea of profitable investment is implanted.

As the chances for our western ranges are continually narrowing, and as our export trade is continually growing, we would seem to be surely approaching a better era for the producer. There may be ups and downs yet, but these united conditions must certainly establish a higher range of value for the future.—Wisconsin Agriculturist.

Produce Only the Best.

When looking over the prices quoted for any article produced on the farm and which is to be sold it may be noticed that there is quite a difference between "inferior" and "extra choice" grades. The difference between three and four cents per pound is but a cent, but it represents $2.50 on a 250-pound hog. Only the "extra choice" brings the highest price, and no farmer should sell anything that cannot be so graded

MATCH MAKING.

The Dangers of Bringing About Matrimonial Alliances.

"Of all inflictions," said a young professional man who has just had an experience, "deliver me from the match-maker. I feel myself competent to struggle with most of the ills of life; I have built up a good business in the face of what seemed impossible obstacles, and have maintained my standing and position, mentally, morally, physically, socially and financially, and have looked after members of my family who were unable to look after themselves. And all of this undertaking hasn't been half so trying and perplexing as the efforts of my friends to find me a wife, and the irritation incident to my refusal to accept the young woman when she was found and placed as a tempting bait before my eyes. I have quarreled with some of my boon companions, had unpleasantnesses with a number of my closest friends, and have indulged in infelicities, domestic and otherwise, when exasperated and hurried past further endurance. I have gently indicated to the members of my family and others that a little light mental gymnastics in the way of minding their own business would be of untold benefit to their intellects and a blessing unspeakable to me. And then there have been sharp words and tears and reproaches, and I have been made to appear ungrateful and unappreciative because I really wouldn't see what was best for me! As if a man who has reached the age of 40 years and has taken care of himself at least half of that time, isn't capable of judging even the least little bit of what is good for him. In the first place, I am not specially anxious to marry, and, in the second, I want to make my own selection, unhampered and unbiased by the views of anybody else. Haven't I got to live with her? And isn't my interest in the matter altogether ahead of that of anyone else? It seems so to me, and yet people will persist in forcing upon my attention ladies whom I would, under no circumstances, think of for a moment in such a relation.

"One of my best friends, a lady in whose family I have for years been almost as much at home as in my own dwelling, made up a little party, a few months ago, for a week's trip through the Adirondacks. When everything was settled, indeed just as we were about to start, I learned, for the first time, that my special comrade was a young woman to whom I had shown some attention the season before, but whose intimate acquaintance I had dropped for reasons not at all reflecting upon her, but simply because I was just a little weary of some of her peculiarities. For a moment I was inclined to give up the outing, the more so as my friend was fully aware of my feelings toward the young woman, but did not in the least sympathize with them. She liked her and determined to throw us together and literally force a proposal. Indeed, I afterward learned that she had said she would have us engaged before we were back again.

"Well, the long and short of it was we were not only engaged, but such desperate efforts were made to put me in a position where I could not in common reason refuse to propose to the girl that I was thoroughly disgusted, and haven't seen my friends since our little journey ended. And I care very little if we never meet again. Matchmakers have need of the greatest skill and adroitness in order to avoid bungling. And such skill is possessed by very few persons in this meddlesome world. It therefore behooves the average individual to be very wary of trying to force the inclinations of those between whom they desire to establish matrimonial alliances. Love is easily led, but never driven, a fact that a great many would-be match-makers never seem to realize."—N. Y. Ledger.

WORLD'S BOOK PRODUCTION.

A French authority gives some interesting figures as to the annual production of books. In 1895, according to this statement, 6,516 new books and new editions were issued in Great Britain, 5,469 in the United States, 23,607 in Germany, 12,495 in France and 9,437 in Italy. These are remarkable figures, but before any deductions are made from them it would be desirable to have some further information as to the manner in which the books have been compiled. Does anyone seriously suppose that more books are printed and published in Italy than in the United States? The fact is that the bibliographical methods of the countries named are so dissimilar that accurate comparison is impossible. The lists of publications given in the British trade journals are notoriously incomplete. Probably they include all that is important from the bookseller's point of view, but they take little or no account of the analogues of academical dissertations, reprints of magazine articles, trifles printed per nozze, and a variety of other pamphlets and small books that go to swell the figures of the "book production" of continental countries. Thus every person who takes a degree at one of the many universities in Germany must print a dissertation, and this, if it be only a compilation of a few pages, counts as a "book" when the figures come to be tabulated, and deepens the impression that every man in the fatherland of Goethe is engaged, more or less, in adding to the literature of the world. DID WHAT SHE COULD.

The Noble Self-Sacrifice of a Minister's Daughter.

Some years ago a clergyman moved from New England to the northern part of Iowa and settled upon a farm. Many people said that he was foolish to do this; that he was throwing his life away. He left behind him a comfortable home, pleasant associations, libraries, schools and congenial neighbors. Besides, he was old and beginning to be feeble. But he felt that there was awaiting him a broad field, unplowed and ready for spiritual cultivation.

He had meant to go into this home missionary work years before, but his wife had persuaded him to wait until their daughter had finished her education at an eastern college. Now the opportunity had arrived, and with an eagerness like that of youth he left a community that, as he expressed it, had been "for generations preached to death," in order to go to a people begging to be preached to life.

There in the middle west the family built a small cabin of three rooms and a "lean-to" for the kitchen. No trees protected them from the burning sun in summer or the fierce hurricanes in winter. The country was new. There were no roads. Their nearest neighbor was six miles away across the prairie, and one Sunday the good man, after preaching to an audience of 12 persons several miles from his home, was lost in a blizzard in endeavoring to return to it. From the effects of this exposure he died and his wife soon followed him.

The daughter, 20 years of age, was left alone. What was she to do? Should she pack up and return to the comfortable east, or stay and fight it out in the pioneer west? She decided to stay and continue her father's work.

She went out upon the vast prairie to teach. Most of the settlers there were Norwegians, and in a little two-roomed house, occupied by a large family, she went to board so that she might learn the language. But the food was so poor that she became ill. Finally she secured the position of principal in a small, struggling college. Here her surroundings were pleasant, but the trustees could not pay her salary, and after three years she went back to the prairie.

This time she boarded with a kind but ignorant Irish family. During the winter the mother died, leaving two little girls to care for a household of men. Here, the teacher found her mission in life.

She taught those girls how to work. She helped them to cook, to sew, to make their own clothes, to make the home cheerful and sweet. She made herself an elder sister to the two. She shared their whole life. She mended with them, baked with them, made butter with them, milked with them, and endured the hay-field with them. Soon the two sisters became noted for their gentleness, consideration and excellent home qualities. Wherever they went they carried a spirit of helpfulness and an electric ray of cheerfulness.

But the world never knew of the sacrifice of the minister's daughter, who spent some of the best years of her life in dreary hardship in order to make the lives of two other girls worth living. The story of this noble sacrifice came recently to the writer, from the west. What can be said of her who would have had the sweet, but chose the bitter for humanity's and for Christ's sake? There are many bright, educated eastern girls in the west, enduring poverty and hardship as soldiers of the Master, that they may do all they can for Him. Such unreserved giving up of self ought to shame us out of our easy, self-satisfied lives of nominal Christian service.—Youth's Companion.

Mackerel Getting Wary.

Cape Cod fishermen complain that the mackerel of to-day are not to be taken by any of the methods that proved successful with their ancestors. The first result of the constant pursuit of which these fish were the objects was almost to exterminate them. Only the most knowing mackerel survived, and their progeny, though now very numerous again, manifest an adroitness in escaping from nets and hooks that is immensely pleasing to people seeking confirmation for the theory of natural selection, but most exasperating to men with a living to earn.—N. A Step Forward in Railroad Advertising.

One of the most elaborate and successful moves in the way of advertising transportation lines that has been seen recently, is that of the Queen & Crescent in the January issue of the Review of Reviews. While it appears in the advertising pages of that magazine, it is not so much an advertisement as it is an article of unusual interest concerning the equipment of tracks and trains on the modern line of railway. It is a revelation to most people to know that such a line exists south of the Ohio River. The block system, the electric equipment such as track signals, locomotive headlights, crossing gongs, all go to provide for the swift movement of trains and is found here. The track is of heavy steel and the ballast of crushed stone and over this roadbed passenger trains of the most luxurious pattern hurry to and from schedules which each year are made a little shorter.

NO WONDER that the old folks stand
A troop of cuddling mockers,
When little boys wear trousers and Grown men wear knickerbockers.

The Truth About Kansas.

No State in the union has been more slandered than Kansas. The western part of the State is a fine grazing country as the sun ever shone on, and the eastern 200 miles square raised more corn to the acre in 1896 than any other State in the Union. With only the eastern part of the State raising corn and wheat the State ranks fifth in these cereals in this country. We have more churches and schools and less illiteracy per capita than any other state. Productive smooth farm land can be bought for from $5 to $40 per acre. Write to R. B. DRURY, Atchison, Kansas.

To Get Out of the Way

When trouble is coming, is obviously the part of common sense. An obstruction of the bowels is a serious obstacle to health. To get this out of the way is an easy matter with the thorough laxative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which, although it affords relief, never gripes and convulses like a drastic purgative. Dyspepsia, malarial, kidney and rheumatic ailments and nervousness yield to this genial family medicine

THERE seems to be nothing people enjoy talking about so much as a married couple that don't get along very well.—Washington Democrat.

Walton.

The Angel of death has been busy in our midst since my last communication. The first to fall by the grim reaper's stroke was John Stapleton, 73, on the Beaver grade. Dread pneumonia cut him down with remorseless haste. The old gentleman was a good farmer and well liked by his neighbors.

Mrs. America Miller, 66, of Palm Springs, Fla., was the next victim. She had an attack of the grippe, while at the residence of her brother, Mr. Edward Holder, and was feeling so much better that she indulged in a few minutes' walk around the yard and the fatal disease fastened itself in that short time upon her system. Weakened by previous illness, and notwithstanding the most careful and affectionate attention of relatives and friends, she was carried away on last Sunday at 2 p. m.

Mrs. Miller never had any children of her own, but the deep grief shown by her stepchildren fully attested that well and faithfully had she done a mother's part. Mrs. J. F. Anderson, of St. Louis, the wife of Col J. F. Anderson, Genl. Western Passenger Agt. of the Georiga Railnad, was sick in bed but getthup immediately, made a few hasty preparations and was hastening to the bedside of her darling mother in a few hours time. Mr. H. H. Miller, of Nashville came on with his father, from that place. Not one of them knew she was dead—all were on the way when she passed from this life. The grief of her husband, Mr. Thomas Miller, was a pralling when the mournful fact was told him. He would have sunk to the earth had it not been for the support of his stalwart but also heavily stricken son. The funeral was on Thursday, and Bro. Johnson preached one of the most powerful sermons on the occasion. He was an old schoolmate of the deceased. Looking at her husband one was reminded of that verse from proverbs, "She did him good and not evil all the days of her life." The flowers adorning the bier were the most gorgeous ever seen in this locality.

Mr. Thomas Johnson, 75, in March, living a few miles west of here, died on Friday last of a diseased liver. He was a very prominent farmer.

This morning the hearse went over to Verona to convey the mortal remains of genial Lawrence Dwyer to their last resting place. There is much sickness in town and country—dangerous sickness.

There has been a change in the hardware and undertaking busines in the town, Mr. A. M. Edwards having purchased the interest of Mr. Willie Kennedy. The new firm will be or it is, S. L. Edwards and A. M. Edwards and the firm name Edwards Bro. Mr. A. M. Edwards enjoys the reputation of having made a success in every business arrangement he ever entered into; and he deserves it for no man ever devoted so much endomitable will and energy to business as has this same "Doll" Edwards, as he is invariably called. S. L. or "Kurg", as he is called has been undertaker here for 19 years, and latterly in the hardware business also is one of our best business men and nothing can be urged against either of the men unless it is their fervent devotion to the Republican party which it is believed impossible for either to abandon.

A grand success was the social given by Mrs. Alonzo Stephenson on Saturday night the 2nd inst. Among those present were:

Misses:—Hattie Johnson, Nettie Rice, Ella Crisler, Bettie Hoard, Maggie Fullilove, Nattie Hoard, Julia Johnson, Ida Johnson, Virgie Johnson, Lizzie Bailey, Katie Roberts, Bertha Roberts, Katie Eenglish, Emma Stephenson, Lailie Wolfe, Edna Wolfe, Annie Johnson, Mamie Allen, Jessie Records, Bettie Peake, Bertha Hoard, Edith Vest, Eliza Elliott, Mamie Elliott, Mattie Callahan, Nellie Wilson, Mrs. George Elliott. Messrs.—Geo. and John English, Marion Stephenson, John Roberts, Rupert Rogers, Willie Sturgeon, Thos. Linn, Edward Stamler, Felix Rice, Edgar Stephenson, Samuel Fullilove, Finnell Peak, Bruce Dudgeon, Russell Taylor, Denton Cotton, Edward Wolfe, Charley Wolfe, Walter Wolfe, Harry Harper, Walter Johnson, Charles Johnson, Omer Johnson, Carroll Johnson, Lester Johnson, Kirtley Johnson, Sidney Hudson, Marion Hudson, Jas. Pettit, James Humes, Jesse Powers, Lowry Powers, Will Hughes, Geo. Elliott, Chas. Grey, Bruce Allen, Roscoe Allen.

Refreshments aud games were freely partaken of by all, and Mr. and Mrs. Stephenson thanked the company for their good behavior and hoped all present had enjoyed themselves as much as it seemed they had.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Holder tender their heartfelt thanks to relatives and friends who have been so kind and attentive to them during the sad trials of their sisters illness and death.

A dangerous counterfeit of the $20 United States silver certificate has been discovered. The note is of the series of 1896, check letter B. The most notable defect is in the Treasury numbers, which, although of good color, are too heavy and out of alignment. The paper is good and the silk of the genuine are cleverly imitated by pen and ink lines on the back of the counterfeit note. This note may fall in company with some of our readers, but we have no fear of being imposed on by it, as bills of that size can have no occasion to visit our den.

An exciting fox chase, one day last week, resulted in the capture of a very large male fox on Edgar Cropper's farm. The fox was dug out of the hole in the ground in which it had taken refuge, and was put in a sack to be carried to an open field, where it was to be released for the benefit of young dogs, which it was supposed would soon capture and kill it; but before the field was reached reynard gave a bounce and bursted the sack, falling among a large pack of dogs, over the backs of which he flew like a meteor, and has not been captured to this day.

Elijah Parker, of the Petersburg neighborhood, made an assignment, last week, to his son-in-law, P. E. Cason, for the benefit of his creditors. Mr. Parker has been engaged in farming, and contracted a debt many years ago, when the farmers were prosperous, and he would have met his obligations had not times taken a change, followed by a general depreciation of values while debts and interest on same did not depreciate at all. His liabilities are something above $8,000 with assets of about the same amount. Mr. Parker's many friends are very sorry to hear of his misfortune.

Quite a number of the taxpayers whose lists were increased by the board of Supervisors, appeared before the board at its adjourned session last Thursday. Only in a few cases did the board recede from its action. The increase of $500 in Clinton D. Gaines' list was reduced to $250. The 10 acres added to James O'Kane's list was reconsidered and omitted. Lewis Beemon's raise was reduced from $600 to $400. The Burlington and Bellevue Turnpike Company was released from paying tax on its franchise. The franchise of the Burlington and Floreuce pike was assessed at $3,000.

Attention is called to the report of The National Bank of Rising Sun, which will be found in this issue. The statement is made at the date of the twenty-fifth annual meeting of the stockholders of the bank, at which time the former board of directors was reelected and the management of the bank will be continued as heretofore. The bank is doing a safe and profitable business, is carefully managed and its investments are as solid as a rock.

The board of directors elected on the 12th inst. are Orville J. Harris, Wm. H. Seward, Geo. B. Pate, Robert A. Harris, S. Beymer, H. W. Scranton and J. N. Perkins.

The examining trial of Chas. Ewalt for the killing of Harve Foster at the festival at the Big Bone colored church on the night of December 24th, 1896, was had before County Judge Stephens las Monday. The trial consumed the most of the day, a along list of witnesses being examined. County Attorney J. M. Lassing represented the Commonwealth, and D. E. Castleman, the defendant.

The testimony as to what occurred immediately before the killing was conflicting, but the defense got the best of it on that important point.

The testimony was conclusive that fighting whisky held away at the church that night, and the programme formulated for a childrens' entertainment developed into a pugilistic carnival in which there were knockdowns almost without limit, one fellow biting the dust as many as seventeen times.

Charles Ewalt, who had been to Cincinnati that day, left Carroll's store about ten o'clock to go home. When he reached the church, which was on his road, he went into the church yard, where he began playing a guitar he had purchased in the city that day. He had been in the crowd but a few minutes, when Harve Foster and couple of his backers, who had been on the warpath all evening, showed a disposition to have trouble with Ewalt, but were prevented, but in a short time they renewed their attack, and commenced crowding upon Ewalt, Foster calling him ugly names. Ewalt backed several steps, telling Foster to stand back, but he continued to press upon Ewalt until he was backed against a thorn bush, and as Foster was in the act of making a slash at him with an ugly looking knife Ewalt fired the fatal shot.

The Judge, having heard the evidence did not hesitate to discharge the defendant for the killing, but fined him $25 for carrying the pistol.

FROM CARROLL COUNTY.

[News]

Calvin Scott left at this office last week a copy of the Dollar Weekly Commercial of date March 14, 1850, published at Cincinnati, and edited by L. G. Curtiss. Among many interesting items of that day we find that the bill to repeal the Covington and Cincinnati bridge charter had been killed.

Wm. Corn, who has been in the grocery and hardware business since 1850, made an assignment Saturday night to M. L. Downs, owing to slow collections and a number of outstanding liabilities amounting to about $5,500. The assets consist of a large stock of groceries and hardware, the National Hotel property and the store house and grounds, which if reasonable prices are realized, will more than meet all obligations. Mr. Corn is about 74 years of age, and having been in the business so long and his standing so good, it was a great surprise to his multitude of friends, who deeply sympathize with him in his financial distress.

Dr. J. T. Boulton, Cincinnati, O.
Dear Sir—I was taken with a severe cough the first of May; for two weeks I could not lie on my left side nor breathe through my left lung. I also had hemorrhage and my friends said I had consumption. I began taking Boulton's Cough Remedy and began to improve with the first dose, and within three weeks was entirely well. I can not say enough in favor of Boulton's Cough Remedy. Respectfully,
MRS. R. J. MARSHALL.

NOTICE.

The public is hereby notified that we have arranged our business matters and adjusted all of our claims with our creditors and raised the assignment. That Wallace Garrison is no longer a member of the firm and has nothing whatever to do with our business, he having sold his entire interest in the business to us. We will run the mill as heretofore and in addition will operate the mill three days in each week on the popular customs grinding plan—charging 4 toll. At present we will grind on customs plan on Tuesday, Friday and Saturday of each week. We are equipped with the best, latest and most improved machinery and our facilities for making Fancy, High Grade Patent and Family Flours are exceeded by none. We carry a large stock of Flour, Shipstuff, Braud, Feed, &c., and the very best Flint Corn Meal; also the finest Campbell's Creek and Kanawha River Coals.

For the last two years we have operated the mill, under great disadvantages, for the benefit of the farmers of Boone and Gallatin Counties. These difficulties are now removed, and we enter, as we believe, upon an era of prosperity. We thank our patrons for past favors soliciting their work and good will in the future.

THE Japanese religion demands that a man must worship "on the soil," every day. Princes and rich men evade this by sprinkling a little dirt in one corner of a room, sometimes on a square of cement made for the purpose.

THE air is so clear in the Arctic regions that conversation can be carried easily by persons two miles apart. It has also been asserted on good authority that at Gibraltar the human voice has been distinctly heard at a distance of ten miles.

SOME large beetles are as good a circular saws. They seize a branch or twig with their deeply toothed jaws and whirl around and around until the twig is sawn off. They have been known to saw a twig twice as large a an ordinary walking stick in this manner.

GEN. BOOTH, of the Salvation army, says there are 5,000 homeless women in London above the age of fifty years. They subsist by cleaning door steps, selling watercresses, picking rags and collecting refuse, and find shelter at night where they can. The army hopes to open a home for them in the West End.

WOOL GROWERS

Of Ohio Disagree in Regard to Tariff Protection—Dingley Bill Indorsed.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 14.—For the first time the Ohio Wool Growers' association in its meeting Wednesday was not unanimous regarding tariff protection. The resolutions reported from the committee sets forth that the removal of the tariff on wool had ruined the sheep raising business and demanded the restoration of protection.

They did not endorse the Dingley bill now before the ways and means committee of the house. Judge Wm. Lawrence, president of the association, moved to amend by inserting an endorsement of the Dingley bill. It was developed in the discussion that followed that the committee thought the bill too radical and would not report the resolutions with the endorsement in them. The amendment offered by Judge Lawrence was finally adopted on a weak vote. In the course of his remarks Judge Lawrence said if the incoming administration did not do something for the farmer, Ohio would go for free silver four years hence.

The preamble declares that the severest blow ever dealt the agricultural interest of the United States was inflicted by the tariff of 1894, and the most disastrous of all was the placing of wool on the free list, this action depreciating the American flocks one-third, reducing the price of wool 50 per cent and causing a loss to the wool growers in three years of over one hundred and seventy-five million dollars; that it is fast eliminating the most important branch of industry from the farmer and farm laborers as well as others who must draw their support from agricultural industries; and that it is the first and highest duty of the incoming administration to revise the tariff at the earliest possible moment. The resolutions demand that such duty as will fully restore the industry be put upon wool, and the new tariff act should contain a clause providing for additional duties on wool and woolens in bonded warehouses or imported after March 5, 1897, and declaring against ad valorem duties as inviting frauds.

MOTHER AND SON

Dead as the Result of Coal Gas Asphyxiation at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Jan. 14.—Mrs. Esther Poole was found dead in her flat at 1708 Milwankee avenue Wednesday afternoon as the result of coal gas asphyxiation, and her son, James Poole, who gained considerable notoriety here through his connection with the Berry detective agency in the killing of Frank White on the west side several months ago, died at 10 o'clock Wednesday night from the same cause. Mrs. Poole was 60 years of age and had been separated from her husband for a number of years. The police say the mother and son may have committed suicide.

JIM FRENCH,

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 14.—When Chief of Detectives Desmond, of this city, heard that Gov. Stone, just before retiring from office, had pardoned Jim French, a notorious criminal, he wired nearby cities a description of the ex-convict, and mailed a circular to all chiefs of police in an effort to capture French. He is wanted at Desoto, Mo., on the charge of blowing the post office safe and stealing $1,800. He is also wanted at Walden, Mo., for another post office safe robbery, when $1,500 was taken.

BOISE, Ida., Jan. 14.—The joint ballot taken in the Idaho legislature Wednesday resulted as follows: Claggett, pop., 33; Dubois, silver rep., 3; Jones, dem, 14; Nelson, pop., 8; Johnson, dem., 9; scattering, 3; necessary to choice, 36. Most of the 25 silver republicans who voted for Dubois on the first ballot on Tuesday divided their votes between the two democrats Wednesday. It is believed Wednesday night that Dubois is beaten and the Claggett men declare that on the next ballot Thursday that their candidate will receive more than the necessary 36 votes to elect.

Henry Rogers, importer of fancy goods, novelties and bric a brac at No. 558 Broadway, allowed three judgments to be taken against him Wednesday, aggregating $27,154. His liabilities are reported at between $80,000 and $100,000.

Kyle's Chance for Senator.

PIERRE, S. D., Jan. 14.—The senatorial situation has become more complicated and the principal fight is apparently narrowing down to Kyle and Loucks. The friends of each of these candidates claim that their man is in the lead. From a conservative estimate it is believed now that Kyle's entire strength is something more than that of any one of his opponents, but he is far from having a majority.

James F. Gibbs for Public Printer.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 14.—The Ohio Editorial association Wednesday indorsed the candidacy of James F. Gibbs, publisher of the Norwalk Reflector, for public printer of the United States. Gibbs is treasurer of the National Editorial association and has been indorsed for the position by editorial associations in other states.

Consul Attacked.

BANGKOK, Jan. 14.—Siamese soldiers assaulted the American vice consul, E. V. Kellett, without any provocation, according to affidavits by European witnesses. Siam ignores the protest of the United States minister resident and Consul General John Barrett. No American gunboat has been here for five years.

THE CABINET.

Gen. Stewart L. Woodford Spoken of for a Position.

The New England Field Being Scanned for Cabinet Timber—Senator Lodge Would Sooner Remain in the Senate—Favorable Mention of Ex-Gov. Long.

CANTON, O., Jan. 15.—The withdrawal of Mr. Bliss from the list of cabinet possibilities leaves the situation open so far as the choice of a cabinet officer from New York is concerned. Maj. McKinley has not selected a New York republican for his cabinet and there is no reason that he will be in a hurry to do so, indeed, the impression is current that one of the members of the cabinet to be chosen will be the representative from the state of New York. Gossip, which is never idle, plays with unwonted vivacity about the name of Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, of Brooklyn. Gen. Woodford, said a New York man Thursday, is a lawyer of wide reputation, a successful and popular speaker on financial topics and a man of rare administrative ability. The president-elect knows him exceeding well, and thinks highly of him. Another New York republican, who is discussed somewhat as a cabinet possibility Thursday night, is Hon. J. Sloat Fassett. If Maj. McKinley has any one in mind from New York, he has given no sign. His secretary of state having been selected, Maj. McKinley's next task will probably be that of choosing a secretary of the treasury, and the chances Thursday night were that this position will not go to New York. The New England field was scanned for cabinet possibilities Thursday by the president-elect, who invited Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, to consult with him upon the subject.

Senator Lodge said: "I am not a candidate for a cabinet position. I am satisfied to be a senator from Massachusetts. We talked Thursday about ex-Gov. Long and others. Gov. Long is very highly esteemed by the people of our commonwealth."

Maj. McKinley is considering ex-Gov. Long for his cabinet and the chances are that he will be the New England member of it though a portfolio has not been tendered him.

Representative Wm. E. Dreyer, who has been referred to as a cabinet possibility, will not be considered in that connection, as he desires a foreign appointment. It is understood that the Massachusetts delegation in congress will indorse Gov. Long for the cabinet and that there will be no other person from the state seriously considered.

PAPER MILL BURNED.

Destructive Conflagration the Origin of Which is Shrouded in Mystery.

CRESCENTVILLE, O., Jan. 14.—The immense paper mill of the U. S. Paper Co., located at Crescentville, 15 miles north of Cincinnati, on the Miami railroad, was totally destroyed by fire at 3 o'clock Thursday night. The origin is a mystery. The first seen of the fire was a huge mass of flames that shot upward from the engineroom following a loud explosion, whereupon Foreman John Solsman ran to ascertain the cause. He found four barrels of oil ablaze, and at once gave the alarm. The employes made an effort to connect the hose, but were forced to flee from the building on account of the rapid progress of the flames.

The mill was constructed of brick and covered three acres of ground. It was erected about twenty years ago, and was used in the manufacture of building and wrapping paper, being the largest plant of the kind in the state. Maj. Geo. B. Fox, who is secretary of the company, puts the loss at over $150,000, which includes machinery valued at $100,000 and over one million pounds of manufactured paper and 50,000 pounds of crude stock. The building was worth $50,000 and is a complete wreck, there being nothing left but a few blackened walls.

HIGH HAT ORDINANCE

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—The ordinance passed by the city council two weeks ago against the wearing of headgear in theaters and amusement houses during the performance and making the management liable to a fine of $25 for each offense was vetoed by Mayor Swift Thursday night and a substitute ordinance less sweeping in its scope, was passed and signed by the mayor. There was some question as to the legality of Alderman Plotke's anti-hat ordinance since it provided no penalty against the wearer, and Thursday night Mayor Swift suggested a substitute. The penalty is directed against the woman who persists in wearing a hat at a theater making her liable to a fine of $3. The management by the new ordinance is exonerated from any responsibility. The ordinance went into effect Friday.

Leland Castle Burned.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Jan. 15.—Leland Castle, owned by Adrian Iselen, jr., and occupied by the Morse school, took fire for the second time at 2 o'clock Thursday morning and was completely destroyed. The building was one of the finest in lower Westchester county, and was built of marble. The first fire broke out at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and was extinguished after damaging the castle to the extent of $20,000. The total destruction of the castle it is estimated involves a loss of $100,000.

Gen. Porter for Secretary of War.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—"I am not to be a member of Maj. McKinley's cabinet," said Cornelius N. Bliss to a reporter Thursday. Mr. Bliss' refusal of the secretaryship of the navy makes it extremely probable, it is said, that Gen. Horace Porter will now be made secretary of war.

Notorious Princess Leaves Buda-Pesth.

BUDA-PESTH, Jan. 15.—The Princess Chimay and her paramour, the Gipsy musician, Rigo, left this city for Nice Thursday. Their departure was very sudden. It is now rumored that the prince is on their track.

THE INHUMAN

Edict of Weyler Felt in Havana and Matanzas Provinces—It Deprives Peaceful Citizens of Their Rightful Means of Existence.

KEY WEST, Fla., Jan. 16.—Advices from Havana state that the effect of Weyler's famous Bayate edict of the last instant is being felt with more intensity in the provinces of Havana and Matanzas than in that of Pinar del Rio, since these provinces being more thickly populated and with more farms and estates then the former, the wholesale abandonment of the properties and the concentration of the people in the towns will not only augment the misery already prevailing, but also present the serious inconvenience of lodging so many people in towns already full to overflowing.

Without discussing Weyler's inhuman measures in thus depriving peaceful and unoffending citizens o their rightful means of existence, and huddling them in already crowded spaces, exposed to all the rigors of hunger and disease, simply for the sake o clearing the country of so-called rebel sympathizers, a legal point has been sprung by the foreign property owners, especially the Americans, who own large properties in the provinces o Havana and Matanzas, which will surely lead to complications and claims on the Spanish government.

Weyler distinctly states in his decree that those who wish to remain on their properties must exhibit the last tax bill paid. As taxes are levied on productive industries, and these planters have not been able to work on account of the abnormal conditions in the provinces since Gom z' invasion in December, 1895, no taxes have been collected since that time, the government tacitly admitting such unusual circumstances or being powerless to collect them because the rebels were in possession of the country did not press their collections, consequently no taxes have been paid in the country since the date mentioned. Besides that Weyler has unofficially ordered that no sugar crop should be made and now he wants the sugar planters to pay taxes on an industry which they have not been able to produce.

The result has been the managers of the sugar estate, San Antonio, near Madruga, Havana, owned by Mr. Antonio Terry, an American citizen residing in Paris, presented himself to Consul Lee demanding protection, because the military commander of Matruga ordered him to abandon the place, which is one of the most valuable estates in the province, worth half a million dollars, because he did not present the required tax bill.

Consul Lee at once took the case under hand and simultaneously presented the same to the captain general and the state department at Washington. No replies have been received yet either from Weyler or Secretary Olney. To depict the situation in Pinar del Rio nothing can be better said than to translate the report of a trip made to the city of that name by a correspondent of La Lucha:

"All the way traversed by the railroad from Artemisa to Consolation del Sur is, without exaggeration, the most chastized and undoubtedly has suffered most of the rigors of the war. The fields wasted and abandoned, the bushes and trees burned, the huts destroyed, the stone houses, in other times happy homes, converted by the rebels and Spanish alike into heaps of ruins, the cane fields dried up and covered with bushes, by the ravages of fire; the towns—the authorities of which are making great efforts to remedy the necessities of the residents—full of people of poor families, who daily drop down from the hills, exterminated by hunger and emaciated by the fevers."

SENATOR SHERMAN

Arrives in Canton and Has a Conference With President-Elect.

CANTON, O., Jan. 16.—Senators John Sherman, of Ohio, and J. G. Burrows arrived from Washington Friday morning and were met at the station by Capt. R. O. Heistand, who drove with them to the McKinley residence. The meeting between the senators and the president-elect was of most cordial nature. A few minutes after his arrival at the house, Mr. Sherman withdrew with Maj. McKinley to a conference, which lasted two hours. Senator Burrows is here to talk over the Michigan situation and the question of Gen. Alger's appointment to the cabinet will be discussed.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 16.—A special to the Press from Canton says that Senator Sherman said just before leaving for Washington: "I have accepted the portfolio of secretary of state." He left for Washington at 1 p. m. Friday.

POST OFFICE ROBBERS

Run Down With Dogs and Captured—Rumor d That Th y Have Been Lynched.

MACON, Ga., Jan. 16.—A special from Adams Park, Ga., says: Charles Forsythe and Willis White, the Negroes who were believed to be the men who shot and fatally wounded Mrs. Rowland, wife of the postmaster, while robbing the post office at this place last year, were run down with dogs and captured near here Friday morning.

Mrs. Rowland died Friday from the effects of the wound and a crowd began to gather for the purpose of lynching them. A report reached Macon late Friday night to the effect that the mob had taken the men and lynched them. But the rumor has not been verified.

NEWPORT, R. I., Jan. 16.—Torpedo boat No. 16 had another trial Friday. With 120 pounds o steam in her boilers and 110 at the engines up to 93 knots were made. Friday there was shipped from the torpedo station a portion of the air compressor plant for torpedo boat No. 8, building at Seattle, Wash.

NO INDICATION

Of Cuban Resolutions Being Called Up in the Senate.

Pacific Railway Matters and the Nicaragua Canal Bill Will Also Be Considered—No Programme of Business Arranged for the House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Appropriation bills will demand attention of the senate this week. The army bill has been reported and the military academy and legislative bill will be reported from the committee Monday.

Senator Morgan will probably address the senate Monday on the bill for the appointment of a board of government trustees and operate the Pacific railroads until the government's claim is liquidated.

The Nicaraguan canal bill, in connection with the decision of the republican steering committee, will be made the unfinished business Monday.

The proposition to guarantee the canal bonds will be antagonized by Messrs. Turpie, Vest, Teller and others.

There is no indication of any intention to call up the Cameron Cuban resolution. The utterances of Mr. Sherman on this subject since the formal announcement of his acceptance of the state department portfolio are looked upon by his associates as a request from the incoming administration that nothing should be done pending its accession to power. Several influential senators who were previously charged with being "Jingers" have since their visit to Canton become very conservative, and no one on the republican side of the chamber is now urging action of any kind with respect to the war in Cuba.

The extradition treaties between the United States and the Orange Free State and the Argentine republic will probably be disposed of this week, and the rest of the time will be devoted to clearing up matter on the calendar. In the house of representatives no programme of business has been arranged except a Virginia contested election case. It is the expectation of the members of the committee on rules that in the course of the week the agriculture and Indian appropriation bills will be considered.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Dr. DeWitt Talmage, who succeded Dr. Sunderland in the active pastorship of the Presidential Presbyterian church in Washington, in his sermon Sunday morning referred to the pending arbitration treaty with Great Britain, characterizing it as the mightiest, grandest movement for driving brutal war out of the earth. He said the men who on either side of the sea did most to effect that plan of arbitration have made themselves immortal. The evening of the present administration of the United States government has been honored with the greatest and gladdest event of 18 centuries. Al civilized nations will copy the sublime example. He implored the senate to promptly ratify the treaty. Mr. Cleveland was not present at the services.

Peace Treaty May Not Pass the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—It is doubtful if the arbitration treaty with Great Britain, signed by Secretary Olney and Sir Julian Pauncefote last week, and now before the senate, will be able to run the ganntiet of that body. If the treaty fails to receive the necessary two-thirds votes to make it valid and binding, it will be largely due to the tactless statement of Secretary Olney juet before the holidays in declaring that the recognition of the republic of Cuba was purely an executive function, and that congress must keep its hands off.

Ex-Speaker Crisp Eulogized.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Most the time in the house Saturday was devoted to the delivery of eulogies upon the late ex-Speaker Charles F. Crisp.

WILLIS' SUCCESSOR.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The state department only Saturday morning received official news of the death of Minister Willis, and this in brie est of telegrams. Usually when a man of war is available the remains of a minister dying abroad are placed on board the warship and brought home in state. The only United States vessel now in the harbor of Honoluiu is the old-fashioned corvette Alert of 500-horse power with a single screw and of only 1,020 tonnage. It would take her at least 15 days to make the voyage from Honoluiu to San Francisco, and she has no accommodations suitable for the comfort of the deceased minister's family, consisting of his wife and only son. The family, it is understood, distinctly preferred that the body should be transported by the regular mail steamer which was to leave Honolulu on the 13th of January and is due in San Francisco on January 20. There is no doubt that this course has been taken. In view of the broad divergence of views between the president and congress on the Hawaiian question it is altogether probable that President Cleveland will leave the appointment of Minister Willis' successor to President-elect McKinley.

A Prompt Answer.

The Washington Post tells this story of Col. Wallace S. Jones, United States consul general at Rome, Italy, now on a visit to this country: "Col. Jones is a Floridian, and has been in the consular service in Italy for the last ten years. He is a gentleman of wit, tact and culture, and his ability to make a happy response at the right time brought him into the good graces of Queen Margherita on his first appearance at court. The queen asked him from which state he hailed, and, on being told, said that he had often heard Florida described as a very beautiful country. "Yes, your majesty," was the prompt reply, "we call it at home the Italy of America."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Nature's Detectives.

When a crime is committed, no matter in what corner of the earth the criminal tries to hide, he knows that probably somewhere or other on the look-out is a detective waiting to lay his hand on him.

When any disease attacks mankind and hides itself in the human system, no matter how obscure or complicated the disease may be, Nature among her great force of detective remedies has one that will eventually hunt down and arrest that particular disease.

Lung and bronchial diseases are among the most baffling complaints which doctors have to deal with; because it isn't the lungs or bronchial tubes alone which are affected, but every corner of the system furnishes a lurking place for these elusive maladies.

They change and reappear and dodge about the system under numberless disguises. They are almost always complicated with liver or stomach troubles, nervousness, neuralgia, or "general debility."

The best detective remedy which Nature has provided to search out and arrest these perplexing ailments is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It lays an arresting hand directly upon the poisonous, paralyzing elements hiding in the liver and digestive organs.

It gives the blood-making glands power to manufacture an abundant supply of pure, red, highly vitalized blood which reinforces the lungs with healthy tissue; feeds the nerve-centres with power, and builds up solid muscular flesh and active energy.

For weak lungs, spitting of blood, shortness of breath, nasal catarrh, bronchitis, severe coughs, asthma, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. While it promptly cures the severest cough it strengthens the system and purifies the blood.

MONETARY CONFERENCE.

Congress to Be Asked to Create a Finance Commission.

If the President Fails to Appoint, a Committee to Choose One to Formulate a Plan—Gold the Standard and Greenbacks to Be Retired.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 18.—This city is full of financiers. At 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon the monetary conference was called to order in Tomlinson hall, more than 300 delegates being assembled. Hugh H. Hanna, chairman of the executive committee, appointed at a preliminary conference November 18 last, and his associates had selected the following temporary officers: E. C. Stannard, ex-governor of Missouri, temporary chairman; J. W. Smith, secretary of the local board of trade, and also of the executive committee, secretary. Later Smith gave way to Evans Woollen as permanent secretary. He is the secretary of the Commercial club, of Indianapolis.

Mr. Stanard, on taking the chair, spoke 15 minutes.

Among other things, he said: "The present financial methods of our government are largely those adopted during the war, when there were great emergencies. I believe there is a very strong and constantly increasing conviction among our people that some method should be adopted for the retirement of the United States and treasury notes. I would retire them by the sale of long government bonds at a low rate of interest."

Mr. J. W. Smith, secretary of Indianapolis board of works, read the call under which the convention assembled. The emphatic terms of the call declaring it to be the sentiment of the business men of the country that they should take part in shaping the financial legislation of the country and they would never agree to any proposition which would degrade the present standard of values, were received with applause. Mr. Hanna presented the report of executive committee pursuant to the resolutions of instructions adopted at a preliminary conference December 1. It is said the committee has sent out invitations to the boards of trade, commercial clubs and such like organizations of all cities in the United States of a population of 8,000 and greater, according to the last census, requesting them to send delegations to this convention. There are assembled here 300 delegates, representing business organizations of cities in nearly every state in the union.

The committee recommended for the temporary organization a committee on credentials, on permanent organization, on rules and order of business, each consisting of 15 members; that all resolutions concerning the currency and banking systems and mode of procedure shall be referred without debate to the committee on resolutions, to be appointed by the permanent chairman; that each delegate present shall be entitled to one vote; that the hours for holding the sessions shall be 10 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2.30 to 6 p. m., and 8 to 10 p. m.

The committee on permanent organization recommended the name of Ex-Senator Patterson, of Pennsylvania, for president and a vice president from each state represented. Evans Woolen, of Indianapolis, was named for permanent secretary, and W. F. C. Colt, sergeant-at-arms. It was also recommended that the other committees named be, continued, and that a committee on resolutions of one from each state be appointed. Adopted.

Mr. Patterson was escorted to the platform by Messrs. E. B. Martindale and H. H. Hanna, of Indianapolis, and Mr. Lowry, of Atlanta, Ga. He addressed the convention.

In accordance with the provisions of the report of the committee on permanent organization, the state delegations elected vice presidents and members of the committee on resolutions.

Hon. J. H. Walker, of Massachusetts, chairman of the house committee on banking and currency in the present congress was invited to address the convention, which he consented to do.

At the conclusion of Mr. Walker's remarks the convention took a recess until 8 o'clock Tuesday evening.

At the evening session Mr. Dausman, of Chicago, presented the, first proposition for the consideration of the convention. It provided for the appointment of a committee of nine members, to be appointed by the president of the United States within 30 days, including one member from the senate committee on finance and one from the house committee on banking and currency. The committee shall investigate the financial subject resting in Washington and make report to congress of their conclusions by bill or otherwise. The members other than the senator and representative named shall be paid for their services by the government. Three shall be bankers, three merchants or manufacturers and one a political economist representing the several geographical sections of the country.

George T. Tanner, of Indianapolis, offered a series of resolutions declaring in favor of a refunding of the national debt, the retirement of greenbacks, a more expensive system of national bank currency and the imposition of severe penalties upon national bank directors for failure of duty, to be presented to congress by a committee of the convention.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 14.—The monetary convention was late in beginning its second day's work. The committee on resolutions got together at 9 o'clock at the Denison and began considering the 196 propositions which were offered at Tuesday night's session. Mr. H. H. Hanna was elected chairman of the committee. Nearly all the suggested plans contained in some form the gold standard, denunciation of fiat money, proposals that the greenbacks be retired and that national banks be permitted to issue notes to the full amount of bonds held.

At 10:30 the convention was called to order by Chairman Patterson, and a multitude more of plans for the revision of the country's financial system was brought to the front.

Charles E. Adams, president of the Massachusetts state board of trade, offered a resolution recommending the organization by states of business men in order to expedite similar conventions in the future.

E. C. Camp, of Knoxville, Tenn., advocated a tariff law sufficient to yield a revenue of $650,000,000 and the gradual retirement of the greenbacks and other government indebtedness at the rate of at least $100,000 per year.

Representative C. N. Fowler, of New Jersey, a member of the house committee on banking and currency, was asked to speak. He asserted that President Cleveland's declaration that the last resources of the government should be exhausted in the effort to sustain the credit of the nation, alone stayed the flood that was hurrying the country on to a depreciated standard.

Elbert W. Perry, of Galesburg, Ill., offered a resolution declaring it to be the sense of the convention that the currency and banking laws should be so amended as to secure, first, an elastic currency; second, safety without a bond issue; third, the security of depositors; fourth, protection of stockholders against dishonest officials; fifth, the retirement of paper currency; sixth, a non-partisan finance committee to suggest to congress desirable changes as the necessity for them develops.

Brief addresses were made by Joseph Wharton, of Philadelphia, E. C. Camp, of Knoxville, Tenn., and then the committee on resolutions, not having fulfilled the expectation of an early report, the convention took a recess until 4:30 o'clock.

The convention reconvened at 4:30 and adopted a declaration of what legislation in its opinion is needed upon the subject by a practically unanimous vote. This declaration included a demand for the maintenance of the gold standard and the retirement of the demand obligations of the government. Accompanying this was a proposition for the appointment of a commission to investigate and report by bill or otherwise upon the evils and remedies of the currency system. This was the unanimous conclusion of the committee on resolutions, a result that was unexpected by the delegates, and the recommendations of the committee were affirmed by the substantially unanimous vote of the convention. This was not secured, however, without much opposition and an exceedingly animated debate. Following are the resolutions as adopted:

First, that the present gold standard should be maintained.

Second, that steps should be taken to insure the ultimate retirement of all classes of United States notes by a gradual and steady process, and so as to avoid injurious contraction of the currency or disturbance of the business interests of the country, and that until such retirements provision should be made for a separation of the revenue and note issue departments of the treasury.

Third, that a banking system be provided which should furnish credit facilities to every portion of the country, and a safe and elastic circulation, and especially with a view of securing such a distribution of the loanable capital of the country as will tend to equalize the rates of interest in all parts thereof. For the purpose of effectively promoting the above objects:

Resolved, that 15 members of this convention be appointed by the chairman to act as an executive committee while this convention is not in session, with full powers of this convention. The executive committee shall have the power to increase its membership to any number not exceeding 45, and five members thereof shall at all times constitute a quorum of said committee.

The special committee shall have special charge of the solicitation, receipt and disbursement of contributions, voluntarily made for all purposes; shall have power to call this convention together again when and where it may seem best to said committee to do so, and said committee shall continue in office with power to fill vacancies until discharged at a future meeting of the convention.

Resolved, that it shall be the duty of this executive committee to endeavor to procure at the special session of congress, which it is understood will be called in March next, legislation calling for the appointment of a monetary commission by the president to consider the entire question and to report to congress at the earliest day possible.

Or failing to secure the above legislation they are hereby authorized and empowered to select a commission of 11 members, according to the rules and plans set forth in the suggestions submitted to the convention by Mr. Hanna, of Indianapolis, as follows:

Article 1. The commission shall consist of 11 members, to be named by the executive committee appointed by this convention. The executive committee shall have power to fill vacancies in the commission as they may occur.

Article 2. The first meeting of the commission shall be held at a time and place to be designated by the executive committee of this convention, and when so assembled it shall organize by the election of such officers and the adoption of such rules and by-laws for its own government as may be agreed by a majority of its members, and thereafter it shall be governed by such rules and by-laws subject to these articles.

Article 3. All rules and by-laws of the commission and all its proceedings shall be directed towards the accomplishment of the objects of its creation, which is to make a thorough investigation of the monetary affairs and needs of this country, and all relations and aspects, and to make appropriate suggestions as to any evils found to exist, and the remedies therefor, and to limit is placed upon the scope of such inquiry or the manner of conducting the same, excepting only that the expenses thereof shall not exceed the sums set apart for such purpose by the executive committee.

Article 4. The executive committee of this convention shall use so much of the voluntary contributions made to it as may be available for that purpose to defray all necessary expenses of the commission, and shall notify the commission from time to time of the amount so available, in order that it may regulate its expenditures accordingly, and no liability shall attach to said committee or this convention beyond the amount so certified.

Article 5. When the labors of this commission have been completed as far as practicable, the executive committee, if it deems it advisable, shall issue a call to bring this convention together again at a time and place designated in such call; and at the meeting so convened the commission shall make reports of its doings and operations as such committee may see fit, and it shall deem best adapted to present the same to this convention and its members for action; and if legislation is deemed advisable it shall accompany such reports with a draft of such bill or bills providing for such legislation.

Resolved: That all resolutions and communications as to methods of currency reform which have been presented to this convention be referred to such commission when formed.

MINISTER WILLIS DEAD.

He Contracted a Cold in San Francisco, Some Time Ago,

While on His Way Back to the Islands—The Body Laid in State in the Former Throne Room—Remains to Be Brought to Louisville.

(Correspondence of the United Associated Presses per Steamer Monowai.)

HONOLULU, Jan. 7, via SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 16.—United States Minister Albert S. Willis died at his residence yesterday at 8 a. m. after several months' illness. The direct cause of death was pneumonia, which he first contracted in San Francisco early last year. His condition has been at times such that gave his family hopes of his ultimate recovery, and again it was precarious to a degree that filled his physicians with grave alarm. He has been surrounded at all times by the best medical treatment in the city and every care was given the minister, but in spite of a vigorous constitution, which has assisted him in battling with the disease, he succumbed after long and severe suffering.

ALBERT S. WILLIS.

It is not known whether an escort will be sent with the remains but it seems to be the opinion of a number of citizens that a representative of the foreign office should be detailed as an escort to accompany the remains to Louisville and turn them over to the officials there.

Until the funeral takes place a detail of gentlemen, selected by the minister of foreign affairs will remain at the Willis residence.

Directly the intelligence of the death of Minister Willis was received by the government the flags on the judiciary building and military headquarters were lowered to half mast. Most of the business houses and the shipping followed suit as soon as the death was known.

Mrs. Willis is nearly prostrated from the long care of her husband. The family expects to sail for home with the remains on the steamer Australia on the 13th. The Hawaiian government will accord a state funeral to the deceased representative of the United States to-morrow. The body will lie in state during the morning in the former throne room. Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. in Central Union church. The procession to the cemetery, where the body will be placed in the receiving vault until the sailing of the steamer, will be preceded by the military and a battalion from the United Stated steamer Alert. President Dole and the chief officials of the government will follow the mourners. It will be the most imposing funeral since the burial of Kalakaua. Mr. Willis left a small estate but ample life insurance.

WASHINGTON, Jan 18.—Albert S. Willis was born in Shelby county, Kentucky, in 1843, and served as a democratic representative from the Fifth Kentucky (Louisville) district from the Forty-fifth to the Forty-ninth congress inclusive, when he was succeeded by Mr. Caruth.

After the mission of Paramount Commissioner Blount to Hawaii, and the report he made to the president all glog that Queen Liliuokalani had been wrongfully unseated from the throne of the Hawaiian Islands by United States intervention, Mr. Willis was appointed by President Cleveland in September, 1893 minister to Hawaii, and was sent with sealed instructions to restore Liliuokalani to her throne on condition that she grant general amnesty to those concerned in setting up the provisional government and recognize all its bona fide acts and obligations.

The queen refused to do this and the upshot was that Mr. Willis eventually recognized the Dole government, and was subsequently formally accredited to it. The anxieties of his position had a marked effect upon his health and appearance. When he left for Honolulu he was a fine specimen of physical development with a full black beard and hair. When he returned less than two years later his hair was white and he was in appearance a wreck of his former self. He discharged his exceedingly difficult duties in Hawaii with marked tact and discretion and was popular there in spite of the adverse circumstances which surrounded him from the start.

President Cleveland was deeply affected by the news of the death of Minister Willis. He had known Mr. Willis for many years, and recently had been closely associated with him. He was an honest and thoroughly capable man whom the president held in the highest esteem, and of whose death he learned with deepest regret.

Congratulations.

The Clevelands Reception.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The first official reception of President and Mrs. Cleveland for this season took place Thursday night at the executive mansion. Without it was cold and forbidding, a slight snow being on the ground and the trees about the building drooping their white wings. Within all was radiant and luxuriant and warm. Hundreds of palms, large and small were placed about the brilliantly lighted rooms. The great cast room never showed to better advantage. Hanging from the great chandeliers was running ivy which reveled in immunity while clusters the thousands of electric lights of varied colors which peered out upon the moving throng below like dancing stars. The mantels were banked with roses fringed with hyacinths and fern. Lo ty palms reared graceful forms to the ceiling. Moving among the semi-tropical scene, in sharp contrast to the bleak exterior, was a throng composed of the wealth, fashion and beauty of Washington society. It was diplomatic night. he brilliant uniforms of the foreign diplomats, varied as the language they speak and the people they represent, the no less showy but less varied uniforms of United States army and navy officers, the full dress toilets of the ladies, the trim appearance of the men in full dress, all make a scene which, taken with the surrounding, was dazzlingly brilliant. Music from the Marine band floated in from the spacious vestibule, adding its charm to the gathering.

EXPENSIVE TURNOUTS.

The carriages are to be furnished inside in green morocco, the exterior body panels are to be dark green and striped with black, and the mountings are to be in silver.

The cost of these is said to be about $5,000. They are to be delivered in Washington, and be at the depot for Maj. McKinley and family when the latter arrive in the national capital.

INDEPENDENCE

The Insurgent General Very Indignant Over the Reports Circulated in the United States That He Was Ready to Enter Upon Other Negotiations.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—A special cable dispatch to the Sun from Havana says: Information is received here from a reliable source that Gen. Gomez and the Cuban government have been addressed by the junta of New York requesting from them an official declaration of their sentiments with regard to the arrangement reported in New York to be making between the cabinets of Madrid and Washington for granting to Cuba some reforms from Spain or home rule in order to satisfy the revolutionists.

A special messenger from Havana carried the document, which arrived safely in the hands of Gomez and President Cisneros at a place near the boundary of the provinces of Matanzas. Gen. Gomez was very indignant over the news that he was reported in the United States to be ready to enter upon any negotiations whatsoever with the Spaniards which are not based upon the absolute independence of the island. He at once prepared an answer which will be signed, not only by himself but by the government, emphatically denouncing as lies all the reports about him spread by the Spanish legation in Washington, and declaring that the war will continue until Cuba is released forever from the Spanish yoke. This answer will not go to New York by way of Havana. It is intended for publication by all the newspapers of America.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

And the District Presidents to Adjust the Miners' Wage Scale According to Conditions.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 18.—Just before adjourning sine die late Saturday night the United Mine Workers' convention rescinded the resolution fixing February 1 as the date for the new wage scale to take effect, and empowered the national executive committee and the district presidents to adjust the wage scale according to the conditions. The joint meeting of the operators and miners, set for Monday was also declared off, the Ohio Coal operators not being willing to join the meeting. The action of the convention in rescinding the wage scale resolution was forced by expressions from many of the delegates to the effect that many of their constituents were opposed to entering on a strike, and the certainty that the operators would not increase wages at this time except at the end of a long strike.

President Ratchford, of the United Mine workers, has called a meeting of the new national executive committee here Monday. As this committee has power to make a wage scale it is expected that this matter will be taken through President Ratchford said Sunday night that he did not know what would be done.

Of California, Calls Upon President-Elect McKinley; Also Senators Quay and Penrose.

CANTON, O., Jan. 18.—Judge Joseph McKenna, of California, whose name has been so prominently mentioned in the dispatches of the United Presses from Canton, as the leading Pacific slope cabinet possibility, arrived here Saturday morning, and was an early caller at Maj. McKinley's house. The fact that Judge McKenna, who is on the United States bench, made the trip from California to Canton at this time seems to indicate that he will be offered and will accept a cabinet portfolio.

Senator Quay and Senator-elect Penrose, arrived here Saturday morning and called on Maj. McKinley. One topic of conversation was the proposed appointment of Charles Emory Smith, of Philadelphia, to the cabinet. It is understood that Mr. Quay is not personally opposed to Mr. Smith.

Sherman Erroneously Quoted.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Senator Sherman said Sunday night, with regard to certain alleged interviews with him on the Cuban question, that he had not made any statement that could be construed as an indication of the policy of the incoming administration on that matter. In so far as this appeared in the press dispatches he had been erroneously quoted.

Second Session.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—SENATE—Senator Allison (rep., Ia.) appeared for the chamber Monday for the first time this session. A resolution on the subject of a violation of the eight-hour law on the part of contractors with the navy department on work in Brooklyn, N. Y., was the subject of a resolution offered by Mr. Allen (pop., Neb.). An argument was made by Mr. Foraker (rep., O.) in favor of a proposed constitutional amendment, making the presidential term six years and making the president ineligible for re-election. Also making the term of representatives in the lower house of congress three years. Then the great feature of the day's session was begun with a speech by Mr. J. Mills (dem., Tex.), in support of his joint resolution introduced last Thursday declaring that the expediency of recognizing the independence of a new government belongs to congress, recognizing the independence of the republic of Cuba, and appropriating $10,000 for the salary of a minister to the new republic. The resolution went over without action.

HOUSE—Fate overtook the Pacific railroad refunding bill in the house Monday. It was defeated by a majority of 66 votes, and its supporters were even prevented from sending it back to the committee for reconsideration. The motion on which the decisive blow was dealt called for the engrossment and third reading of the bill. When the roll had been called and the result was announced the opponents of the measure indulged in some hand clapping, but made no attempt at a more noisy demonstration. The final vote was 168 nays, 102 ayes. The house devoted the remainder of the day to the military academy appropriation bill and to measures brought forward under a call of committees.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—SENATE—Tuesday a bill was introduced by Mr. Hill (dem., N. Y.) and was referred to the post office committee proposing to fix the term of fourth-class postmasters at four years, except in the case of appointments to fill vacancies, when they are to be for the unexpired period. The resolution offered by Mr. Allen (pop., Neb.) Monday in regard to the violation of the eight-hour law in Brooklyn by contractors with the navy department was taken up and agreed to. The house bill for free homesteads on public lands acquired from Indian tribes was taken up as the unfinished business. It was advocated by Mr. Allen and opposed by Mr. Vilas, (dem., Wis.). The bill went over without action and the senate at 5:30 adjourned until Wednesday.

HOUSE—The proceedings were very tame in the house Tuesday. A number of bridge bills and other measures were passed by unanimous consent, and at 5 o'clock an adjournment was taken until Wednesday.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—SENATE—The first two hours of Wednesday's session was spent behind closed doors, in the consideration of executive business (the extradition treaties with Argentina and the Orange republic) and the remainder of the day was occupied in the delivery of a speech by Mr. Bacon (dem., Ga.) on the question whether the recognition of a new power was an executive or a legislative act. His contention was that it was a legislative function. one exclusively for determination by congress. A bill appointing the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of the interior and the attorney general a commission to settle the debt of the Central Pacific to the government was introduced by Mr. Gear (rep., La.), chairman of the committee of Pacific railroads, and was referred to the committee.

HOUSE—The house spent the day on the calender and passed a number of minor bills by unanimous consent. The bill providing that oleomargarine and other imitation dairy products shall be subject to the laws of the state or territory into which they are transported, was sprung unexpectedly. Strong opposition developed at once, with the result that after a long wrangle it was voted down on the previous question on the passage of the bill was voted down by a narrow majority. The house then adjourned.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—SENATE—The house bill for free homesteads on the public lands in Oklahoma Territory, which has been unfinished business in the senate, came to a vote Thursday after three hours' debate and was passed—yeas 35, nays 11. It was first amended in a very important particular by striking out the words "in the territory of Oklahoma," thus in king it apply to all public lands acquired from the various Indian tribes. It provides that all settlers on these lands shall be entitled to patents, on payment of the usual and customary fees and that no further charge of any kind shall be required. It also provides, by another senate amendment, that all sums of money so released, which if not released would belong to any Indian tribe, shall be paid to such tribe by the United States. The bill now goes back to the house for action on the senate amendments. A short effort was made by Mr. Morgan to get up the Nicaragua canal bill and to make it the unfinished business, but there was no quorum voting on his motion and the senate at 4:30 p. m. adjourned till Monday.

HOUSE—The oleomargarine bill was passed Thursday. Considerable opposition was developed, but it did not prove formidable on the yeas and nay vote on the third reading, which the opponents of the measure accepted as final. The yeas were 196 and the nays 96. Some amendments to perfect the measure were agreed to without opposition. The bill makes oleomargarine and other imitation dairy products subject to the laws of the state or territory into which they are transported. The remainder of the day was spent by the house in transacting routine business under the unanimous consent rule.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—SENATE—Not in session.

HOUSE—Five hours were spent Friday in disposing of routine business, principally private pension bills. A number of them were passed. A senate bill granting an increase to the widow of Gen. John Gibbon, met with opposition because in which the bill was drawn, in shape which with the president's approval, will give Mrs. Gibbon $ 00 a month. Mr. Gillett (rep., Mass.) introduced in the house Friday a bill for the relief of officers of the army, from the classified service of the United States at 65 years. All officers are to become vacant when the person holding them becomes 65 years old. No person more than 65 years old is to be eligible to appointment. The act, however, is not to apply to union veterans of the late war or their widows. At the night session of Friday a round dozen of pension bills were passed. The widows of Gen Green C ly Smith and Gen. A. Morrow were the beneficiaries in two of the bills passed. The former receiving a pension of $ 0 per month and the latter 75 per month.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—SENATE—Not in session.

HOUSE—No business of importance was transacted in the house Saturday. Most of the day was spent in delivering eulogies upon the late ex-speaker, Charles F. Crisp.

This may seem somewhat "fishy," but it is nevertheless a fact. Mr. Burr's veracity is beyond reproach.—Auburn News.

Frank Harris, who shot Herman Medley to death on christmas day at Eagle Station, was discharged by County Judge Donaldson at Carrollton. Harris made a statement which was strongly corroborated by circumstances detailed by other witnesses. The Judge held that it was a case in which the unwritten law applied, and dismissed the defendant.—Owenton Herald.

Mr. John Montgomery, of this place, purchased the John I Moore farm, near Millersburg, last week at Commissioner's sale, consisting of 402 acres, paying the nice little sum of $51 70 per acre, or in round numbers about $21,000. This is said to be one of the finest farms in Bourbon county and Mr. Montgomery is to be congratulated on getting such a bargain.—Log Cabin.

The State Board of Examiners will convene at Frankfort on the 29th day of this month for the examination of applicants for certificates of eligibility to the office of County Superintendent. No other special examinations will be held for that purpose this year, but persons who desire to take examination after this can do so at their respective county seats next July or August.

Several years ago Mrs. Elizabeth M. Bedford, of Lewis county, made a will in which she bequeathed her estate. Among other bequests was one of $10,000 to her son, with the proviso that if the son died without issue the money was to go to the State, to be invested in bank stock for the benefit of the school fund. The son died without issue. The matter has been in the courts ever since. In May the Court of Appeals decided the case in favor of the State. On Thursday a check for $10,843 50, the bequest and interest was received by the Secretary of State, and will be invested as directed by the devise.

POLITICAL.

The Republicans and Gold Democrats have fused on county officers in Franklin county.

The Bourbon county Democratic Executive Committee in its call for a primary election to be held May 22d, says: "Believing that the best interests of the people of Kentucky are bound up with the Democratic party, and knowing from experience that Democratic control in local affairs is absolutely essential to the people's welfare, we trust that all Democrats, regardless of differences of opinion on questions of National policy, will unite in the selection of good men for the offices, thus insuring to Bourbon county an efficient and economical administration of local affairs."

Congressman Berry was before the Appropriation Committee, a few days ago, asking it to make $50,000 of the present appropriation for the Newport postoffice available whenever it was needed.

Said Jo Cannon, chairman of this rich and influential committee, to the Tall Poplar of the Licking.

"Col. Berry, we are always glad to serve an active and patriotic member of the House.

"We have under preparation now a bill which will give plenty of revenue so that we can do what is needed in the way of internal improvements. We presume that this measure, when it comes before the house, will receive your hearty endorsement."

"No, sir; it will not," promptly replied Berry, somewhat red; "I will vote against it with a degree of pleasure seldom experienced in a political lifetime."

Mr. Cannon saw his mistake and tried to correct it, by adding indifferently: "Oh, yes, we will do what we can to oblige you."

These are some of the methods which will be used in both House and Senate to insure a safe passage for the next protective bill.

THE Frankfort Capital can not get along with its party. Treasurer Long is the last one to express his opinion of the Capital, and it is not at all complimentary.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27, 1897. NO. 14.

DURING the administration of Gov. Turney, of Tennessee, which closed last week, he pardoned 820 convicts.

THE nearer inauguration day approaches the more difficult it is to decide who is to be inaugurated, Hanna or McKinley.

The Franklin grand jury examined more than one hundred witnesses, but could find no evidence on which to indict toll-gate raiders.

BUSINESS failures continue right along as though that wave of prosperity had not been advertised to strike the country immediately after the Presidential election.

WHEN a bank fails it traces the cause of its trouble to the suspension of some other bank in the past. Some excuse has to be given, but the officers are not always thus saved from arrest for misappropriation of the bank funds.

THE General Assembly of Kentucky will be convened in special session just as soon as Gov. Bradley is satisfied that his choice for United States Senator can succeed, and there be many who think W. O. Bradley is that choice.

THE Republicans are working every scheme imaginable to capture the Senate. In order to carry out the tariff legislation they will propose it is necessary to have a majority of the Senate, and they will leave no stone unturned in their effort to secure it.

WHAT is the matter with Judge Beckner, of Clark county? He has not interviewed himself for about a month. Gov. Bradley's reply to Beckner's last newspaper article seems to have taught the Judge a thing or two, that may be of very great value to him in the future.

IF Mark Hanna does not succeed Sherman as Senator from Ohio, the Republican party in that State will be torn to pieces by dissentions. Hanna wants the Senatorship, and having become owner in fee of the Republican party in the United States, about all that is necessary is the formality of an election.

THE Republican Press Association, of Indiana, held its annual meeting at Indianapolis, last week. The only thing unusual at the meeting was the large number of petitions praying for a slice of federal pie, that was circulated. Nearly every editor present wanted a government position, and was seeking to get all the others to sigh his petition.

IN the proper column will be found the announcement of L. H. Voshell as a candidate for County Superintendent of Public Schools. He is now serving his first term, and has made a faithful officer, and if reelected he will have the advantage of one term's experience to his credit when the next begins. He is a time-tried and fire-tested Democrat.

IF Bryan had been elected instead of McKinley and the failures of banks and large business concerns continued as they have since the election, the gold bug press would have been yelling, "I told you so," all over this country. The confidence racket they gave the people has not and will not work, and assignments and bank failures are every day occurrences.

IN this issue another good Democrat is announced as a candidate for the office of Assessor—F. A. Utz, of Florence. Mr. Utz has an extensive acquaintance among the people of the county, with whom he has done business so long, and if, they nominate and elect him to the office of Assessor they will find him using the same industry in his official duties as has characterized his private life. He will make a first-class officer.

IN this issue appears the announcement of county Judge Benjamin Stephens as a candidate for the nomination and a reelection to the office of County Judge. Judge Stephens is now serving his first term, but previous to his election to the office of County Judge he had been a member of the Fiscal Court and therefore, he has been familiar with the county's financial affairs for many years. As an officer he has been faithful and fearless in the discharge of his duties, and always keeps in view and guards the public interest. If nominated and reelected he will be as faithful a public servent in the future as in the past. His democracy is too well known to the voters to need a testimonial from any source whatever.

Ex-Auditor Norman Successful.

[Western Argus.]

It will be remembered that the State administration preceding the present one was elected by the votes of Democratic voters, and it was installed with all that pomp usually attending such ceremonies. The distribution of patronage produced dissensions untold, and it was not long before the bitterness between the Executive department and all other departments assumed a warlike hue. Governor Brown was anxious to appoint the Auditor's agents under the name of revenue agents, and he insisted that every appointee of his associate, especially those recommended by Auditor Norman, were totally unfit for office, and each member of the Sinking Fund Commission generally attended the meetings fully equipped for battle. This issue between the officials became so bitter that it was heralded in every newspaper, and as the reporters generally favored the Governor's side of the fight, the other members had little defense. Governor Brown charged that Auditor Norman had entered into a conspiracy with his agent, Max Barker, of Louisville, and was defrauding the State annually out of large sums of money. No suit was brought during Gov. Brown's term, but when he retired from office he did so with a contract signed and delivered to him by his successor, Gov. Bradley, for a fee of $3,000 for employment in bringing suit against ex Auditor Norman for the very acts he had charged him with doing during his term of office.

The suit was filed in the Franklin Circuit Court, and associated with ex-Gov. Brown was R. A. Jacobs, of Danville. The issues were made up last Saturday, and the evidence was heard on Monday and given to the jury. The judge gave the jury peremptory instructions to find for the defendants, and out of court went a suit that cost the Commonwealth $3,000, although the Treasury is "busted."

The witnesses introduced by the plaintiff were Auditor Stone and the defendant, Max Barker. The Auditor was custodian of the reports made by the defendant Barker, and were presented to the Court. There never was any denial of any report, or of the amount of money paid out by the ex-Auditor to his agent. The case hung on the two individuals conspiring together as State officers to defraud the treasury. Auditor Stone said the present law, in so far as the Auditor's agent's authority was concerned, was the same old one, and his construction of it was the same as Auditor Norman's. But when the defendant, Max Barker, was placed on the stand we were reminded of an old story told of Roger Hanson, who was the defendant in a civil suit, and whose attorney was Robert Wooley. The plaintiff called him to the witness stand, when he remarked: "Hold my coat, Bob, while I win this suit." That was what Barker did. He gave a history of his work, his acts, his pay, and the law authorizing it, and closed his remarks.

The attorneys for the defense moved the Court for a peremptory instruction to find for the defendants, and the Court so instructed the jury, and there it ended. That which disrupted the Democratic party, produced war between officials for four long years, lending its aid to defeat the party, was lost, and no one the sufferer but the treasury.

There never was anything in that suit. All Auditors had enforced the law the same. It is well it goes to the higher court for approval; but the taxpayers are the sufferers and the lawyers the beneficiaries in this case. That is all there is in it, and maybe it is better to settle and quit.

POLITICAL.

W. J. Bryan has been invited to address the Tennessee Legislature.

The Graves county Populists have a full ticket in the field for county offices.

The Democrats and Populists of Breckinridge and Grayson counties have fused on county offices.

The Hardin county Populists propose to fuse with the party that will do the best part by them in the division of offices.

Republicans of Cloverport have decided to have a primary for Postoffice candidates, and the negroes, who are in the majority, will support a black man.

The Democratic primary election for Clark County will take place Saturday, May 1. There are 28 candidates in the field for county offices, two being ladies, who want to be Superintendent of the schools.

In the next session of the State Legislature an effort will be made to divide the legislative district composed of Boyd and Lawrence counties into two districts, the required number of voters being far over reached.

The Democratic primary election will be pulled off in Grant county next Saturday. There are sixty candidates in the field, and the voters have been worked thoroughly. In several of the races close finishes are expected.

T. H. Black, a Republican candidate for jailer in Ohio county, is in pursuit of a campaign lie which charges him with shooting holes through the large picture of McKinley, in front of Republican headquarters, one night during the late campaign.

We have received a marked copy of the Daily Tribune, of Warren, O., which contains an article laudatory of Col. Weden Oneal of this city. The Tribune highly commends him as suitable matcrial for United States Senator from Kentucky—Commonwealth.

The Pendleton County Democratic Committee is trying to purge itself of unsympathetic members. To this end the seats of Leslie Applegate and Will Logan were declared vacant. The two members did not support the ticket last fall. But they claim, Applegate especially, that the committee has no right to turn them out—that they are responsible solely to their constituents. So they propose to stick. Cynthiana Democrat.

Pursuant to the call of the Chairman of the county Democratic Executive committee, the committee met in D. E. Castleman's law office in Burlington, last Monday afternoon. The following members were present: D. E. Castleman, chairman; B. L. Rice, Secretary, P. E. Cason, proxy for Elijah Parker; Reuben Conner, Richard Stephens, Robt. McGlasson, Geo. Ossman, proxy for J. C. Hughes.

The chairman stated the object of the meeting to be for the purpose of considering the propriety of changing the date of the primary election as fixed at the last meeting. A motion to reconsider the action of the committee on the second Monday in December was made and carried, and the order made on that date is now held for naught.

It was agreed by the committee to hold a primary election to nominate candidates for the various county offices to be filled at the regular election in November, 1897. It was further agreed that said primary election be held on the first Saturday in June, 1897, and the Executive Committee will meet in the Court-house in Burlington, at 2 o'clock p. m., on Monday, June 7th, 1897, and count the votes cast for each candidate for the respective offices, and the candidate receiving the highest number of votes cast for any office will be declared the Democratic nominee for that office.

The committee adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That all persons who voted for Bryan and Sewall at the last November election, and all persons who did not vote but would have voted for Bryan and Sewall had they voted, and all young men who will be legal voters at the next November election, and will pledge themselves to support the Democratic party and the nominees of said primary election, shall be allowed to vote.

Resolved, That all persons who desire to be candidates before said primary election shall, on or before the 5th day of April, 1897, record their names with the chairman of the county committee and pay their assessments to him.

Resolved, That only such candidates who pay their assessments to defray the expenses of said primary election, on or before the fifth day of April, 1897, shall be entitled to have their name placed upon the ballots to be voted for.

Resolved, That all candidates for precinct offices and for Coroner who wish their names to appear upon the ballots for said primary, shall pay to the chairman of the county committee one dollar, to help pay the expenses of said primary election.

The chairman and secretary were authorized to assess the candidates to defray the expenses of the primary election.

D. E. CASTLEMAN Chairman,
B. L. RICE, Secretary.

MARK HANNA wants to go to the United States Senate to assist in passing a tariff law that will compensate the manufacturers for their liberal contributions to help along the McKinley campaign last fall.

A BAD order surrounds some of Gov. Bradley's appointees in charge of two of the charitable institutions of the State. It is doubtful if the State Inspector will be able to whitewash the officials against whom the accusations are brought.

CUBAN NEWS.

All Houses on Plantations in the Province Which May Serve

As a Refuge for the Enemy to Be Destroyed—The Insurgents Continue Burning the Cane Fields—Gen. Pin Returns on Sick Leave to Spain.

KEY WEST, Fla., Jan. 22.—Passengers by the steamer Olivette bring the following Havana news:

The sinking of the gunboat Reina Mercedes caused a sensation. Nothing is known except from the official reports. Private advices are anxiously expected. It is said a mysterious ship was seen near Cape Cruz, and it is being asked if it had any connection with the occurrence.

Weyler has started with 10,000 men and is crossing Havana province on his march through Matanzas towards Santa Clara. He has ordered the commanders of the zones of Havana within three days to destroy all houses on plantations which may serve as a refuge for the enemy, except those for the use of the detachments. The rebels continue burning cane fields.

Gen. Pin prohibited, in an indirect way, the grinding of cane in Cienfugos by arresting laborers and capturing carts. The foreign planters wished to know if he had a written order to prevent work. Pin consulted Weyler, not hiding his sympathies with the planters. Weyler sent a curt reply, transferring Pin to Bayamo, and Pin returns on sick leave to Spain. All classes at Cienfuegos have telegraphed Weyler expressing regret on Pin's departure.

HAVANA, Jan. 22.—The remains of Henry Delgado, the American prisoner who died Wednesday morning at the San Ambrosio hospital, where he had been confined ever since his arrival in this city after his capture in an insurgent hospital in the province of Pinar del Rio, were interred at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon in the Colon cemetery.

PREMIER LAURIER

Advocates More Friendly Trade Relations With the United States.

MONTREAL, Jan. 23.—Premier Laurier, speaking to a public meeting here Thursday night on Canadian trade extensions, said it had long been his opinion that commercial relations between Canada and the United States should be more friendly than they are at present. While he was emphatic in asserting that the efforts of parliament should be directed towards getting for Canada the trade of the western states, he wished it well understood that he was against the idea that friendliness with the United States meant hostility to England. The Canadian government intended to have so far as they could better trade relations with the United States, but if that meant hostility to England they would have none of it. It was the boast of Canadians, and he was proud to say it, that colonials though they were, they did not believe the sun shone on a freer country than this, and they felt gratified to the great empire which protected their liberty. It was with these sentiments that he wished to approach the government of the United States. If it were his duty and privilege to go to the United States and speak of better trade relations between Canada and that country he would say: "We come here not as suppliants, but as free men to talk business with free men and if you will accept a basis of relations upon this ground let us at once negotiate; but if you expect that we come here simply to starve in the country to which we belong we shall do nothing of the kind."

THE ARKANSAS LEGISLATURE.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 22.—Six years ago this month the Arkansas legislature passed a bill appropriating $350 for a painting of Jefferson Davis and instructed the sergeant-at-arms to hang it over the speaker's chair, a place formerly occupied by a portrait of George Washington. Wednesday Jacob King, of Stone county, introduced the following resolution relative to the picture:

The house by an overwhelming majority rejected the resolution.

Mr. King says he was in the confederate army, and with Gen. Lee at the surrender of Appomattox, and introduced the resolution at the urgent request of his constituents.

DUN'S REPORT.

Business Is Unquestionably Better, But Prices Are Unimproved—Large Production, But as Yet But Little Increase in Consumption.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—R. G. Dun & Co. will say Saturday in their weekly review of trade:

There is more business, though not at better prices. It is interesting that almost all prices which will change at all are lower than a week ago and yet business is unquestionably larger. There is larger production, but as yet not as much increase in consumption, and there is larger buying of materials, but at present only because better prices are expected in the future. A few conspicuous failures during the week have had no material influence. The market for securities is slightly stronger, and yet there is very little doing. The number of hands employed, all industries considered, is slightly larger than a week ago, with adverse change in the rate of wages. All apprehension of foreign disturbance of money markets has passed away, but there is still great caution in making loans. It is a mistake to reckon these as symptoms of depression. On the contrary, in view of the lower range of prices in important industries, the conditions all indicate larger production and a consumption increasing not as yet large, but steadily.

The earnings of railroads in January have been 4.4 per cent. smaller than last year.

Wheat, corn and cotton exports are the key of the financial situation, and during the past week wheat has declined 3c and corn 2c, while cotton is unchanged. The western receipts of wheat are still small.

The woolen industry is as slow as ever and no improvement appears in the demand for goods, although owing to the lateness of the season there is a little more doing, both in spring and in winter goods, without quotable change in prices. The heavy buying of wool mentioned last week has continued and is understood to be in anticipation of expected duties, the sales at Boston alone having amounted to 11,856,000 pounds. Quotations have not changed as yet, although western holders are quite stiff. In the minor metals a stronger tone is general.

The iron industry is engaged in settling relative prices and the slow operation retards business in many branches, since the future of prices is uncertain. Bessemer pig is a trifle lower.

The bar association has been in session to consider the reduction of steel bars to one cent, and in large contracts even lower, and the billet association has again been called together to meet on the 29th, although there is no prospect of its re-organization and billets are selling at 15.25 at Pittsburg. The increase in manufacturing is perhaps more definitely shown than in any other way by the production of coke, which steadily increases, 9,817 ovens being in blast against 8,178 idle, and the week's output 100,886 tons, is over double the output for October. Failures for the week have been 409 in the United States against 372 last year, and 65 in Canada against 61 last year.

CONTROLLER ECKELS

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 23.—Controller Eckels has appointed Robert H. Courtney receiver of the suspended German national bank. Mr. Eckels urges that a part of the deposits appearing on the bank's books are fictitious. The controller has declined to forward President McKnight's papers for a reorganization and says the arrested bank officers shall have nothing more to do with national banks. Mr. Eckels also said that McKnight had been elected president against his warning. F. M. Hays, the expert accountant of the controller's office, is on his way to Louisville to assist the district attorney in securing evidence for the prosecution of President McKnight. Hays is the man who worked on the famous cases of the Fidelity national bank of Cincinnati and the Indianapolis national bank.

Mr. McKnight had nothing to say Friday morning about the charges against him, but informed the reporters that he had called a meeting of the directors for Friday afternoon, when he would make a statement clearing himself of all blame with the bank's suspension.

A WARRANT

For the Arrest of Cashier Stone, of the Defunct Sioux City Savings Bank, Issued.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Jan. 23.—Warrants for the arrest of Cashier E. P. Stone, of the defunct Sioux City savings bank, were issued Saturday. The depositors counted on $20,000 of cattle paper in the bank vaults as among the best assets. An investigation failed to discover either the cattle or the makers of the notes, however, and the depositors feared Stone had forged them. Reports that he had fled increased the excitement and Friday his arrest was resolved on by the depositors. According to his friends he is negotiating for a position in New York and expected to return here in three weeks. He is charged with forgery, making false reports to state auditor, withdrawing the bank's money for his own use and giving in return worthless securities.

Ex-Cashier Youtsey Makes an Assignment.

NEWPORT, Ky., Jan. 23.—Thomas B. Youtsey, ex-cashier of the First national bank, of Newport, Ky., made an assignment Friday morning. C. W. Nagel is assignee. The sureties are L. J. Crawford, the attorney for Scott Jackson, and John Schroll, president of the Newport national bank.

IMMIGRATION BILL.

The New Measure Is Very Strict in Its Provisions as to Immigrants

Being Allowed to Land in This Country—They Are to Stand a Rigid Examination as to Their Abilities to Read the Constitution of United States.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—An immigration bill has been agreed upon by all the conferees of the senate and house except Mr. Bartholdt (rep., Mo.), chairman of the house committee in charge of the subject.

The bill provides that all persons physically capable and over 16 years of age, who can not read and write the English language or the language of their native or resident countries, but a person not so able to read and write who is over 50 years of age, and is the parent or grandparent of a qualified immigrant over 21 years of age and capable of supporting such parent or grandparent may be sent for and come to join the family of a child or grandchild over 21 years of age similarly qualified and capable.

For the purpose of testing the ability of the immigrant to read and write as required by the foregoing section, the inspection officers shall be furnished with copies of the constitution of the United States, printed on numbered, uniform pasteboard slips, each containing not less than twenty nor more than twenty-five words of said constitution, printed in the various languages of the immigrants in double small pica type. These slips shall be kept in boxes made for that purpose and so constructed as to conceal the slips from view, each box to contain slips of but one language, and the immigrant may designate the language in which he prefers the test shall be made. Each immigrant shall be required to draw one of said slips from the box and read, and afterwards write out, in full view of the immigration officers, the words printed thereon. Each slip shall be returned to the box immediately after the test is finished and the contents of the box shall be shaken up by inspection officer before another drawing is made. No immigrant failing to read and write out the slip thus drawn by him shall be admitted, but he shall be returned to the country from which he came at the expense of the steamship or railroad company which brought him, as now provided by law. The inspection officers shall keep in each box, at all times, a full number of said printed pasteboard slips, and in the case of each excluded immigrant shall keep a certified memorandum of the number of slip, which the said immigrant failed to read or copy out in writing. If in any case from any unavoidable cause the foregoing slips are not at hand for use, the inspection officers shall carefully and thoroughly test the ability of the immigrant to read and write, using the most appropriate and available means at their command, and shall state fully in writing the reason why the slips are lacking, and describe the substitute method adopted for testing the ability of the immigrant.

It shall be unlawful for any male alien who has not in good faith made his declaration before the proper court of record of his intention to become a citizen of the United States to be employed on any public works of the United States, or to come regularly or habitually into the United States by land or water for the purpose of engaging in any mechanical trade or manual labor, for wages or salary, returning from time to time to a foreign country.

It shall also be unlawful for any person, partnership, company or corporation knowingly to employ any alien coming into the United States in violation of this preceding section; provided that the provisions of this act shall not apply to the employment of sailors, deck hands, or other employes of vessels, or railroad train hands, such as conductors, engineers, brakemen, firemen, or baggagemen whose duties require them to pass over the frontier to reach the termini of their runs, or to boatmen or guides on the lakes and rivers on the northern border of the United States.

Notwithstanding the provisions of the act or any other existing law the secretary of the treasury may permit aliens to enter this country for the purpose of teaching new arts or industries under such rules and regulations as he may provide.

Section 9 of the act provides that this act shall not apply to persons arriving in the United States from any port or place in Cuba during the continuance of the present disorders there, who have heretofore been inhabitants of that island.

Penalties in the nature of fine and imprisonment are provided for violations of any of the provisions of the act, which shall, if it becomes a law, go into effect July 1, 1897.

SIR ISAAC PITMAN,

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Sir Isaac Pitman, the inventor of the stenography which bears his name, is dead.

Sir Isaac Pitman was born at Trowbridge, Wilts, January 4, 1813. After six years' service as a clothier's clerk, he was sent to the Normal college of British and Foreign school society, London, and after five months' training, at the close of 1831, was appointed master of the British school of Barton-on-Humbar. He established the British school at Wotton-Under-Edge in 1836, and removed to Bath in 1839. His first treatise on shorthand, entitled "Stnographic Round Hand," appeared in 1837 and he thus became the originator of spelling reform, to which, and the propagation of his system of phonetic shorthand, he devoted his entire attention since 1843, when the phonetic society was established. His system of shorthand was renamed in 1840 and entitled "Phonography or Writing by Sound," and his "Phonographic Reporters Companion," appeared in 1846. Mr. Pitman edited and printed the Phonetic Journal. Besides printing his own instruction books for teaching phonetic shorthand, Mr. Pitman had issued a little library of about eighty volumes, printed entirely in shorthand, ranging from the Bible to Rasselas. In the autumn of 1887 an international shorthand congress and jubilee of phonography was held in London and Mr. Pitman's family was presented with his bust. A gold medal from the phonographers of the United States and one from those of Great Britain and the colonies were presented to Mr. Pitman in recognition of the invention of his system of short hand and of his labors for the reformation of the English orthography. Mr. Pitman received the honor of knighthood in 1894.

SECOND DAY

Of the Coast and Harbor Defense Improvement Convention—The Army Reorganization, or "Lamont Bill," Fully Indorsed.

TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 23.—In the coast and harbor defense and improvement convention Friday the committee on resolutions submitted its report, which was adopted without debate. The resolutions provides that the convention shall not submit any suggestion to the United States government looking toward the appropriation of any specific sum of money for the national defense, leaving the matter entirely to recommendation of the proper authority.

The army reorganization or "Lamont bill" is fully indorsed, and an early consideration of the same bill by congress is urged and its passage recommended. An increase in the annual appropriation for the state militia of the United States and the distribution of the Springfield rifles turned in by the United States army among the militia or national guard of the various states is recommended. Congress is urged to enact such legislation as will give proper aid to the naval reserves of our country. The yearly addition of fighting ships and torpedo boats to the strength of the navy is recommended. The attention of congress is called to the necessity of immediate protection to the seaboard of the country. The convention closed its session Friday.

The committee on resolutions further recommended the organization of a national defense organization and that the following gentlemen constitute the officers of the permanent association for the first year: President, Gen. Horace Porter, of New York; secretary, Col. J. A. Frye, of Massachusetts; first vice president, Gen. J. B. Gordon, of Georgia; second vice president, Gen. Lew Wallace, of Indiana; third vice president, Hon. W. K. McClure, of Pennsylvania; fourth vice president, Gen. R. A. Alger, of Michigan; fifth vice president, M. H. De Young, of California; sixth vice president, Gen. Wm. Miller, of Florida; seventh vice president, John C. Pepes, of Massachusetts.

A national committee is also suggested as follows:

Gov. Bradley Will Not Interfere.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 23.—Gov. Bradley will not discuss the probability of a pardon or commutation for Jackson and Walling. His reason for silence on the subject is that the mandate is not in his hands, and the case is not yet officially before him. It is known, however, that the governor's views about the guilt of the condemned man are positive, and that he will not interfere. While this is not given on the authority of the governor himself, it is from a source which is thoroughly reliable. The date of the hanging will be somewhere about the middle of February.

Young Lochinvar who, according to the story, ran away with his bride, did not love her one particle more devotedly than a thousand honest husbands of the present day love their wives.

No novelist could invent a story of truer manly devotion than the "humble romance" revealed by the following letter from Mr. Harry Chant, of 211 Haskell Avenue, Dallas, Texas.

"About fourteen or fifteen months ago I was working with a gang of men and happened to say to one of them, 'I hope it will not rain as I have a big washing to do for the children.' The man said, 'What is the matter with your wife?'

"For years my wife had been suffering from what the doctors called prolapsus of uterus. She was nervous, had cold hands and feet, palpitation, headache, backache, constipation, a disagreeable drain, with bearing down pains, no appetite. She got so weak she could not get around. I am only a laborer so was always in debt with the doctors, and all for no good, as none did her any good. We began to think that she was never going to get well.

"I told this man what the doctors said was the matter with her," and he said "did you ever hear of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription?" "I told him no, but had tried so many patent medicines that I was tired of them all, and besides I did not have enough money to pay the doctor and the drug store. He said if I would get two or three bottles and try them, and if it did not do my wife any good that he would pay for the medicine. I went to the drug store (Mr. Clawber's on Elm Street), and bought a bottle. The first and second did not seem to have much effect but the third seemed to work like a charm. She had taken in all about thirteen bottles and she is today as strong and healthy as any woman in the United States. This is not the only case. When ever I hear tell of any woman who is sick in the neighborhood I first send the book and paper that is wrapped around every bottle and that does the business. I am no longer bothered about doing my own washing and cooking, for my wife can do it all in one day and never seems tired or out of spirits now."

A FORECAST

Of Business to Be Transacted in Congress this Week.

The Arbitration Treaty, Canal Bill and Rebellion in Cuba

Will Be Discussed in the Senate—The Bankruptcy Bill Likely to Be Called Up—The New Immigration Bill Will Be Introduced in the House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The arbitration treaty, the Nicaragua canal and the insurrection in Cuba will be again discussed in the senate during the coming week. Senator Turpie, of Indiana, will open the Cuban debate Monday, ostensibly on Senator Cameron's resolution recognizing the independence of the Cuban republic. Mr. Turpie will devote a considerable portion of his time, however, as he said, to a consideration of the subject of the independence of congress, with such incidental strictures on the manifesto of Secretary Olney as may occur to plain, outspoken man who believes the executive department has overstepped its proper function in seeking to intimidate the senate by the threat of the veto power and the predicted defiance of contemplated legislation. Mr. Turpies' penchant for sarcastic comments and his failure to conform to the polite language of diplomacy in attacking policies he believes to be wrong, lead to the belief that his speech may be piquant reading.

The condition of the Nicaragua bill is particular, it is still the unfinished business. Senator Morgan, who has given the subject careful consideration says the bill is drawn so to come within terms of the concession granted by Nicaragua, and he denies that the letter of minister Rodriguez has any weight whatever. He will antagonize the motion to send the bill back to the commitie if nay is made, and insist upon the vote on the bill being taken. The debate in the senate will probably be protracted until the correspondence of Nicaragua called for by Mr. Morgan's resolution adopted Saturday, is received. Meanwhile the Rodriguez letter will have an important bearing upon the general treaty of arbitration which will be taken up by the senate committee in special session Monday. Friends of the Nicaraguan bill will antagonize final action of the treaty until something definite is done on the canal bill.

At the conclusion of Mr Turpie's speech Monday the senate will listen to eulogies on the late ex-Speaker Crisp. The bankruptcy bill, which was on the special order for 2 o'clock, will in all probability be postponed a few days. The bill to provide for the representation of the United States by commissioners at any international monetary conference hereafter in the bill called the Wolcott bill, will be considered Monday after the morning business.

Less than six weeks of the present session of congress remain, and this fact has impressed up the managers of the house the necessity of more vigorously pushing the appropriation bills yet remaining to be considered. It was stated Saturday by a member of the committee on rules that the agricultural and Indian bills now on the calendar would be the principal items of business on the programme this week. These bills, although carrying comparatively small sums, usually give rise to more debates than others on the list. Their distribution, provided for in the agricultural bill, is sure to evoke criticism, and the Indian school question can be relied upon to occupy a day or more of the time of the house. The Indian bill further contains the provisions of the bill reported two or three weeks ago, to abolish the offices of Indian commissioner and assistant Indian commissioner, and confer their duties on a board of commissioners. This may be promptly disposed of on a point of order, but is more likely to be the occasion of considerable talk before being thus disposed of. The new immigration bill agreed upon by the committee will be presented to the house Monday and the advocates of the measure will endeavor to secure a day later in the week for its consideration.

CONFIDENCE CLERK

Forges Paper to the Amount of $19,000 —The Amount Made Good.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 25.—Forged assignants of contractors and estimates of city work, on which $19,500 was raised, have been discovered. The paper was held by the Columbia national bank and the Mercantile Trust Co., but neither institution will lose anything, for the reason that the amount involved has been made good by the contractor, W. J. Dunn. Mr. Dunn places the blame on a confidential clerk, who, he says, is now in the west, but would not give his name.

The man has wealthy relatives who will probably make good the money taken by him. The forged assignments were placed in the banks as collateral and were discovered when they were presented to the county controller for payment. The actual amount of money appropriated by the clerk was $10,000.

Minister Willis' Remains in Louisville.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 25.—The remains of the late Hon. Albert S. Willis, minister to Hawaii, who died in Honolulu January 3, arrived Sunday night accompanied by Mrs. Willis and her son. The casket was taken to the residence of W. H. Delaney, father of Mrs. Willis. The funeral will take place Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock from the First Christian church, and the burial will be in Cave Hill.

Noted Musician and Composer Dead.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 25.—Otto Van Gumpert, one of Milwaukee's oldest musicians and composers, died of apoplexy Sunday. He was born in Silesia, Germany, 57 years ago, and came to the United States in 1869. He remained in New York only a short time and then came to Milwaukee, where he has since resided.

Second Session.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—SENATE—Not in session.

HOUSE—No business of importance was transacted in the house Saturday. Most of the day was spent in delivering eulogies upon the late ex-speaker, Charles F. Crisp.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—SENATE—Senator Murphy's bill for a new custom house in New York was reported back favorably and placed on the calendar. The present custom house site is to be used, and the limit of cost is $3,000,000. The bill to provide for a representation of the United States by commissioners at any international monetary conference was introduced and is to be taken up Tuesday without reference to committee. The army appropriation bill appropriating over $25,000,000, was passed without question or remark. There was a few minor amendments which will probably be considered in the house, without the formality of a conference. The Nicaragua canal bill was taken up and made the unfinished business (8 to 10, and after two hours' speech in support of it by Mr. Morgan (dem., Ala.) the senate at 5:15 adjourned until Tuesday.

HOUSE—The house spent Monday in consideration of miscellaneous matters, business of the District of Columbia occupying the greater portion of the session. Aside from these matters of purely local interest, bills were passed: To prohibit and punish the sale of liquors to the Indians over whom the interior department exercises guardianship, extending for two years the time for the completion of the Kansas, Oklahoma Central and Southwestern railway through Indian territory and Oklahoma, amending the patent laws, along the lines proposed by the American Bar association; to give to the United States the benefit of devices patented by a naval officer; authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Rio Grande at El Paso, Tex.; also of a bridge across the Monongehela from Brownsville to Mifflin, Pa.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—SENATE—The legislative appropriation bill was taken up after the Nicaragua measure had been laid aside and was completed with the exception of provisions in relation to the library of congress which went over without action till Wednesday. Earlier in the day's proceedings Mr. Hill (dem., N. Y.) spoke for an hour and a half on a joint resolution relating to electric sub-ways in the District of Columbia. The resolution offered by Mr. Morgan (dem., Ala.) last week to default in the Pacific Railroad Co's. and the one offered Tuesday by Mr. Pettigrew (silver, S. D.) as to the Venezuel an and Guiana boundary agreement, were laid before the senate, but went over the first indefinitely and the other until Wednesday.

HOUSE—The house spent the whole of Tuesday's session in consideration of the unfavorably adverse private pension bills. Favorable action was taken upon 83 of them, one being the senate bill to increase to $100 a month the pension of Maj. Gen. Julius H. Stahel.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—SENATE—Wednesday the bill for the erection of a new custom house building in New York on the site of the present building at a cost not exceeding $3,000,000, appropriating $250,000 for one years' rental of temporary premises and appointing at a salary of $5,000 each a board of five builders of commissioners passed. It now goes to the house. The legislative appropriation bill was taken up and finished and a house bill providing for refunding foreign vessels from tonnage charges was taken up and passed.

HOUSE—A partial agreement of the conferees on the army appropriation bill was reported and agreed to, the house insisting upon further disagreement to the senate amendments still in dispute. Bills were passed authorizing the construction of bridges across the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers in Kentucky; granting to the American register to the bark E. C. Stevens, owned in Philadelphia; authorizing the secretary of war to grant certificates showing the services of telegraphers in the war for the union reducing the fees and salaries of officials in the Pacific and Rocky Mountain states. The consideration of a contested election case gave the house Wednesday an opportunity to indulge in some political discussion as relating to elections in Virginia. It was that of Jacob Yost vs. H. St. George Tucker, from the Tenth district of Virginia, the second attempt was made by Mr. Hill (dem., N.Y.), backed by Mr. Chandler, to have a bill considered and passed fixing the term of office of all postmasters at four years.

HOUSE—After 125 members of the house of representatives, including 53 republicans, had voted in accordance with the recommendation of the majority of the committee on elections No. 3, that Mr. Tucker (dem.) was entitled to retain his seat as a member of the Fifty-fourth congress from the Tenth Virginia district, which was contested by Mr. Yost (rep.), two hours were spent in making the vote effective and finally settling the matter. The case had been discussed from noon until 4:30 o'clock. The resolution declaring Tucker entitled to the seat was adopted at 6:30 o'clock by a vote of 119 to 47, 14 members being present and not voting. The result was clinched by the adoption of the motion to reconsider the vote and to lay that motion on the table and the house then adjourned.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—SENATE—Senator Turpie gave notice that he would call up the Cameron resolution recognizing the republic of Cuba on Monday. In an informal way the arbitration treaty was discussed for some time, when the whole debate was declared out of order. After this there was a bill of some 30 minutes in the proceedings during which the military academy appropriation bill was under consideration, the passage being impended by a proposition to have the West Point cadets participate in the inauguration parade. Before the bill had been disposed of the morning hour expired and the Nicaragua canal bill was taken up as the unfinished business. At the threshold another international question was injected into the shape of a letter from the secretary of state transmitting a communication from Mr. Rodriguez, minister of the "greater republic of Central American," protesting against the various Nicaragua bills before congress as being in violation of the contract with the Maritime Canal Co.

HOUSE—Friday was public bill day, and there was little of public interest done in the house. Mr. Cooper (dem., Tex.) called up and the house passed over the president's veto the bill to establish a new division of the eastern judicial district of Texas. The feature of the debate on this matter was a caustic criticism by Mr. Grosvenor (rep., O.) upon the executive order which denied senators and representatives access to the president except through the private secretary of the president. After o'clock the house took the usual recess for the consideration of private pension bills. Ten pension bills were passed at the night session and the house adjourned until Monday.

Cast Iron Pipe Prices.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 21.—The National Cast Iron Pipe Manufacturers' association held its second day's session here Wednesday, and reaffirmed the prices of last year. No other business of public importance was transacted, and adjournment was taken until next year.

Senator Vest Formally Re-Elected.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Jan 21.—Both branches of the legislature met in joint session at noon, Wednesday and George Graham Vest, of Sedalia, was formally re-elected to represent Missouri in the United States senate.

THE COMETA.

The Authorities Profess to Know Nothing of Her Destruction.

Several Engagements Between the Troops and Insurgents.

According to Havana Advices the Troops Were Uniformly Victorious—The Most Important Battle Took Place at Guyes, Province of Havana.

HAVANA, Jan. 25.—The marine authorities here ignore the Cometa affair and it is impossible to learn from them what if any truth there is in the report that the little gunboat has been destroyed by insurgents. The military authorities profess to know nothing of the matter, and in this case their professions are believed to be true, for in view of the antagonism between the naval and military authorities it is considered that if the latter were in possession of facts detrimental to the navy, they would not hesitate to make them known to the general public. From other than official sources it is learned, however, that the reports that have already reached the United State anent the loss of the gunboat are probably correct.

The official reports issued Sunday give the details of a number of engagements between government forces and rebels in the provinces of Santa Clara, Havana, Matanzas and Pinar del Rio. According to these reports the troops were uniformly victorious the rebel losses in the various engagements are placed at 37 killed, a large number wounded and two captured. The insurgent camps, prefecturas and 100 huts were destroyed.

Many families who had taken refuge in the woods were found by the troops and taken into the towns.

The Spaniards say their losses were four killed and a lieutenant colonel, three captains, three lieutenants and 61 privates more or less severely wounded.

Notwithstanding the recent announcement of the "pacification of Pinar del Rio," the official reports show that the greater number of engagements referred to took place in that province, which is pretty good evidence that the rebels are still conducting their operations.

The most important of the several fights took place near Guyes, province of Havana, where the troops met the rebel parties led by Castillo and Delgado.

HANGED TO A TREE.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Jan. 25.—On Saturday evening, the 16th inst., Miss Emma Apthorpe, daughter of the late Wm. Apthorpe, at one time surveyor general of Florida, and also president of the famous returning board that gave the electoral vote of Florida to Mr. Hayes, was attacked as she was driving to her home in the suburbs of this city by a Negro known as Pierson Taylor, who tore her clothing entirely off. Before he could injure her further her screams brought help and her assailant escaped. Monday last he was arrested and committed to jail. There were threats of lynching but nothing was done and the sheriff had begun to think everything was safe from trouble of that kind. At two o'clock Sunday morning a small mob gathered in front of the jail and on being refused admittance, broke down the doors, dragged the man out and hanged him to a tree and filled his body with bullets before he died from strangulation. A coroner's jury examined the body and returned a verdict of death from hanging and shooting at the hands of unknown parties.

Editor McCullagh Successor.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 25.—A meeting of the directors of the Globe Printing Co., Capt. Henry King was appointed editor of the Globe-democrat, to succeed the late Joseph B. McCullagh. For 14 years Capt. King has been an editorial writer on the paper. His first newspaper work was done in Quincy, Ill. He went from Quincy to Topeka, Kas., as editor of the Commonwealth, and in 1883 was engaged by the Globe-Democrat. Capt. King was born in Ohio 54 years ago. He stated Sfiuday evening to a United Associated Presses reporter that no changes in the policy of the paper were contemplated.

Counterfeiters Arrested.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Henry Barnard and his wife Charlotte, living at No. 535 West Forty-fourth street, were arrested Saturday night by secret service agents as counterfeiters. When they were arraigned before Commissioner Shields the agents said they found a complete coining plant in their rooms, and about 100 dangerous counterfeits—10, 25 and 50 cent pieces. The prisoners pleaded not guilty and were remanded to Ludlow street jail in, default of $5,000 bail, for examination Monday.

The Coldest Day of the Season.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Jan. 25.—The mercury Sunday night was five below zero and is still falling. Sunday was the coldest day of the year and the river is frozen over for the first time in a decade. An ice gorge has formed below the city, causing a perceptible rise, but there is no immediate danger of the river going out of its banks. The breaking of the gorge at Portland Saturday by dynamite was the cause.

Death of a Remarkable Woman.

CHICAGO, Jan. 25.—Mrs. Elijah Carson, a most remarkable woman, died Friday night at Anamosa, Ia. Mrs. Carson had crossed the ocean 250 times and possessed the extraordinary record of never having missed a trip on the Lucania since that splendid vessel was launched.

Revenue Cutter Launched.

BOSTON, Jan. 25.—The new revenue cutter Daniel Manning was launched from the yard of the Atlantic works, East Boston, at about 2:40 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The launching was a complete success.

A TRIBUTE FROM THE ENEMY.

Tariff Reformers Have Scored a Marked Triumph on the Wool Schedule.

The address of S. N. D. North before the ways and means committee of the house of representatives was by all odds the most interesting and enlightening disclosure that the tariff hearing has called out, if indeed it is not the most important contribution to tariff literature and thought that has appeared since Grover Cleveland's celebrated tariff message of 1887.

It was a genuine surprise. It was a terrible shock to the fanatical protectionist. It was the highest tribute to the principle of tariff reform that could be paid. Between the position of the free traders, as the protectionist press denominates tariff reformers, and the woolen manufacturers as represented by Mr. North, there is scarcely one iota of practical difference. In other words, the woolen manufacturers, speaking through their official representative, proclaim to the world their acceptance of the policy of the free traders. This is a great advance towards the final and satisfactory settlement of the tariff question.

The corner stone of the tariff reform structure was free wool. That was the key note of President Cleveland's tariff message in 1887. The center of opposition to tariff reform was massed against free wool. The free traders, accepting the enemy's designation of tariff reformers, said that free wool would be a boon to the people because it would give them cheaper and better clothing; that it would be a boon for the manufacturer because it would enlarge and cheapen the supply of raw material; and that it would not injure the American wool grower because the wool imported would not compete with the home clip; that the American grower would be likely to be benefited by the building up of the American woolen manufacturing industries. President Cleveland set forth these views nine years ago, and they were combatted with such intensity by both the manufacturer and the grower that for very consistency extreme views in the opposite direction were incorporated into the McKinley law. What is Mr. North's testimony to-day? We quote from the press report of his speech:

Never, until he had had experience under free wool, did the manufacturer realize the disadvantage he suffered under a wool duty, and the impossibility of any compensatory duty offsetting these disadvantages. The concentration of American purchases upon the wools which can be bought under the duty increases the price compared with that which would be paid if all wools were available and the cost of the market under free wool has indicated that the enhancement of the price is about four cents per pound. A duty has another effect in cheapening the price of the wool which cannot be imported, so that the foreign manufacturer, added to all the other advantages which he naturally possesses, is able to get his wool cheaper from a cause growing indirectly out of the duty.

All the restrictions of the old law were put there, Mr. North insisted, to embarrass and impede the manufacturer in his choice of wool. They have that effect, and are thus additional disadvantages for which he gets no equivalent. Mr. North declared that these restrictions were not required, because there was hardly any occupation for which the opportunities were so few as in the sale of wool.

It was necessary, he believed, to recite these facts, that congress and the American people should understand the economic disadvantages of a duty on wool. The manufacturers did not go far to resist the restoration of a wool duty. They were willing to make sacrifices in order that the policy of protection might apply to all products that "need it." They agreed in advance to a degree of protection equal to that to be imposed on their goods. They simply demanded that there should be no return to the destructive rates of previous wool schedules.

It was a great and important fact that, as the manufacture had grown developed, the use of foreign wools had become indispensable. Any duties on wool, the purpose of which was to exclude and prohibit its importation, would restrict the American manufacturer to such fabrics as can be produced from domestic wool. The effect of such restriction would be to increase the importation of foreign goods in manufactured form and diminish the demand for American wools and the employment of American machinery.

Mr. North declared that no American manufacturer bought foreign wool for any purpose for which he could use domestic wool, and that foreign wool was not used to displace American, and that, while it did not displace it, its importation increased the market for American wool.

Pretty substantial testimony in favor of free wool, is it not? A thorough acknowledgment of the correctness of the position of the free traders, is it not? It must be remembered that Mr. North is no mere theorist, as he once regarded President Cleveland, and Roger Q. Mills, William L. Wilson and other free traders. He is not an emissary from the Cobden club, paid by "British gold." He is the representative and spokesman of the practical men in business. He is the secretary of the Wool Manufacturers' association, and the views he presents must be accepted as the views of the practical wool manufacturers. And no theorizing free trader has put the arguments for free wool stronger than did Mr. North for the manufacturers. They are converted to the belief in the very foundation of tariff reform, free wool, after only two years' practical experience in its use. And these two years have been most unfavorable to business experiments of any kind.

We regard this confession as the most striking effect that the campaign of education has produced. Sound ideas upon economic policies have been driven into the heads of the most virulent enemies of tariff reduction. It is an encouraging sign. It cannot fail to have an effect for good upon those who would plunge the country into protective madness again. It leads to the hope and belief that the time may not be long distant when manufacturing New England will become what it was before, the stronghold of free trade in America.—Utica (N. Y.) Observer.

——The amount of misinformation and downright falsehood that has been placed before the ways and means committee during the tariff hearings would be astounding to anybody who was not familiar with the methods always employed by interested persons to extract greater favors from the government than they have any good reason to ask for.—Providence Journal.

PROMISES AND PIE CRUSTS.

Republican Campaign Lies in the Light of Facts.

It seems to be a fact that the single gold standard, as a policy, is not realizing the expectations of its friends in the matter of improving conditions. We were assured that after the silver scare was at an end business would pick up, and activity would be resumed in all branches of commerce and industry. In fact, it was said that nothing prevented a restoration of normal conditions except the silver craze, which, it was alleged, had destroyed public confidence and created uncertainty and disturbance. Nobody now contends that normal conditions have been restored or that there is any prospect of their early restoration. Anybody who would make such a contention would be compelled to admit that normal conditions are nothing to brag about.

Of course, under ordinary circumstances, the fair thing would be to wait until the new administration had been afforded an opportunity to put some remedial legislation on the statute book, assuming that legislation is a good thing for a diseased condition of business; but the circumstances of the present case are not ordinary. We were told that nothing was needed to restore prosperity but confidence: just confidence, and that the only way, and the sure way, to create confidence was to elect McKinley. Nothing was said about waiting for legislation or even for the major's inauguration; his election was pledged to do the business.

The Buffalo Times admits that the election of McKinley did not cause the recent bank failures and the general assignments reported during the past few weeks, but it insists that "neither has his election verified in the slightest degree the predictions made by his organs and their assistants that confidence would be at once restored, gold would come out from its hiding places, mills would reopen, the avenues of employment would multiply, wages would rise and peace and plenty be our portion evermore." Other papers refer to this matter in similar terms, and this indicates that general expectation banked on the major's election as the thing that, in realization of earnest promises, would create confidence and restore prosperity. We fancy, therefore, that a vast number of people have by this time reached the conclusion that it is much easier to vote for a thing than to get it after voting for it; and that there is a great deal of pie-crustiness about republican campaign promises.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

TWIN RELICS OF BARBARISM.

Protection and the Gold Standard Foster Trusts and Reduce Wages.

The hopes of other duties under the incoming republican administration is nerving the manufacturers to combine and raise prices of products and lower the wage rate. In addition to the new life given to the old trusts organized under the McKinley rubber tariff law, a number of new combinations are already formed since the election or are in course of incubation. This is on the line of what is known as republican "protection to American labor." Now, if the goldite party is not the father of trusts, and if the capitalistic combines have no reason to expect aid from the McKinley administration, why is it that there is now, in every industrial line, a marked activity in the organization and reorganization of unlawful combines? A new cordage trust has already been formed; a sandstone combine has been organized; the print paper manufacturers have arrived at an agreement to pool interests; the window glass trust has reorganized in a stronger and more dangerous form than ever; the lockmakers' trust is in the field with an advance in price of 25 per cent., and combinations big and little are entering into the spirit of plunder that has been given new life by republican success. But wages—ah, well, that is another matter. The gold standard must necessarily produce a reduction in wages, or, what is the same thing, a lessening of the opportunities to labor, with the corresponding result of several men looking for one job. Great is protection and the gold standard! If the country don't get its surfeit of these "twin relics of barbarism" before 1900, the State Register will have missed its guess.—Illinois State Register.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

——Fortunately for Boss Hanna, his ambition to get into the senate is not hampered by the necessity of being elected by a vote of the people of his state.—St. Louis Republic.

——McKinley's cabinet will be one of second-raters. No man with a position and reputation to sustain will go into it willingly. If any of them are forced into it, they will get out before the end of the term. There is danger ahead and there is not one of them who can fail to see the red light.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

——It is said to be the intention of the committee on ways and means, now working on a new tariff bill, to keep the results of their deliberations secret until they are presented to the next congress. The "hearings," though, may give the matter away on the principle that a man is known by the company he keeps.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——Inconsistency was never the bugbear of the republican party. At this time contradictions between their promises and performances are wearying them less than ever. Having secured power by a fight on the currency issue, they propose to call an extra session of congress, not to reform the currency, but to enact a higher tariff. Another inconsistency in their attitude is the ground on which they argue for a higher tariff—to raise prices. Yet the effect of the former McKinley tariff was asserted by them to have been lower prices.—Kansas City Times.

HOW SWINDLERS GET NAMES.

Stealing Newspaper Subscription Lists and Exchanging with Other Rogues.

Persons who get circulars from swindlers often wonder how their names are obtained by the latter. The ways are various. Subscription lists of the city weeklies are bought or stolen, and nearly every swindler exchanges his letters or the addresses of those who have answered his advertisements with other swindlers in similar lines of business. Hence, the recognized fact that after a person has once been caught he is much more likely to be swindled again. Nearly all the dealers in objectionable books, those who advertise "your future husband or wife," "fortunes told" and "retired clergymen" sell their letters for one cent each or more to the bogus money operators. So it will be seen that some lines of swindling have their branches paying a large percentage on the money invested.

A firm of "sawdust" speculators at one time bought 30,000 letters received by a concern that had realized $50,000 out of a certain bogus sewing machine. This machine was made of cast iron and turned by a small hand wheel. It would sew two pieces of the finest material together, but anything coarser would demolish the whole machine and render it useless. The same enterprising firm bought about 40,000 letters from a woman in Brooklyn who advertised to supply every young man and woman with the date of their marriage and description of their future partners for life. This woman received in nearly every one of these 40,000 letters a 50-cent stamp, and no evidence was given that she had ever sent a single reply. Indeed, so great was the harvest that some 50 or 60 of the letters had not been opened by her, and still contained the 50-cent stamps. They also bought up letters addressed to quack doctors, dealers in objectionable pictures; also letters from lottery keepers, fortune tellers, etc.

Associated men on Wall street advertised two steel engravings of distinguished persons mailed free on receipt of one dollar. They received some 20,000 replies, with dollars inclosed, and sent in return two ten-cent stamps of the period. Some advertisers offer "diamond rings," "catalogues," "recipes," "songs," etc., simply to get addresses, and after getting all they can out of the parties replying they find it a profitable business to sell the letters to others.—Philadelphia Times.

America Still Ahead.

Russia is a very large country, and with Siberia's immense area included, the size of the United States suffers in comparison with her. One of her newspapers has vaunted the proposed transporting of a whole town some 40 odd miles along a frozen river (a heretofore unknown feat, as it claims), the object of the removal being to place the town among some hills that lend themselves admirably to the purpose of fortification, thus securing a valuable military station. It will undoubtedly be quite a feat to accomplish such a task, and if the Russian engineers find any hitch in their plans, they can surmount the difficulties by reference to a similar undertaking successfully accomplished in the state of Illinois, namely, the moving of the town of Nauvoo over a frozen river. In the course of three winters this was done, and 700 houses were transported, and a new town, now a prosperous place, was established. The Russian newspapers can boast of the great work of moving one of their towns, but it is a pleasure to know that the United States long ago anticipated them in such matters.—Harper's Round Table.

More Than Estimated.

Dryer—I notice that young Frayman is still paying his attentions to the daughter of old Senator Coffers.

Dyer—I believe he still persists in that direction.

"I am told he's a relative of hers—a cousin twice removed."

"Twice! Say, the old man told me himself that he'd removed him seven times already, and if he has to do it again it will probably be to a cemetery."—Boston Courier.

James Slayback brought a coon to town last Thursday afternoon to pit against any dog that might want to be matched against it. At the time James arrived with the coon the town dogs were as scarce as city policemen, or the owners of dogs when the Assessor is on his annual rounds. Finally a dog was found, and the sport began, witnessed by about twenty men. The dog manifested great pluck, but was entirely ignorant of how to fight a coon, and as a consequence was badly lacerated about the nose and mouth. The fight lasted for about fifteen minutes, when the combatants were separated, and another dog undertook the job of killing the coon, but he was soon willing that an older and more experienced canine should compiete the job, which he did in a scientific way.

I. O. O. F. LOVE FEAST.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 20, 1897.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

It was my privilege and pleasure to attend the presentation of the Sovereign Badge by Azur Lodge, to Grand Treasuer Geo. W. Morris, which was voted him by the Grand Lodge of Ky., at its last session, he having been an active member of the I. O. O. F. for 30 years, 45 years of which he has been Grand Treasurer of Grand Lodge The ceremonies were very imposing and, indeed, touching, closing with the greatest love feast I ever had the pleasure of attending.

Grand Master Cline, of Winchester, presented the jewel in a very touching speech, expressing in behalf of the Grand Lodge the highest esteem in which Bro. Morris is held by his brothers. Bro. Morris responded with much feeling accepting this mark of esteem from his lodge. In the course of his remarks he referred to the very great advancement of art, science and industry, with which Odd-Fellowship has kept pace, numbering, as it does, among its votaries thousands of the world's most famous men—men who by their lives and example, have added luster to Odd-Fellowship, been an honor to their country, ornaments of society and benefactors of their race.

Among those present were prominent Odd-Fellows from all over the State. Among those who spoke during the course of the evening were Grand Master, C. F. Cline, Grand Warden, J. W. Potter, Grand Secretary, R. G. Elliott, Past Grand Masters, C. P. Meridith, W. S. Simpson, W. W. Morris. A. J. Reed and Grand Patriarch, Claude F. Buckley. All gave testimony to his sterling qualities and stability of character. He stands to-day like a giant oak which has breasted the storms of centuries, the grand old man of the Independent Order Odd-Fellows of Kentucky, and as I sat last night, in Azur Lodge room and listened to the eloquence of his brethren, heard them tell of how, when the clouds of this life were thickest they had gone to him for advice and counsel, they had come away feeling stronger and with inspiration to press forward in life's struggles, I wished that more Geo. W. Morris' were in this world—men who had learned the divine lesson of humanity. His has indeed been a wonderful life, covering as it does a period of near three-quarters of a century—the grandest since the beginning of time, and let us hope that when his spirit has gone to the God Who gave it, and his body been consigned to the dust from which it came, some one may be found upon whom his mantle may fall, and who shall fill the place made vacant by him, with the same integrity and as much honor to his lodge, his country and himself, as our dear old brother George W. Morris.

In connection with the exercises above mentioned Bro. W. W. Morris, in behalf of the veteran Odd Fellows' Association, presented a jewel to Bro. Robert Skene, who is the honored Secretary of that orgauization. At the close of the exercises during the singing of the closing ode, those present gave the glad hand of brotherly love to Bros. Morris and Skene, and the meeting closed in a regular old-time love feast. So closed an evening which shall ever be a green spot in memory, marked by a white stone.

Yours, &c., W. W. SMITH.

"Think twice before you speak.
Understand and then rebuke."

There are some very ugly slurs and reports thrown about in regard to myself of which I wish the truth to be known, as I love to seek the truth. The slurs are from some irresponsible persons who are to be pitied—the reports of course, are from a lying foundation, built by one or more who seem to be in the habit of building such; yet, while I have done some things that are seemingly wrong to others, they should remember the first two lines above. Ever since I have known right from wrong it has been my aim and desire to do nothing but what was right. I deceived no one and wronged no one intentionally, and stand ready and willing to correct all mistakes. I still have the same aim and desire for the future. If this testimony is not satisfactory to the Judges of this earth, I will file it, and when the time comes I will take it before the Supreme Judge of the universe, Who judgeth all things well.

Respectfully, J. E. HALL.

IN MEMORIAM.

She has past and gone to the unknown shore, to where we all have to pass some day, but we will meet our dear Lillie there on the evergreen shore where there will be no more parting.

And so with an angel's calmness
She came to the Jordan's tide,
When taking the hand of her Savior,
She went up on the Heavenly side.

MR. & MRS. C. J. C.

IN LOVING REMEMBRANCE.

Sarah Adeline Wright was of Scotch-Irish descent, she was born at Zanesville, Ohio, March 25th, 1830; was united in marriage with James Alexander Clayton in Hamilton county, Ohio, Nov. 2d, 1845. At the age of sixteen she united with the M. E. Church, later she became a member of the Lutheran Church at Hebron. She was a faithful wife and a loving and indulgent mother. She leaves a husband and eight children—five sons and three daughters, to mourn her loss. She will also be missed by a large circle of kind neighbors and loving friends, who so constantly ministered to her in her last illness

She was not only willing, but anxious to lay life's burdens down and to receive from the blessed Master, the robe and crown which He has promised to all the faithful. "Our loss is her gain."

My God, my Father, while I stray
Far from home, in life's rough way,
Oh teach me from my heart to say
"Thy will be done."

Renew my will from day to day;
Blend it with Thine, and take away
All that now makes it hard to say
"Thy will be done."

Rev. J. D. Nelson will assist Rev. J. W. Harris in a protracted meeting at Taylorsport beginning on Tuesday night, March 9th, 1897.

Putting up ice was begun yesterday. In these latter winters the best ice is made after the holidays.

TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

Not a very large number of persons in attendance last Saturday morning when the Teachers' Association convened in the Circuit Court room.

The meeting was called to order by Superintendent Voshell, after which a song was sung, and then there was prayer by Rev. T. L. Utz. Sidney Gaines delivered the welcome address, which was brief but very appropriate. T. Z. Roberts responded to the address in a happy manner.

The subject assigned to Supt. Voshell —"How to assign Lessons," was admirably handled.

The subject, "Take next Lesson," was discussed by several teachers.

The Association then adjourned to partake of an elegant dinner teudered the Association by the ladies of Burlington.

The afternoon session was called to order by the Superintendent. The subject, "Written Work," assigned Miss Talbott was discussed by Mr. Collins, Supt. Voshell and teachers. Miss Talbott being absent.

Atty. Castleman delivered an eloquent address on "Sarcasm as a means of Defense and Offence."

The subject, "Our Method," was discussed by Prof. Gaines and Supt. Voshell.

"Do we attempt too much?" was discussed by Miss Hallie Loring.

Prof. John Morris, of Covington, made an interesting and instructive address on "The True Education."

Owing to the absence of Prof. Prior and Miss Lizzie Kipp, the subject, "General Enthusiasm vs. General Apathy," was not taken up.

"District Libraries, how to secure them?" was discussed by Prof. Estes and Supt. Voshell.

Prof. Roberts gave an interesting talk on "If my school is not what it should be, who is to blame?"

Rev. Mr. Early, of Harvard, made an elaborate talk on "Supplementary Reaping" which was listened to very attentively by all present.

The program having been completed the committee on resolutions submitted their report which was adopted, and was as follows:

Resolved, That we, the teachers of the Burlington magisterial district, with all other visiting teachers present in Association assembled, express our sentiments in the following resolutions:

That we appreciate the splendid and substantial welcome that awaited us here, the combined efforts of the ladies of Burlington, Prof. Collins and Supt. Voshell.

That we highly value Prof. Voshell as a County Superintendent; that we esteem his unvarying kindness and courtesy during his term of office, and that we will regret the expiration of his official duties.

That we recoguize his untiring efforts to build up the public schools of this county.

That we extend our thanks to D. E. Castleman and Prof. Morris for the able addresses on the subjects assigned them.

Some of the candidates are warm under the collar but guess they will not sweat much during such weather as we have been having this week.

The Big Boue and Florence voters are calling upon Dr Grubbs to become a candidate for the legislature. There seems to be a spontaneous uprising in the Doctor's favor.

Monday was the coldest day in Chicago that has been experienced there for 25 years. A great many people died from the effects of the cold, while many others were badly frozen.

For some time the location of the boundary liue between Boone and Kenton counties has not been known to a certainty, and the two counties are now arranging to have it established.

County Clerk Adams and wife are at the bedside of Mr. Adam's venerable mother, who is very ill of pneumonia at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. George Ossman, who resides near Beaver.

The failure of the Newport bank is in a fair way to get some of the officials into serious trouble. It seems that the humbiest employe of the bank had almost unlimited credit, and could borrow any sum, the amount being limited only by the amount of cash on hand. It is supposed that the bank officials were the beneficiaries of these big loans.

We request our correspondents to be careful what they write about the candidates. You may mention their visits to your respective neighborhoods, but if you say anything favorable to a candidate's prospects all his opponents charge you with trying to assist him through the columns of the RECORDER, and want to chew the editor's ear for permitting it.

Dear Sir—I was taken with a severe cough the first of May; for two weeks I could not lie on my left side nor breathe through my left lung. I also had hemorrhage and my friends said I had consumption. I began taking Boulton's Cough Remedy and began to improve with the first dose, and within three weeks was entirely well. I can not say enough in favor of Boulton's Cough Remedy. Respectfully,

HEAVENLY RECOGNITION.

The Happy Family of Loved Ones Will Be There.

The Smiles of Those Gone Before Will Welcome Us Across the River Into That Land Where Parting is No More—Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage.

Dr. Talmage has been for a few days preaching and lecturing in Chicago, Minneapolis and St. Paul and his sermon is on a theme which will absorbingly interest all who read it. He returns in a few days to Washington. The subject is "Heavenly Recognition," and the text II. Sam. xii. 23, "I shall go to Him."

There is a very sick child in the abode of David the King. Disease, which stalks up the dark lane of the poor and puts its smothering hand on lip and nostril of the wan and wasted, also mounts the palace stairs, and, bending over the pillow, blows into the face of a young prince the frosts of pain and death. Tears are wine to the King of Terrors. Alas! for David the King. He can neither sleep nor eat, and lies prostrate on his face, weeping and wailing until the palace rings with the outcry of woe.

What are courtly attendants, or victorious armies, or conquered provinces, under such circumstances? What to any parent is all splendid surrounding when his child is sick? Seven days have passed on. There in that great house two eyelids are gently closed, two little hands folded, two little feet quiet, one heart still. The servants come to bear tidings to the king, but they can not make up their minds to tell him, and they stand at the door whispering about the matter and David hears them, and he looks up and says to them, "Is the child dead?" "Yes, he is dead." David rouses himself up, washes himself, puts on new apparel and sits down to food. What power hushed that tempest? What strength was it that lifted up that king whom grief has dethroned? Oh, it was the thought that he would come again into the possession of that darling child. No grave-digger's spade could hide him. The wintry blasts of death could not put out the bright light. There would be a forge somewhere with silver hammer would weld the broken links. In a city where the hoofs of the pale horse never strike the pavement he would clasp his lost treasure. He wipes away the tears from his eyes, and he clears the choking grief from his throat and exclaims: "I shall go to him."

Was David right or wrong? If we part on earth will we meet again in the next world? "Well," says some one, "that seems to be an impossibility. Heaven is so large we never could find our kindred there." Going into some city, without having appointed a time and place for meeting, you might wander around for weeks and for months and perhaps for years, and never see each other; and Heaven is vaster than all earthly cities together, and how are you going to find your departed friend in that country? It is so vast a realm, John went once on one mountain of inspiration, and he looked off upon the multitude, and he said: "Thousands of thousands." Then he came upon a greater altitude of inspiration and looked off upon it again, and he said: "Ten thousand times ten thousand." And then he came on a higher mount of inspiration and looked off again, and he said: "A hundred and forty and four thousand and thousands of thousands." And he came on a still greater height of inspiration, and he looked off again and exclaimed: "A great multitude that no man can number."

Now I ask, how are you going to find your friends in such a throng as that? Is not this idea we have been entertaining after all a falsity? Is this doctrine of future recognition of friends in Heaven a guess, a myth, a whim, or is it a granitic foundation upon which the soul pierced of all ages may build a glorious hope? Intense question! Every heart in this audience throbs right into it. There is in every soul here the tomb of at least one dead. Tremendous question! It makes the lip quiver, and the cheek flush, and the entire nature thrill. Shall we know each other there? I get letters almost every month asking me to discuss this subject. I get a letter in a bold, scholarly hand, on gilt edged paper, asking me to discuss the question, and I say: "Ah, that is a curious man, and he wants a curious question solved." But I get another letter. It is written with a trembling hand, and on what seems to be a torn out leaf of a book, and there and here is the mark of a tear; and I say, "Oh, that is a broken heart and it wants to be comforted."

The object of this sermon is to take this theory out of the region of surmise and speculation into the region of positive certainty. People say, "It would be very pleasant if that doctrine were true. I hope it may be true. Perhaps it is true. I wish it were true." But I believe that I can bring an accumulation of argument to bear upon this matter which will prove the doctrine of future recognition as plainly as that there is any Heaven at all, and that the kiss of reunion at the celestial gate will be as certain as the dying kiss at the door of the sepulcher.

Now, when you are going to build a ship you must get the right kind of timber. You lay the keel and make the framework of the very best materials, the keelson, stanchions, plank-shear, counter-timber, knees, transoms, all iron or solid oak. You may build a ship of lighter material, but when the cyclone comes on, it will go down. Now, we may have a great many beautiful theories about the future world, built out of our own fancy, and they may do very well as long as we have smooth sailing in the world; but when the storms of sorrow come upon us, and the hurricane of death, we will be swamped—we will be foundered. We want a theory built out of God's eternal Word. The doctrine of future recognition is not so often positively stated in the Word of God as implied, and you know, my friends, that that is, after all, the strongest mode of affirmation. Your friend travels in foreign lands. He comes home. He does not begin by arguing with you to prove that there are such places as London and Stockholm and Paris and Dresden and Berlin, but his conversation implies it. And so this Bible does not so positively state this theory as, all up and down its chapters, take it for granted.

What does my text imply? "I shall go to him?" What consolation would it be to David to go to his child if he would not know him? Would David have been allowed to record this anticipation for the inspection of all ages if it were a groundless anticipation? We read in the first book of the Bible, Abraham died and was gathered to his people. Jacob died and was gathered to his people. Moses died and was gathered to his people. What people? Why, their friends, their comrades, their old companions. Of course it means that it can not mean anything else. So in the very beginning of the Bible four times that is taken for granted. The whole New Testament is an arbor over which this doctrine creeps like a luxuriant vine full of the purple clusters of consolation. James, John and Peter followed Christ into the mountain. A light falls from Heaven on the mountain and lifts it into the glories of the celestial. Christ's garments glow and His face shines like the sun. The door of Heaven swings open. Two spirits come and alight on that mountain. The disciples look at them and recognize them as Moses and Elias. Now, if those disciples standing on the earth could recognize these two spirits who had been for years in Heaven, do you tell me that we, with our heavenly eyesight, will not be able to recognize those who have gone out from among us only 5, 10, 20, 30 years ago?

The Bible indicates, over and over again, that the angels know each other; and then the Bible says that we are to be higher than angels, and if the angels have the power of recognition, shall not we, who are to be higher than they in the next realm, have as good eyesight and as good capacity? What did Christ mean in His conversation with Mary and Martha when he said: "Thy brother shall rise again?" It was as much as to say, "Don't cry. Don't wear yourselves out with this trouble. You will see him again. Thy brother shall rise again."

The Bible describes Heaven as a great home circle. Well, now, that would be a very queer home circle where the members did not know each other. The Bible describes death as asleep. If we know each other before we go to sleep, shall we not know each other after we wake up? Oh, yes. We will know each other a great deal better than now. "For now," says the Apostle, "we see through a glass darkly," but there, face to face. It will be my purified, enthroned and glorified body gazing on your purified, enthroned and glorified body.

Now, I demand, if you believe the Bible, that you take this theory of future recognition out of the realm of speculation and surmise into the region of positive certainty, and no more keep saying, "I hope it is so; I have an idea it is so; I guess it is so." Be able to say, with all the concentrated energy of body, mind and soul, "I know it is so!"

There are, in addition to these Bible arguments, other reasons why I accept this theory. In the first place, because the rejection of it implies the entire obliteration of our memory. Can it be possible that we shall forget forever those with whose walk, look, manner, we have been so long familiar? Will death come and with a sharp, keen blade hew away this faculty of memory? Abraham said to Dives, "Son, remember." If the exiled and the lost remember, will not the enthroned remember?

You know very well that our joy in any circumstance is augmented by the companionship of our friends. We can not see a picture with less than four eyes, or hear a song with less than four ears. We want some one beside us with whom to exchange glances and sympathies, and I suppose the joy of Heaven is to be augmented by the fact that we are to have our friends with us when there rises before us the thrones of the blessed and when there surges up in our ear the jubilate of the saved. Heaven is not a contraction. It is an expansion. If I know you here I will know you better there. Here I see you with only two eyes, but there the soul shall have a million eyes. It will be immortality gazing on immortality—ransomed spirit in colloquy with ransomed spirit—victor beside victor. When John Evans, the Scotch minister, was seated in his study his wife came in and said to him: "My dear, do you think we will know each other in Heaven?" He turned to her and said: "My dear, do you think we will be bigger fools in Heaven than we are here?"

Again, I accept this doctrine of future recognition because the world's expectancy affirms it. In all lands and ages this theory is received. What form of religion planted it? No form of religion, for it is received under all forms of religion. Then, I argue, a sentiment, a feeling, an anticipation, universally planted, must have been God-implanted, and if God-implanted it is rightfully implanted. Socrates writes, "Who would not part with a great deal to purchase a meeting with Orpheus and Homer? If it be true that this is to be the consequence of death, I could even be able to die often."

Among the Danes, when a master dies his servant sometimes slays himself that he may serve the master in the future world. Cicero, living before Christ's coming, said: "Oh, glorious day when I shall retire from this low and sordid scene, to associate with the Divine assemblage of departed spirits and not only with the one I have just mentioned, but with my dear Cato, the best of sons and most faithful of men. If I seem to bear his death with fortitude, it was by no means that I did not most sensibly feel the loss I had sustained. It was because I was supported by the consoling reflection that we could not long be separated."

The Norwegian believes it. The Indian believes it. The Greenlander believes it. The Swiss believe it. The Turks believe it. Under every sky, by every river, in every zone, the theory is entertained; and so I say a principle universally implanted must be God-implanted, and hence a right belief. The argument is irresistible.

Again, I adopt this theory because there are features of moral temperament and features of the soul that will distinguish us forever. How do we know each other in this world? Is it merely by the color of the eye, or the length of the hair or the facial proportions? Oh, no. It is by the disposition as well, by natural affinity, using the word in the very best sense and not in a bad sense; and if in the dust our body should perish and lie there forever, and there should be no resurrection, still the soul has enough features and the disposition has enough features to make us distinguishable. I can understand how in sickness a man will become so delirious that he will not know his own friends; but will we be blasted with such unsufferable idiocy that, standing beside our best friends in eternity, we will never guess who they are?

Again, I think that one reason why we ought to except this doctrine is because we never in this world have an opportunity to give thanks to those to whom we are spiritually indebted. The joy of Heaven, we are told, is to be inaugurated by a review of life's work. These Christian men and women who have been toiling for Christ, have they seen the full result of their work? Oh, no.

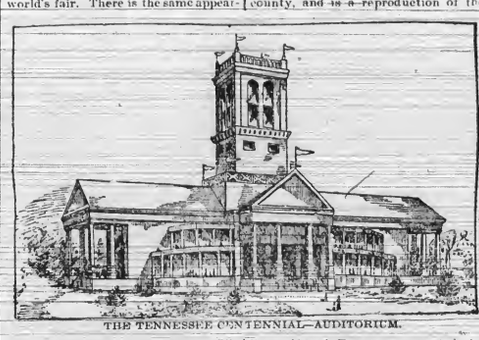
In the church at Somerville, N. J., John Vredenburgh preached for a great many years. He felt that his ministry was a failure, although he was a faithful minister preaching the gospel all the time. He died, and died amid discouragements, and went home to God, for no one ever doubted that John Vredenburgh was a good Christian minister. A little while after his death there came a great awakening in Somerville, and one Sabbath 200 souls stood up at the Christian altar espousing the cause of Christ, among them my own father and mother. And what was peculiar in regard to nearly all of those 200 souls was that they dated their religious impressions from the ministry of John Vredenburgh. Will that good Christian man before the throne of God never meet those souls brought to Christ through his instrumentality? Oh, of course he will know them. I remember one Sabbath afternoon, borne down with the sense of my sins and knowing not God, I took up Doddridge's "Rise and Progress." Oh, what a dark afternoon it was, and I read the chapters, and I read the prayers, and I tried to make the prayers my own. Oh, I must see Philip Doddridge. A glorious old book he wrote! It is out of fashion now.

There is a mother before the throne of God. You say her joy is full. Is it? You say there can be no augmentation of it. Can there be? Her son was a wanderer and a vagabond on the earth when that good mother died. He broke her old heart. She died leaving him in the wilderness of sin. She is before the throne of God now. Years pass and that son repents of his sins and gives his heart to God and becomes a useful Christian, and dies and enters the gates of Heaven. You tell me that mother's joy can not be augmented? Let them comfort each other, the son and the mother. "Oh," she says to the angels of God, "rejoice with me! The dead is alive again, and the lost is found. Hallelujah! I never expected to see this lost one come back!" The Bible says nations are to be born in a day. When China comes to God will it not know Dr. Abeel? When India comes will it not know Dr. John Scudder? When the Indians come to God will they not know David Brainerd?

I see a soul entering heaven at last, with covered face at the idea that it has done so little for Christ, and feeling borne down with unworthiness, and it says to itself, "I have no right to be here." A voice from a throne says, "Oh, you forget that Sunday school class you invited to Christ! I was one of them." And another voice says, "You forget that poor man whom you gave a loaf of bread and told of the heavenly bread. I was that man." And another says, "You forget that sick one to whom you gave medicine for the body and the soul. I was that one." And then Christ, from a throne overtopping all the rest, will say, "Inasmuch as ye did it to one of the least of these, you did it to me." And then the seraphs will take their harps from the side of the throne, and cry, "What a song shall it be?" And Christ, bending over the harpers, shall say, "It shall be the Harvest Home!"

One more reason why I am disposed to accept this doctrine of future recognition is that so many in their last hour on earth have confirmed this theory. I speak not of persons who have been delirious in their last moment and knew not what they were about, but of persons who died in calmness and placidity, and who were not naturally superstitious. Often the glories of Heaven have struck the dying, and the departing man has said he saw and heard those who had gone away from him. How often it is in the dying moments parents see their banks of the Mohawk river. It was departed children and children see their departed parents. I came down to the evening, and I wanted to go over the river, and so I waved my hat and shouted, and after awhile I saw some one waving on the opposite bank, and I heard him shout, and the boat came across, and I got in and was transported. And so I suppose it will be in the evening of our life. We will come down to the river of death and give a signal to our friends on the other shore, and they will give a signal back to us, and the boat comes, and our departed kindred are the oarsmen, the fires of the setting day tingeing the tops of the paddles.

TENNESSEE CENTENNIAL



It Will Be a Truly Representative American Exposition.

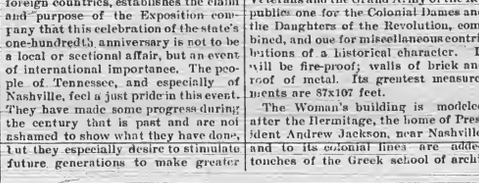
(Special Nashville (Tenn.) Letter.)

The appropriation by the United States bongress of $130,000 for a building and a government exhibit at the Tennessee Centennial and International exposition completes the grand scheme of the exposition managers and rounds out the success for which they have labored so diligently and efficiently during the past 12 months. The broad scope of the enterprise as originally planned has been fully provided for, and that which many thought to be impossible has been accomplished.



The main buildings, representing some of the finest specimens of ancient architecture the world has ever known, have been erected and completed with the single exception of the History building—one of the grandest of the entire group—and this is now well under way. Outside of the state, foreign and county buildings and some smaller ones for amusements, concessions, etc., there are 12 principal structures, so arranged and located, each one conforming in some degree to the others in form position and architecture, as to make a group that compares favorably to the "White City" of the Chicago world's fair. There is the same appearance of solidity and permanency, while the art displayed in their construction and finish appeals to the wonder and admiration of the visitor and makes him open his eyes in astonishment.

THE TENNESSEE CENTENNIAL—AUDITORIUM.

These buildings having been completed, the exposition could be opened at once, and the management having offered to refund all money charged for space if the exhibits are in place on opening day there remains no doubt that the exposition will be complete, or essentially so, on the day the gates are thrown open to the public. In this particular the Tennessee centennial and international exposition will avoid annoyance from the builders and exhibitors, who will be out of the way or will have their goods in place when the first visitors arrive.

The handsome recognition by the United States government, and the remarkable interest manifested by foreign countries, establishes the claim and purpose of the Exposition company that this celebration of the state's one-hundredth anniversary is not to be a local or sectional affair, but an event of international importance. The people of Tennessee, and especially of Nashville, feel a just pride in this event. They have made some progress during the century that is past and are not ashamed to show what they have done, but they especially desire to stimulate future generations to make greater strides in the onward march of civilization. It is expected that this celebration will show the resources of the state and lead to their greater development; strengthen friendly relations between the people; arouse a spirit of patriotism; increase reverence for the memory of her patriotic pioneers; mark the progress of science, and promote industrial, commercial and educational progress.

THE TENNESSEE CENTENNIAL—TRANSPORTATION BUILDING.

The citizens of Nashville and her two leading railroads subscribed and paid $500,000, which amount has been expended upon the grounds and in the erection of the buildings already completed, and they will raise the money to carry the work forward to completion. While this work has been done by Nashville without pecuniary aid from any other city or county in the state, or from any other state or city in the union, the exposition will be open for exhibits from all parts of the state, from every state in the union, and from every country in the world.

The governors of every state, and the mayors of nearly all of the larger American cities, have appointed commissioners and given it enthusiastic indorsement, while some of the states are making liberal appropriations for state buildings and state exhibits. The great metropolitan cities of the country will participate, and are trying to surpass each other in the magnitude and character of their exhibits.

The United States government, by act of congress, has provided for the admission, free of duty, of goods from foreign countries intended for exhibition, and this information has been transmitted by the department of state—together with an invitation to participate—to all foreign governments, many of which have already accepted.

Nashville has a population of 100,000, and lies in the center of a section within which there are 10,000,000 people, the most distant of whom can reach the exposition city in ten or twelve hours. It is situated in the heart of the Blue Grass region of Tennessee, where the lands are fertile, the scenery picturesque, and the climate perfect.

As the architecture of the buildings will be one of the chief attractions of this exposition it may be well to give a brief description of some of the principal ones, at least enough to convey an idea of their splendid character.

The Commerce building, in general style of architecture, is based on the Corinthian and Ionic order of the Graeco-Roman. The measurements are 500x315 feet, the wings being 150 feet wide; dome 175 feet in height. It is the largest building in the group. The Parthenon is a reproduction of that chief glory of all architecture, designed and completed under the direction of Phideas and Ictinus in the time of Pericles at Athens. It is fire-proof: stone foundation, concrete floor, brick walls, glass roof in steel frame; exterior ornamented in molded staff, producing the effect of the original, combining with solidity and force the most subtle and delicate refinement of outlines and proportion that architecture has ever known.

The Pyramids is the building erected by the city of Memphis and Shelby county, and is a reproduction of the Pyramids of Egypt as erected by Cheops, 3,000 years before the Christian era, and antedating the Parthenon 2,500 years. It is one-sixth the size of the original building, but the size an l numbers of the portices are increased, giving a grander and more imposing effect and adapting it to exposition purposes. The interior presents the quaint and barbaric splendor of Egyptian art, both as to color and design.

The History building is an adaptation of the Erechtheon, that venerable temple of Athens that stood on the Acropolis near the Parthenon. It is somewhat the form of a Greek cross. There are porches at the east and west ends as in the original, with six columns of the Ionic order. Its 4,200 square feet of floor space is divided into five compartments, one for history and antiquity, one each for the Confederate Veterans and the Grand Army of the Republic one for the Colonial Dames and the Daughters of the Revolution, combined, and one for miscellaneous contributions of a historical character. It will be fire-proof; walls of brick and roof of metal. Its greatest measurements are 87x107 feet.

The Woman's building is modeled after the Hermitage, the home of President Andrew Jackson, near Nashville, and to its colonial lines are added touches of the Greek school of architecture, resulting in a most beautiful structure. Eight splendid columns hold the roof above the portico, and higher still an observatory surrounded by columns crowns the handsome work of a lady architect. Measurement, 160x85 feet.

Agriculture hall is remalsance, its dimensions being 525x175 feet. The principal dome rises 100 feet at the center and, with six smaller domes appropriately placed, the proportions are especially pleasing.

In Machinery hall the architect, with the Parthenon as a prototype and the famous Propylaeum in Munich as a component part, has satisfied the most exacting critic in architectural art. The measurements are 375x138 feet. While machinery of almost every description will be exhibited in this building, no steam will be admitted. The boilers and great engines will be in the power station, located some distance from any of the other buildings.

The Transportation building is 400x120 feet. The characteristic feature of the design is its simplicity. No columns are used, but a charming effect has been secured by simple lines and plain surfaces. The sculpture and relief work are symbolical of the business for which the building is to be used, illustrating the progress of 100 years in the matter of transportation.

The Minerals and Forestry building is characterized by stately columns of the Roman-Doric order, the design showing great strength and beauty. It is 400x125 feet. The entrances are through porticos guarded by six columns each and surmounted by sculptured gables, producing a magnificent appearance.

The Auditorium is colonial in design and Ionic in treatment. Four airy porticos facing the points of the compass give the building a shape resembling a short cross, except for colonnades extending from the main entrance around in either direction to the ends of the portico, adding a circular effect and furnishing a delightful promenade. The interior is finished in hard wood. A broad gallery extends around three sides and the main floor and gallery will seat 6,000 persons. The numerous conventions of the year will be held in this building.

Plans for the Government building have not been completed, but the general idea will conform to the style and character of the other buildings. It will add immensely to the beauty and grandeur of the whole, and the exhibit made in this building will be one of the greatest interest and value.

Other buildings, including Children's, Education, Negro, Administration, Knights of Pythias and buildings for other societies, states, counties, etc., will conform to the general plan of the architecture, and like the principal buildings (except the Parthenon and the History and one or two others) are constructed of framework and finished in staff, presenting a uniformly white appearance, making a complete and artistic group of surpassing beauty.

The entire cost of this exposition will approximate $1,500,000, and as the greatest economy has been observed in carrying forward the construction and promotion it would be safe to say that the work would not have been done under a less careful management for twice the money that has actually been expended. No city in the country has achieved a greater triumph within the century which is nearing its close.

The management is using every endeavor to bring together the most complete and varied collection of things that can be procured, and the encouragement in this direction is such that there is no longer any doubt of the success of the enterprise from every point of view.

AVOIDS DETECTION.

How a Western Man Protects His Gambling House.

The gambling spirit in men is the parent of much invention. In one western city a man named Jack Morrison operated the most marvelous gambling house ever known. In case of a police raid the tables would become suddenly something entirely different, musical instruments would be revealed, the roulette wheel would resolve itself into a big bass drum, and the men standing around worrying with the tiger would be metamorphosed into artists of singular merit. Jack himself usually played the large bass horn, which was the cemetery of ten or twelve pounds of chips. Billiards operated upon the great unwieldy vision into which he had just dumped several dozen packs of cards, while White's chief duty was to clatter on the snare drum, which, provided with a shrewd contrivance in the manner of a door, was the receptacle of the faro layout. The others, visitors included, were promptly supplied with cornets, cymbals, fifes, reeds, triangles and all sorts of things, and when the police finally gained entrance it would be to find the most villainous band ever known to the heavens above, the earth below, or the waters under the earth. The music produced was extremely excruciating, and no inquiring force of police raiders was able to withstand its awful blandishments for more than three minutes. The representatives of law and order once safely out of the building, the games would be resumed where they were interrupted, and Hendershot would open up the stud-poker contest, temporarily abandoned to the protection of an accordion, and would pull the cabbage organ out into its former crescent-shaped condition, and the buck would be passed with great but discreet joy.

One night, however, a cornstarch drummer from Cincinnati, in the excitement of attempting to play "The Moonlight Serenade" on a cornet or some other wind instrument, inhaled about $3 worth of blue chips, and choked, and had apoplexy, and by so doing advertised the fact that his apparatus was a whited sepulcher, and the whole outfit was hauled away and fined and the game was stopped.—Chicago Record.

Complimentary Telegrams.

"Sending a telegram," says a Philadelphia telegraph man, "is serious business for the ordinary man or woman. They think it's expensive, and only use the wires when they have to. There's one exception, however, and a kind of complimentary business that most people would never suspect. Whenever there's a Hebrew wedding—that is, one of any importance—we handle scores of congratulations, hundreds sometimes, from all parts of the country. They are sent with directions to deliver them at a certain hour, and we generally send them all to the house or the place where the reception is held in one bunch. It's a good thing for the company, for the senders don't count the words, and file their telegrams without any revision. Sometimes they run up to 100 or 150 words."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

How Stories Originate.

"Speaking of getting lost in the streets," said the man with the double chin. "I had an experience of that kind and it defeated me in a political race."

"The opposition said you were drunk?"

"No. I was only two years old when it happened."

"Will you please explain?"

"I will. I was two years old; I got lost; a policeman took me to the station. Thirty years after the story was brought out that I had once been arrested as a vagrant right in my own town."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE ROAD SCRAPER.

It Has Awakened the Spirit of Improvement in Many Districts.

In our anxiety to promote good farming there is no danger that the subject of good roads will be overlooked. When a man gets the spirit in him to improve his farm, his crops and his live stock, the spirit of progress cannot be checked there, but necessarily it must be extended to his buildings and fences. Who ever knew a farmer to erect a substantial fence along the highway who would not also cut down the unsightly busaes along the margin, see where drainage is needed and how the roadway could be improved, and then resolve that it shall be done at the first opportunity? A good farmer is always a good-roads advocate.

Just now many things are conspiring to assure good roads in the near future. A few years ago the road-scraper on wheels came into vogue. A law was enacted to permit a few adjoining road districts to unite and purchase a scraper to be used in common, as it is an expensive piece of machinery, and rarely a single district could afford to purchase one alone. Now these machines are common all over the state, and through their means road improvement has made rapid strides. It is not necessary to describe all their good points, for every one knows them. I will mention only one, and that is the smooth, hard paths it makes for pedestrians at either side of the wagon-track. Otherwise they would have to travel in the grass and weeds, which is disagreeable especially if wet or damp.

When the road-machines came into use, nobody had thought of bicycles. A better machine could not have been invented, especially for the purpose of making bicycle paths. What would bicycling on country roads be now were the old-style hand road-scrapers still in use? In removing earth from gutters into the wagon-track they left two small ridges along the space they traveled, and these were seldom leveled. If a wheel could travel them at all, they would certainly go "bumpity-bump." Bicycles rarely have a clear course in a traveled wagon-track, for there are more or less narrow ruts, and horses feet are apt to cut up the paths in which they have to travel continuously.

The modern road-machines, when used for some time, have had the effect to cut off the shoulders of the roads and place this dry, solid earth in the center of the track, picking it up so water will run off at the sides, as it should do, instead of following ruts, as formerly. I know a certain hill road extending to the railroad station that was always bad. Its surface was broad, stony and full of ruts. The wheeled scraper has made it the model road of the township, and the district is proud of it. There was a very steep, ascending grade from a hollow ten rods from the railroad track, with a knoll at one side. The road tax for the year had been worked out; but notwithstanding, as the spirit of improvement was on, neighbors volunteered and spent nearly two days with teams and tools, and removed the most of that bank into the road where it ought to be. A neighbor who could not work gave necessary drain-tile. The railroad company, not to be outdone in public spirit, furnished seven car-loads of gravel, and men to handle it, and now the grade is easy and the surface graveled. This is recited to show that the spirit of improvement is contagious, and when aroused the work will be perfected.

A few years ago the legislature of New York passed an act requiring pathmasters to remove the loose stones from the traveled portions of the highways at stated periods. This was also done before bicycles were invented, just as though their advent had been foreseen. Now, if one thing more than another troubles the bicyclist, it is small, round, loose stones in the path; but as a rule the roadmasters are very delinquent in performing the prescribed duty of removing them. As a hint to bicyclists, I know of several cases where wheelmen have told pathmasters that unless they attended to this duty properly, they would be complained of, adding by way of emphasis that if any loose stone in the track, even the smallest, should be the means of throwing and injuring a rider, damages could be collected either of them or of the township. This sets them to thinking, and they generally conclude that their safety lies in keeping the track clear of these obstructions. If a horse stumble over a loose stone and break his leg, somebody would be liable for damages, and so would they if a bicyclist should take "a header" over a loose stone and receive an injury in consequence.—Galen Wilson, in Farm and Fireside.

Unmixed Evils.

Too many stones or too much clay
Or too much "wet" or sand,
Will make a sorry thing, they say,
Of the best road in the land.
And yet there's good in all of these
If we just know how to fix them.
They make a road that's sure to please
When properly we mix them.

CONTRACTING BUTTER.

How to Secure a Good Average Price the Year Round.

There is scarcely any farm butter maker having a reputation for making a good article and living within a few miles of an ordinary western country town who cannot find a regular customer or customers who will take butter the year around at a good price which will be a good round average price for the year, says the Homestead. All that is necessary to make contracting of this kind easy is that the butter maker establish a record for having everything nice and clean, and for producing a quality that is both good and uniform. The price that can be secured in this way is always considerably better than the ordinary way of selling to the grocer or store keeper. As a practical question, it is subject to only one drawback, and that is from the side of the customer. We have known a good many town people who contracted for their butter this way and a very common complaint among them was that they always get their butter if the price to be paid was a little better than the stores and groceries were paying but when, with the change of the season, the price rose until the store keeper or grocer was paying a little above the agreed average price, the butter maker very commonly reported that the cows were falling off and he did not have any butter to deliver under the contract. Of course, if one practices this species of dishonesty he will find it difficult to make contracts of this kind for regular delivery, and a reputation not only for cleanliness and good uniform quality is necessary, but also a reputation for strictly carrying out contracts as made.

BACILLUS NO. 41.

It was a person who came from Denmark who first advanced the startling theory that microbes are required to make first-class butter. This theory, which was received with scorn, is now advocated by many scientific men, and many creameries now invest money in the "culture." In Iowa 28 creameries are using it. Experiments have been made with over 100 different kinds of germs, but it was not until No. 41 was discovered that satisfactory results were reached. A conclusive trial was recently made in a Connecticut creamery. June butter, as is well known, is in flavor the best produced during the year, so that the effect of bacillus No. 41 upon pure butter was most interesting. Early in the month two large vats of cream were collected. One of these was inoculated, the other was not. They stood in the same room, at the same temperature, for the same length of time, and were subsequently churned. Both lots of cream produced excellent butter, but No. 41 had a taste and odor decidedly superior to that made without it. A large number of persons tasted it, and no one hesitated in deciding that No. 41 made the superior quality.

The first attempt at an estimate at bacteria in butter was made in Munich in 1891. It was found that there are about 2,000,000 in a grain.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

NEAT FEEDING DEVICE.

One Should Be Introduced Wherever Calves and Sheep Are Kept.

An excellent plan for feeding sheep or calves is shown herewith. The front of the pen is hinged along as much of the length as is needed, in the manner shown in the cut. Behind these hinged doors are slats, both to keep the hay from falling into the pen at feeding time, and to keep the sheep or calves in place and from attempting to clamber up over the door. Hay placed between the door and the slats falls down as fast as it is eaten. With such a device in use, lambs cannot readily get into the hay, nor can they come out into the feeding floor, as they do in the average barn. After the ration has been eaten the doors can be closed.—N. Y. Tribune.

There is money in poultry and hundreds of men and women are making comfortable incomes from their flocks Unfortunately there are thousands who rush into the business at a venture, make a direful failure of it and then endeavor to prove to all their friends that there is nothing in it. An eastern editor recently expressed it in a simple way when he wrote: "Don't rush madly into it; study it, learn it and build a solid foundation for the business to grow on. Begin moderately and gradually increase your stock as your knowledge increases in caring for that stock after you get it. Nothing will succeed unless you know the secrets of success. The secrets of poultry raising are not many, but you must know them if you hope to succeed."

Two Vices Peculiar to Horses.

A veterinary surgeon, who has given the subject great thought and experimented largely with victims of cribbing and wind-sucking habits, declares that a horse having both or either of these habits should be classed as unsound, and that young horses often contract the habit from being stalled near a confirmed rubber or wind-sucker. The same authority thinks the best preventive outside of a specially devised apparatus is a roomy box stall, and that covering the manger with wool, or saturating the same with bitter liquids, or covering tempting projections with iron are utterly useless to prevent the habit.

The milk cow is very responsive to kind treatment.

TO BRING DOWN A BALLOON.

British Artillerists Essay to Cripple This Implement of Warfare.

Next to "shooting the moon," taking pot shots at a balloon would probably be the most exciting kind of sport. At all events, the inhabitants of Shoeburyness had a distant opportunity of witnessing the successful attempts made recently by the school of gunnery to bring down a captive balloon anchored on the sands on the sea front of the batteries. The authorities at the school regarded the experiments as particularly confidential—though a balloon a couple of thousand feet high over the sands at Shoeburyness is a fairly conspicuous object—and all civilians were rigorously excluded from any approach to the grounds. Special instructions were issued for the exclusion of journalists, and possibly if one of the inquisitive fraternity were discovered near the firing point Col. Bally would at once have him sent aloft as a target for his gunners.

Ever since the siege of Paris military men have been keenly interested in the possibilities of ballooning, both as a means of maintaining communication with beleaguered cities or forts, and as a very effectual way of making observations. It is in the latter direction naturally that the greatest development of the art of ballooning has taken place, and every modern army now has a properly-equipped train attached to it. A captive balloon floating 3,000 or 4,000 feet above the earth enables the occupant of the car attached to it to extend his gaze over a wide field, while the telephone and the developments of photography furnish him with means by which he can supply his chief with not only verbal reports of the disposition of the enemy, but with actual charts of the country, showing the position of the larger masses of troops. The British army is not much behind in this respect. A very useful and well-equipped school of aeronautics exists at Aldershot and has proved a useful auxiliary in some of the maneuvers in the neighborhood of the camp. It is hardly equal, however, to similar establishments maintained by France and Germany. The former power, indeed, has extended the use of the balloon to its navy, and some remarkable experiments were recently carried on in the channel. A captive balloon was sent up from the war ship Richelieu, the retaining cable being attached in such a manner that the car remained always vertical, and some very good results were obtained. Not the least valuable was the disclosure of the fact that a vessel equipped with a balloon could explore a sea area about four times as great as could be covered from the masthead.

Having demonstrated the utility of balloons, military men set about seeing how best to destroy them while in the air. Specially-contrived mountings were made so as to enable guns to fire at very high angles and extensive experiments were made both in France and Germany. It was found that up to 3,000 feet there was a fair chance of hitting the balloon with shrapnel, but the small holes made by the bullets were not sufficiently large to be rapidly fatal. Common shell, the splinters of which tore the covering, was more effective when it got home, but the percentage of hits at anything except a very low elevation was so slight that it was practically worthless. Modern rifle bullets appeared to pass through the balloon in a perfectly harmless manner. Altogether the result of the experiments went to prove that unless a balloon passed through a zone of fire at an altitude less than 3,000 feet it ran but little risk. A further consideration with regard to these experiments was that they were carried out against captive balloons. It is questionable whether it would be at all possible to train a gun on a balloon traveling over a fortress or army in the field at the rate of 15 or 20 miles an hour, while the difficulty of "picking up the range" is also very great.

The experiments at Shoeburyness demonstrated nothing more than what was already known—namely, that it is possible to hit a balloon at a comparatively low elevation where the range can be fairly approximated. The balloon was anchored over the sands in front of the brick battery at a range of about 2,000 yards. Its height was about 1,500 feet. During the practice there was a strong, gusty, southwest wind blowing across the range, and, taking this into account, it is creditable to the gunners that with the third round of time shrapnel they managed to damage the balloon sufficiently to bring it to earth.—Chicago Chronicle.

Strange Things on Mars.

The planet Mars has recently (December 11) been again in opposition to the sun and consequently favorably situated for telescopic observation. In fact, astronomers have been studying it for several months as it approached opposition, and have once more discerned those curious lines on its surface called "canals." They have also seen again the round or oval spots that appear at points where many canals meet, and to which Mr. Lowell has given the name of "oases." One of the latest and most interesting observations relates to an "oasis" called "Trivium Charontis." On November 10 this spot, at which nine "canals" meet, was seen, at M. Flammarion's observatory near Paris, to be double, or cut in two. Five days earlier at the same observatory the spot had appeared dark, broad and single.—Youth's Companion.

The Secret Out.

"I understand," said the man with a green tie and a neck-whisker, "that the reason why you football boys wear long hair is for protection during the—er—athletic contingencies of the game."

"Naw; that's where yer off, old man," replied the shaggy half back. "It's to distinguish us from freaks."—Buffalo Times.

—The Goths first came into notice in the Second century, marching southward across the Danube from the great plains of central Russia.

The Unit of Heat.

We cannot, of course, measure heat by yards, pints or pounds, but the unit of heat (the standard measure of that phenomenon) has been agreed upon by those whose business it is to philosophize on that subject to be that quantity which can raise a pound of water one degree. Now, to turn a pound of water into a pound of steam requires 967 of these units of heat; that is to say, if we boil a pound of water until it all goes away in steam we shall have used in doing so a quantity of heat which would have raised 967 pounds of water one degree higher in temperature.

A Valuable Pair of Trousers.

The boys of Yale in the old days used to bribe the printers' "devils" to get proofs of the examination papers for them. When the college authorities put a stop to this practice a bright idea seized one fellow and he saved the whole suffering party. He hired one of the printers (it was summer) to wear a pair of white trousers to the office and at noon to sit down on the "form" in which were locked the precious questions. The inky seat of that pair of trousers sold for a deal more than the clothes were worth in their original spotlessness.

EXCESSIVE FATIGUE IS DANGEROUS.

From the Leader, Cleveland, Ohio.

John P. Sonnhalter, who lives at No. 58 Melrose Ave., Cleveland, Ohio, is one of a small army who can bear testimony to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mr. Sonnhalter is in the prime of life. He is married and his family is his pride. He is strong and athletic and has a splendid physique. But, like many other men who are similarly fortunate in the possession of an excellent constitution, he recently overestimated the train which it could undergo. He is the yardmaster of the Zettelmeyer Coal Company, Nos. 25 to 31 Commercial St., and in that capacity finds it necessary to exercise considerable physical strength. The use of a great deal of muscular energy, however, did not seem to affect him in any manner until last spring. Then he discovered, to his alarm, that he had been overexerting himself. He began to be troubled with congestion, mental and physical prostration, relaxation of the muscular tissues, insomnia, and other symptoms of the result of overwork. But the story in his own words is interesting, for he tells it in the plain and simple manner characteristic of a man who earns his sustenance by the sweat of his brow, and at the same time he pays a glowing tribute to his inanimate and diminutive benefactor.

"It was last May," said Mr. Sonnhalter, "that I began to notice the effects of my hard work. The blood would rush from my heart into my head, and almost make me faint. I felt that my strength was on the wane, and my digestive system seemed to be out of order. Strong as I was I would feel weak. I was nervous, and felt distressed not only in body, but in mind as well. When I awoke in the morning I was troubled in view of the hard day's work which was ahead of me. My footsteps were not as light and sprightly as formerly, and I was altogether wretched. My appetite, always strong, vigorous, and healthy before, seemed to be deserting me. I could not sleep well, and was unable to get the rest and recreation I needed. The warm weather was at hand, and I was afraid I would break down completely unless I got better soon. I was suffering, you might say, from general debility. Was tired all over, and nearly all the time.

"I knew that something would have to be done, and soon, too. I talked with my friends about what to do or take. Some advised me to try this or that, but I did not heed their suggestions, and now I am glad of it. One day I picked up a little pamphlet or advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I told how the medicine cured people who were suffering from just what ailed me, and I decided to buy a box, and I did. I was somewhat in doubt as to whether they were as good as it was claimed they were, but my doubt was soon removed. Those pills fixed me up inside of two months. I never saw a medicine work so quickly and surely as those little pills. Almost the first one I took seemed to do benefit me, and the more I took the better I felt. That awfully tired and dejected feeling began to leave me almost from the start. After taking half a dozen of the pills my sleep was unbroken. Then my appetite returned, and with it came my old time vigor. My muscles are as strong as ever now, and my health is good, and the pills did just what they were advertised to do.

"My work in the coal yard is hard, and I often have to overtax myself. But if I ever get in the condition I was last May, I'll buy more of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They do more good than a doctor, and I have recommended them to my friends."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. They are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and are sold by all druggists at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

THERE is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. No State in the union has been more slandered than Kansas. The western part of the State is as fine grazing country as the sun ever shone on, and the eastern 200 miles square raised more corn to the acre in 1896 than any other State in the union. With only the eastern part of the State raising corn and wheat the State ranks fifth in these cereals in the country. We have more churches and schools and less illiteracy per capita than any other state. Productive smooth farm land can be bought for from $5 to $40 per acre. Write to R. B. DUNN, Atchison, Kansas.

Put a pill in the pulpit if you want practical preaching for the physical man; then put the pill in the pillory if it does not practise what it preaches. There is no clew to Miss Feltner's assailant.

After May 1st local option will prevail here and Winchester will be as dry as the proverbial dust pile. Nothing less than the bite of a poisonous serpent will procure the much coveted drink. In view of this fact a thrifty suburban resident is making arrangements to lay in a supply of snakes which he will allow to bite the thirsty seeker after spirituous refreshment for a moderate compensation.—Winchester Democrat.

The Stanford Interior-Journal says that the average Jailer is the biggest of cowards, or there would be no prisoners taken by mobs. It may be a fact that prisoners are, in many cases, delivered over to mobs that could have been saved by a little pluck, but the average man, whether he be a Jailer, an editor or anything else, will "walk the chalk line" when he has a six-shooter under his nose and he doesn't know whose finger is on the trigger.—Columbia Spectator.

There has been filed in the Fleming County Circuit Court a suit for $75.000 by Judge Apperson, of Mt. Sterling, and J. D. Pumphrey against the assignees of the Flemingsburg Exchange Bank, and H. Wilson, charging them with conspiracy to defraud the creditors out of that amount. The petition, signed by thirty-four depositors, alleges that large sums of money were secured on good notes a few days before the assignment, and instead of the good notes being turned in as the assets they were withheld and worthless notes turned in instead.

This farmer is in hard luck, but still hoping. The Greensburg Record says: "J. T. Russell says 1896 was an unlucky year for him. He lost sixty-eight hogs in January, five calves and eighteen sheep in February, one cow and calf and a fine buck in June, killed by the train; three fat steers from eating tobacco in October. Besides, he only raised one-fourth crop of hay, and fell short 800 bushels in his crop of corn and 400 bushels short on wheat and the Populist party sold out to the Democratic party in November. But he is willing to take 1897 for what it will bring."

The oldest church in Fayette county, if not the oldest in Kentucky, according to the Lexington Leader, is the Walnut Hills Presbyterian church, located eight miles from Lexington, in the East Hickman precinct. The Leader says: The church was established in 1785, when the congregation of Presbyterians built a house of worship of logs near the site of the present church. For sixteen years this pioneer church building did service, but the congregation grew in number and wealth, and in 1801 the present church building was erected. It is built of Kentucky limestone and is fifty by sixty feet square and about forty feet high. There is no attempt at architectural effect, further than the four Gothic windows on each side and the large Gothic door. At the time of its erection it was the finest church building in Kentucky, as its cost was $5,000. The first pastor was the Rev. Alexander Crawford, who served in that capacity for twenty-five consecutive years. Among the other prominent ministers who were pastors of this church may be mentioned the Rev. Robert J. Breckinridge and the Rev. J. J. Bulloc, who was chaplain of the United States Senate."

The story of the narrow escape from lynching of five innocent men at Mt. Olivet in 1878 is often related, and has probably been the one thing that has prevented lynchings during the past quarter of a century in that section. In 1878 a farm hand named Molen started to Mt. Olivet, en route to Indiana. On the way his valise became heavy, and he hid it in a brush pile, as he thought he would soon return. The valise contained considerable wearing apparel. A few days after Molen's departure Levi Stout, Charles Duncan, Giles Bradley and James Morgan and son were seen wearing Molen's clothing. Molen's quiet leave taking was a matter of much talk, and it soon became rumored that he had been murdered. The five men named were arrested. The clothing found on them was easily identified as having belonged to Molen. A search was made for Molen's body but it could not be found. One night the farmers raised a mob and started for the county jail with the intention of lynching the five men. The mob was but a few minutes on its way when Molen returned to Maysville and learned of what had happened. Without a moment's delay he secured a horse and galloped over to Mt. Olivet, arriving just as the mob had gained entrance to the jail. His presence dumbfounded the men bent on avenging his alleged murder. The supposed criminals were immediately released, and were ever afterward highly respected.

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

[Herald]

Silas Goodrich was tried before County Judge Lee, last Thursday and Friday, upon the charge of being an accomplice of Ben Brumback, who shot John Morgan on the night of January 7th. He was held over in the sum of $500.

Last Saturday night the store and stock of merchandise of J. H. Threlkeld, at Hesler, this county, were burned. There was no insurance, and the loss falls with fearful weight upon a good man in his declining years. The orgin of the fire is not known. His stock was valued at between $500 and $700. The house was worth probably less than $1,000.

One of the saddest happenings that we have been called upon to chronicle for a long time was the drowning of Jennie Browning and her young child, near Gistville, last Wednesday morning. She took her babe in her arms, stole away from the house and went to the Kentucky river and leaped from a shanty boat into the stream, drowning both herself and child. She had the measles, it is said, and was likely in a delirium. Her betrayal however, by a wretch who at the last failed to right the wrong to the extent that he could by marriage, may possibly have so preyed upon her mind as to prompt self-destruction. She is said to have been a girl of rare beauty.

When County Atty. J. G. Todd was Marshal of New Liberty fifteen years ago, he was shot in a number of places while attempting to make some arrests. A 32 caliber pistol bullet broke the second finger of the right hand and struck the third finger, hurting it quite seriously. Mr. Todd thought the bullet had lodged in the finger, but the physician could not locate it and said it was not in there. Now for the sequel. One day last week Mr. Todd was the guest of his old friend, Dr. Charles Kerns, in Covington, when the doctor incidentally took hold of the finger in question and soon satisfied himself that the ball was there. It took him only a few minutes to cut it out. It was considerably flattened, but had lost none of its weight by its fifteen years' repose. Mr. Todd has a bullet of the same shooting in his thigh, but is perfectly willing to let it remain there, as it gives him no trouble.

[News]

The turnpikes are now virtually free.

Some of the Owen lads want a militia company and will soon petition the Governor for permission to organize.

An investigation of the poll at the late primary shows there were 3998 votes polled, or 800 more than was polled at the regular election. A great many voted at the primary and didn't know that there was a regular poll, while seven precincts were not supplied with sufficient ballots. The party lost at least 350 votes for these reasons. Had things have been different the vote of Kentucky would have gone for Bryan or the Republicans would have to have raised a few more votes in the 11th district. But never mind Owen will be on hand next time.

Wm. Morris, the blacksmith, took an overdose of morphine Saturday night and came very near dying.

The clothing firm of Hixson & Hutcheson made an assignment, last Monday. Individual liabilities, $6,350; partnership about $7,000. Total, $13,350. Assets estimated at $17,000.

Two young men by the name of Overstreet and O'Banion were tried before Judge Lee, Saturday, for stealing a horse belonging to Ben Chapman. They rode the horse so the proof tended to show, from about Sweet Owen to near Moxley where they dismounted and shot the animal. The proof was not clear but they were held over to answer before the Owen Circuit Court. They were both very young. O'Banion gave bail for his appearance while Overstreet went to jail.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1897. NO. 15.

In another column will be found the announcement of Add Riddell, of Beaver, as a candidate for Sheriff. Like many of the other candidates this is his first appearance in the political arena, but he has the determination of any of the older hands. He is now constable in his magisterial district, and is a fearless and faithful officer, and if elected sheriff he will be as earnest in the discharge of the duties of the higher office. He is a Democrat from the ground up.

In this issue F. L. Gordon, of Beaver, is announced as a candidate for assessor. He, like all his opponents, is a simon-pure Democrat, and has never faltered in battle. He is well qualified for the office to which he aspires, and if the Democrats choose him as their candidate he will never give them cause to regret their action. This is his first canvass, and he has undertaken the work with that vim that characterizes all his efforts.

J. W. Kennedy, of Union, is announced in this impression as a candidate for Circuit Clerk. Mr. Kennedy is one of those Democrats who never fails to answer to the bugle call of his party. He is a good scribe, a man of large business experience, and is now asking for an office for the first time. If made circuit clerk he will make an efficient official.

Mayor Swift, of Chicago, is of the opinion that the city narrowly escaped a bread riot last week. Thousands of people there who have been without work for months, were suffering with hunger, and when they were pinched by the cold they would soon have become desperate had not relief been furnished by the city and charitable organizations.

Sam C. Johnson, of Walton, is announced as a candidate for assessor, this week. Mr. Johnson is a farmer and a devoted Democrat. This is his first appearance before the public in the capacity of a candidate, and if he is successful he will make the county a faithful official, as whatever he undertakes he always does well.

Mayor Todd, of Louisville, makes some very sensible recommendations to the city lawmakers, but they are not disposed to regard any of his suggestions in regard to the police department. The Mayor is a business man while the city legislature is composed of politicians.

It is said that Dr. Hunter's presence is desired at Canton, where it is hoped that he can be prevailed upon to withdraw from the contest for United States Senator. Hunter's success is very uncertain, and a liberal slice of pie would have considerable influence on him, no doubt.

From the Petersburg precinct comes a call signed by 93 Democrats, asking Dr Grubbs to become a candidate for representative, making 283 voters who have called him. The call is not published from the fact that the Doctor is now an announced candidate.

The President will do but little more during the remainder of his term than to punish those Democratic officials who differed from him on the financial question. He has no use for those who have a mind of their own.

If the indictments turned out by the grand jury, last week, are an index to the official corruption that prevails in Louisville, Gov. Bradley ought to call a special session of the legislature and have the city's charter repealed.

More whisky afloat in Burlington, Monday, than there has been for many a day, and it was genuine election whisky, spiked with upper cuts and all the other flourishes known to the fistic world.

The indications are that some of Gov. Bradley's appointees are giving him considerable trouble, but he is keeping very quiet on the subject.

One Gallatin county Road Supervisor does not intend that an eight dollar culvert shall be torn up for ten cent rabbit.

The candidates were a very busy set of fellows Monday. There motto was, let no voter escape.

Several Louisville city officials have been indicted for corruption in office.

The ground hog did not see his shadow, yesterday.

DR. W. B. GRUBBS.

At our earnest solicitation we are enabled to present to our readers, this week, a good picture of Dr. W. B. Grubbs, who has received such flattering calls to become a candidate for Representative. The Doctor appreciates the calls, and accepts in a brief but neat card, and his announcement is placed in the proper column.

Dr. W. B. Grubbs is a son of Dr. James T. Grubbs, a native of Virginia, but for many years a leading physician of this county. His mother's maiden name was Miss Eliza Prentiss, a native of this State. To the elder Grubbs and wife were born two daughters and three sons. W. B. Grubbs was born in Burlington, Ky., January 28th, 1831, in the house now occupied by Chas. McKim. He received his education principally at Morgan Academy, and then attended the Ohio Medical College, where he graduated at the session of 1851-2. He then engaged in the practice of medicine until about ten years ago, since which time he has lead a quiet and happy life on his farm near Taylorsport.

Dr. Grubbs was married twice. His first wife was a Miss Coleman, by which union there were two children. His second wife was Miss Kittie McBey, of Indiana, and to them have been born seven children.

The only public office Dr. Grubbs ever filled, was justice of the peace under the old constitution. He has been a candidate for county Judge once and for Representative once and his popularity has continued to grow with the people.

His Democracy is beyond question, and if the Democrats nominate and elect him he will maintain for Boone her high standing which has been achieved for her in the General Assembly through his predecessors.

By the appointment of Lyman J. Gage as Secretary of the Treasury, President-elect McKinley has stirred up a hornets' nest, as appears from the following Washington dispatch:

"The politicians are much stirred up here over the seemingly straight reports that Mr. Lyman J. Gage is to take the Treasury. They say that they can hardly believe such a thing possible, and they are doing an exceedingly large amount of kicking over the prospects of the Chicago banker and business man taking a place where there are so many soft snaps and fat things to distribute among political friends. As a general rule, these rich favors are given out by politicians who have pulls with the head of the Treasury, and the great fear is that, as Mr. Gage is not a politician, he can not be made to see just when, where and on whom the good places should be bestowed. The belief is that if Mr. Gage is not already firmly fixed for the place the politicians will knock him out. Numerous letters and telegrams have already been sent Mr. McKinley and Mr. Hanna protesting against his appointment. Mr. Gage is charged with being a Democrat, a mugwump and everything else except a Republican. The objection to Mr. Gage is, of course, all owing to the fact that he is a clean man and not a scheming politician. The Treasury employes are happy over the probability of Gage's selection. They regard him as a practical civil-service reformer, and do not believe that the spoilsmen can influence him to turn out good and capable public servants in order to make places for party workers. These employes know well that if a nonpartisan, first-class business man is at the head of the Treasury they will retain their places."

The wave of prosperity has reached Louisville. Up to date this year one bank has gone to the wall, one building association has gone into the hands of a receiver, and thirty-five members of the police force have been laid off—all because of the scarcity of money.

Date of Primary Election Changed to June 5, 1897.

Pursuant to the call of the Chairman of the county Democratic Executive committee, the committee met in D. E. Castleman's law office in Burlington, last Monday afternoon. The following members were present: D. E. Castleman, chairman; B. L. Rice, Secretary, P. E. Cason, proxy for Elijah Parker; Reuben Conner, Richard Stephens, Robt. McGlasson, Geo. Ossman, proxy for J. C. Hughes.

The chairman stated the object of the meeting to be for the purpose of considering the propriety of changing the date of the primary election as fixed at the last meeting. A motion to reconsider the action of the committee on the second Monday in December was made and carried, and the order made on that date is now held for naught.

It was agreed by the committee to hold a primary election to nominate candidates for the various county offices to be filled at the regular election in November, 1897. It was further agreed that said primary election be held on the first Saturday in June, 1897, and the Executive Committee will meet in the Court-house in Burlington, at 2 o'clock p. m., on Monday, June 7th, 1897, and count the votes cast for each candidate for the respective offices, and the candidate receiving the highest number of votes cast for any office will be declared the Democratic nominee for that office.

The committee adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That all persons who voted for Bryan and Sewall at the last November election, and all persons who did not vote but would have voted for Bryan and Sewall had they voted, and all young men who will be legal voters at the next November election, and will pledge themselves to support the Democratic party and the nominees of said primary election, shall be allowed to vote.

Resolved, That all persons who desire to be candidates before said primary election shall, on or before the 5th day of April, 1897, record their names with the chairman of the county committee, and pay their assessments to him.

Resolved, That only such candidates who pay their assessments to defray the expenses of said primary election, on or before the fifth day of April, 1897, shall be entitled to have their name placed upon the ballots to be voted for.

Resolved, That all candidates for precinct offices and for Coroner who wish their names to appear upon the ballots for said primary, shall pay to the chairman of the county committee one dollar, to help pay the expenses of said primary election.

The chairman and secretary were authorized to assess the candidates to defray the expenses of the primary election.

D. E. Castleman Chairman,
B. L. Rice, Secretary.

"I Accept Your Call."

In answer to the 283 Democratic voters from different sections of the county asking me to become a candidate for Representative, let me say that such manisfestation of confidence, calls forth a sense of deep gratitude. With this condition of the soul, I accept your call severally and collectively, and subject myself to the action of the Democratic party, hoping that my course will cause regret to no caller. Permit me in this connection, publicly to ask for the vote of every Democrat at the primary election on the 5th day of June next.

Thankfully, W. B. Grubbs.

The cold weather, last week, effected the receipts and offerings of tobacco in the Cincinnati market, and they were not as large as they had been, and prices advanced some. A large portion of the new crop received so far has been inferior in quality.

Bro. Westover, of the Williamstown Courier, won out most handsomely last Saturday in the Grant county primary, and he will be the next county judge up there. Here's to him.

THE organ of sight is more highly developed in birds than in any other animals. British naturalists declare that the kestrel is possessed of such wonderful powers of sight that it is able to see a mouse when it is itself at such a height in the air that it is invisible to the naked human eye.

SHOCKING MURDER.

With an Ax and Hacks the Bodies to Pieces —The Walls and Ceiling Were Spattered With Blood—The Maniac in Jail—No Cause for the Murder.

WAYNE, Neb., Jan. 29.—A most shocking murder was discovered Thursday morning on a farm ten miles southeast of this city. C. K. Rash, in a fit of madness, brained his wife and three children with an ax and hacked the bodies to pieces. The deed was discovered by a boy who had been sent from a neighbor's house to engage Mr. Rash to help shell corn. Approaching the house he was startled by cries, and supposing that there was a struggle going on inside, burst in the door. A terrible spectacle presented itself.

The furniture of the room was in bad disorder and the walls and ceilings spattered with blood. On the bed was the body of Mrs. Rash, the head so badly battered that it was scarcely recognizable. In an adjoining room lay the bodies of the children. Whereever he went were evidences of a struggle and death. Upstairs in a loft lay the head of the family. His vacant stare and wandering talk showed clearly that reason had left him. The sheriff was immediately sent for and the maniac placed behind the bars. The cause of his action is still a mystery. The family was in moderate circumstances and esteemed highly.

It is believed that the prisoner belongs to a gang of counterfeiters whose operations are not alone confined to Chicago. Bennett is not known by the police. The prisoner when arrested had about three hundred dollars in his possession, most of which was counterfeit.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Justice Brewer of the supreme court, Thursday practically confirmed the report that Chief Justice Fuller and himself had been selected as arbitrators on behalf of Venezuela in the matter of the settlement of the boundary line dispute between that conntry and Great Britain, the formal signing of the treaty has not yet been done, but Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador and Senor Andrade, the Venezuelan minister have been in daily conference, and it is understood that the convention is now ready for signatures.

The selection of Justice Brewer, who for a year or so has been the head of the commission appointed by President Cleveland to make an investigation of the boundary line question for the United States, is accepted as proof that the conclusions reached by the commission, which as yet have been withheld from the public, are that Venezuela's claims are well founded. MARK HANNA

Denies That He Made a Statement That an Extra Session of Congress Would Be Called on March 15.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 29.—A dispatch was sent out Thursday from Canton quoting M. A. Hanna as authority that McKinley would call congress in extra session on March 15, and that an understanding had been reached with the doubtful senators which insured the success of the administration tariff bill. Mr. Hanna said that he never authorized any such statement or even stated that Chairman Dingley would frame the bill, assisted by Senator Aldrich.

"However," said he, "as for the assertion that it is the chief desire of the administration to get a tariff measure in operation as soon as possible, I will say that I entertain as I have always done, the opinion that there can be no business revival and no lasting prosperity in this country until after an adequate tariff bill has been passed and gone into operation."

GAGE ACCEPTS

The Tender of the Treasury Portfolio in President-Elect McKinley's Cabinet.

CANTON, O., Jan. 29.—Lyman J. Gage, of Chicago, has been formally offered and has accepted the treasury portfolio in President McKinley's cabinet.

At 7:30 o'clock Thursday evening Mr. Gage emerged from the dining room of the McKinley home and said:

"Mr. McKinley has offered me the treasury portfolio. I told him I would accept the high honor and fill the position to the best of my ability."

He said there was no ground for the publication that he was a gold democrat during the campaign, and that his only affiliation with the democratic party was in 1894, when he voted for Cleveland. He also said that he and Maj. McKinley substantially agree on the tariff question.

TRAIN ROBBED.

The Bandits Shatter the Express Car With Dynamite—The Safe Was Blown Open, and the Robbers Secured But $30.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30.—The postal authorities, Friday morning, received word from Rosebnrg, Ore., of the stopping of the Oregon express and the robbery of the mail coach and express car. The train left here at 7 p. m. Wednesday last for Portland and the robbery occurred at midnight Thursday night at Shady Point, two miles south of Roseburg. The train was signaled by a lantern. Engineer Morris stopped at the light and a masked man, revolver in each hand, crawled down from the tender, ordering "hands up."

Fireman Hendricks jumped off the car and ran for Roseburg, followed by a couple of shots. The robbers ordered Morris to back up the train and the mail and express cars were cut off. Then he ordered him to pull ahead for about 50 yards.

During this time Conductor Veatch and Brakeman Lohr went forward with their lights in the reconnoiter, but were shot at and ordered back.

Butler, the express messenger, put out his lights and went behind some trunks. He was called upon to open the car. He opened a door and took a shot at the robbers, whereupon the highwaymen applied dynamite on the opposite side, which shattered the car. Butler jumped out, and seeing a robber, attempted to shoot, but his gun snapped and he ran for the Pullman car.

The robbers used dynamite on the safes and succeeded in opening the small one, getting not over $30.

They knocked over the stove, setting fire to the car, totally consuming it and its contents, also all the passenger baggage, involving a heavy loss. They took some registered letters from the mail car and departed.

Superintendent Fields of the Southern Pacific, who happened to be at Roseburg, was called about 1:30 and took an engine and men to the scene. The burning car tumbled off the track and the train was brought in after several hours delay.

Engineer Morris had his cheek grazed by a bullet, and the express messengers dog was killed. A few mail pouches were rifled but the value of the letters taken is unknown. The end of the mail car was charred and some mail matter damaged by fire and water.

Several commercial travelers lost valuable sample trunks in the fire. One case containing silver knives, forks and spoons, was fonnd Friday morning in the slough, uninjured. Nothing else of value was recovered. The large express safe, unopened, was taken to Portland on the morning local.

The sheriff and his posse are scouring the country, but there is no clue yet, as a heavy rain has been falling, and the tracks are obliterated.

Up to a late hour Friday night no definite clews have been discovered leading to the identification of the miscreants who held up the north bound Southern Pacific express Thursday night.

The metal of the safe was bady warped by the heat and it is feared that at least a part of the contents will be damaged. The debris of the wreck has all been cleared away and trains are moving on time.

CANTON, O., Jan. 30.—James Wilson, of Iowa, who has been prominently mentioned in connection with the position of secretary of agriculture, arrived here at 10:30 o'clock p. m., Friday, and drove to Maj. McKinley's residence. Maj. McKinley, knew Mr. Wilson when he was in congress, greeted him heartily and they at once withdrew for a private concersation, which lasted more than an hour. Mr. Wilson in all probability will be offered and will accept the portfolio of agriculture. The report that Charles G. Dawes is to be controller of the currency has some foundation, but could not be affirmed Friday night.

Sometimes a burglar only succeeds in damaging the lock of a safe so that the combination won't work. Next morning the bank officers can't get at their own money. There may be millions in the safe, but if their credit depended on getting at it in a hurry they would be bankrupt, simply because the combination won't work.

A sick man is in very much the same fix about getting at the nourishment he needs to keep him alive. There is plenty of good food at hand, but his digestive organism is out of order; the nutritive "combination" of his system won't work. He can't possibly get at the nourishment contained in the food. He takes it into his stomach, but it does him no good. It isn't made into good blood. He is just as badly off as if the food was locked up where he couldn't touch it. He gets no strength or health out of it.

All these mal-nutritive conditions have a perfect and scientific remedy in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It puts the nutritive "combination" of the system into perfect working order. It gives the digestive and blood-making organs power to make pure, red, healthy blood, and pour it into the circulation abundantly and rapidly. It drives out all bilious poisons and scrofulous germs, cures indigestion, liver complaint, nervousness and neuralgia, and builds up solid flesh, active power and nerve force.

Mrs. Rebecca F. Gardner, of Grafton, York Co. Va., writes: "I was so sick with dyspepsia that I could not eat anything for over four months. I had to throw myself in bed. Nothing would stay on my stomach. I was so badly off I could not eat even a cracker. I thought I was going to die. I weighed only 84 pounds. I tried almost everything, and nothing did me any good, until I took two bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I am now as well as I ever was, and weigh 124 pounds."

A HOSPITAL

Sixty Amazons, Guarding the Hospital, Resisted 500 Spaniards.

All But Eight of the Former Were Shot Down and Horribly Butchered—Seventy Sick Soldiers, Six Surgeons and Ten Nurses Also Killed.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—A special from Key West, Fla., says: A horrible story comes from Remedios. Near Placetas the insurgents had a large hospital where were quartered sick and wounded soldiers. Near the insurgent camp was also located the well-known leper hospital of Cardosa, in which were about twenty unfortunates. Guarding the insurgents' hospital was a company of Cuban amazons, numering about seventy, under command of Senorita Inez Alvares, whose father and brothers had been butchered by Spaniards, and who had taken up arms for revenge.

The hospital was in a solitary location and was thought to be safe from Spanish molestation. But a colonel of the Spanish regiment De Bourbona, operating in that district, learned of the hospital's location and sent 500 men to destroy it. The Spaniards attacked at night and fired the buildings. The inmates and Amazon guards awoke to find the flames roaring about them. The sick and wounded soldiers could not escape, but the Amazons rushed out only to be greeted by a murderous fire.

The amazons fought bravely, but they were only a handful compared to the Spaniards, and were soon shot down. All were butchered except eight, whose peculiar beauty led the Spanish commander to order them saved for a fate worse than death. In the hospital there were more than 70 sick and wounded soldiers, six surgeons and ten nurses. Not one of these escaped, and, including the amazons, nearly 150 persons fell victims to Spanish thirst for slaughter.

Returning, the Spaniards passed the leper hospital, which they set on fire, and nearly all of the inmates perished in the flames.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—A special to the Herald from Havana, Cuba, via Key West, Fla., says: Salvador Herera, who was killed at Finca, near Sagua La Grande, was an American citizen.

When found the body of the unfortunate American was taken to Sagua La Grande. It was shockingly mutilated and covered with wounds made by the machete.

THE BROOKLLYN

Strikes a Rock in the Delaware River—Big Hole Torn in Her Bottom.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 1.—The United States cruiser Brooklyn, calculated to stand the fiercest onslaught of shot and shell, Sunday lies almost utterly helpless because of a narrow ledge of sunken rock in the Delaware river, above Marcus Hook, Pa., on which she struck heavily Saturday afternoon. Her lower double compartments, forward, were completely stove in, and it was only by the merest good fortune that the big vessel did not sink. This would undoubtedly have been the result had not her inner compartments successfully withstood the shock. As it was, she was pulled clear of the rocks and is now tied to the big stone ice-breakers at Marcus Hook, protected from the heavy ice gorges in midriver.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—SENATE—A bill providing that no person shall be tried in a United States court for acts in aid of the republic of Cuba was introduced by Mr. Chandler and was referred to the judiciary committee. And then. In pursuance of previous notice, Mr. Turpie (dem., Ind.) addressed the senate in a long constitutional argument to provide that the primary and paramount power to reorganize a new state is vested, not in the president of the United States, but in congress under that clause of the constitution which declares that congress shall have power to regulate commerce—that is, according to Mr. Turpie, intercourse with foreign states. He spoke for two hours and a half and not concluded when the hour fixed for eulogies on ex-Speaker Crisp, of Georgia, arrived.

HOUSE—The house, formally disposed of a lot of miscellaneous business and toward the close of the session entered upon the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill. In the time allotted to general debate on the measure, Mr. Johnson (rep. Ind.) gave to the house at length his views upon the necessity for a revision of the banking and currency laws. After disposing of about a quarter of the text of the bill, which includes about 80 printed pages, the house at 5:10 o'clock adjourned until Tuesday.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—SENATE—Senator Turpie Tuesday concluded his address favoring the recognition of Cuba. The remainder of the day's session was occupied by Mr. Daniel, (dem., Va.) in a speech against the Nicaragua canal bill as being "in fraud of the contract." At 5:46 p.m., the senate adjourned until Wednesday.

HOUSE—A bill to restore Jonahan Scott, a veteran of the Fifth Iowa cavalry to the pension roll, from which he was dropped by the bureau in 1894, at the rate of $72 a month, for total blindness, failed to receive Mr. Cleveland's approval. Upon recommendation of the committee on invalid pensions the house by a vote of 137 to 92 passed the bill over the veto.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—SENATE—The military academy appropriation bill was passed in the senate Wednesday, after a long and somewhat amusing controversy over one amendment providing for the attendance of the 96 West Point cadets at the inauguration parade. The amendment was rejected, yeas, 20, nays, 28 and the bill was passed. It appropriates $479,297, or $9,000 more than that as it passed the house. This $5,000 is for the purchase of the Maxim semi-automatic five-pounder quick firing gun. The memorial of H. L. Dupont, of Delaware, in which he asserted that his claim to a seat in the senate was defeated last session through a miscount, or through a mistake about pairs, was presented by Mr. Chandler (rep. N. H.) and was referred to the committee on privileges and elections.

HOUSE—By a vote of 131 to 118 the house Wednesday agreed to the conference report on the immigration bill, which embodied substantially a new measure, being different in some respects from either the senate or house bill. Speeches in favor of the report made by Messrs. Teanford (rep., O.), who presented it from the conferees; C. S. Stone (rep., Pa), Johnson (rep., Ind.), Corliss (rep., Mich.), Morse (rep., Mass.), Wilson (dem., S. C.), Taylor (rep., O.) and Hepburn (rep., Ia.), and in opposition to it by Messrs. Bartholdt (rep., Mo.), chairman of the house committee on immigration; Buck (dem., La.), Parker (rep., N. J.), Walker (rep., Mass.), Cannon (rep., Ill.), Grosvenor (rep., O.), Dolliver (rep., Ia.) and Boatner (dem., La.).

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—SENATE—Thursday Senator Allen introduced a resolution which seeks to impede and prevent the attorney general from selling the Union Pacific road under foreclosure proceedings, went over without action. The bill for a commission to an international monetary conference was taken up and Mr. Chandler, (rep., N. H.,) made a short statement in favor of it. He accepted as amendment offered by Mr. Bacon, dem., Ga., giving the president authority specifically to call an international conference at such point as may be agreed upon. All the rest of the time that was left of the morning hour, to which the consideration of the bill was limited, was occupied by Mr. Stewart, (pop Nev.), in a speech recounting the ills inflicted upon the poor by the gold standard, but declaring in the end that he would allow the bill to pass in any form that its friends desired. Notice of a desire to speak on the measure was given by Mr. Pettigrew, (sil, S.D.) and then the bill went over.

HOUSE—The Indian appropriation bill being on Monday last concluded and the bill passed with some material changes, all reducing the score of the measure. Mr. Wadsworth (rep., N. Y.), chairman of the committee on agriculture, had called up the bill making appropriations for the agricultural department for the year 1897-8. No action taken. During the day Mr. Crout (rep., Col.) reported the appropriation bill for the District of Columbia. Mr. Thomas (rep., Mich.) gave notice that on Wednesday next he would ask the house to consider the report of election committee No. 3 on the contest of Cornett vs. Swanson, from the Fifth Virginia district.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—SENATE—The bill for the representation of the United States on any international monetary conference that may be called occupied the senate Friday almost exclusively and was passed by the triumphant majority of 46 to 4. It authorizes the president to appoint five or more commissioners to any international conference, with a view to securing a fixed relation or ratio between gold and silver as money, by means of a common ratio between the metals, with free mintage at such rates and it also authorizes the president to call in like manner such conference to assemble at such point as may be agreed upon. At 5:20 the senate adjourned till Monday next.

HOUSE—The report of the conferees on the incorporation of the purchasers of the Atlantic and Pacific railroad was rejected by a vote of 71 to 143, and the conferees were instructed to insist upon the retention in the bill of the house amendments, the principal one of which forbade the issue of stock except for par value received. The bill making appropriations for the military academy went to the conference on the senate amendments thereto. The house refused to take up bills on the private calendar for nearly an hour occupied in committee of the whole and considered the agricultural bill without completing it. In the course of its discussion, Mr. Hardy (rep., Ind.) began a speech in favor of the acquisition of Cuba, and being refused permission to conclude, the five minute rule being in operation, gave notice that no bill should pass the house by unanimous consent for the remainder of the session. At 5 o'clock the house took a recess until 8 p. m., the evening session to be for the consideration of private pension bills.

EXTRA SESSION.

A Congressman Says the President-Elect Will Call One March 15.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 26.—Unless he should change his mind in the meantime, President-elect McKinley will call an extra session of congress for Monday, March 15. This information was given to Congressman-elect J. C. Sturdevant of the 26th district, by Maj. McKinley in Canton a few days ago. Mr. Sturdevant said he gained from Maj. McKinley's conversation the impression that the president-elect thought the tariff question ought to be disposed of at an early date.

MIDNIGHT FIRE.

Seven Persons Cremated and Thirty Families Homeless.

A Defective Flue Starts a Fire in Schaeffer's Wheelright Shop

On the Ground Floor of a Three Story Tenement House in Hoboken, N. J.—The Victims of the Blaze Were Charred Beyond Recognition.

HOBOKEN, N. J., Feb. 1.—This city was visited by two disastrous fires between 11:30 Saturday night and 2 o'clock Sunday morning. Seven persons were burned to death and 30 families were made homeless.

The Saturday night fire started in the three story frame building at 410 Newark street. Here six persons lost their lives, they were: Mrs. Nellie Schroeder, 40 years; Henry Schroeder, 11 years; Maggie Schroeder, 7 years; Kate Schroeder, 9 years; John Schroeder, 3 years; Willie Schroeder, 3 months. The father of the family, Charles Schroeder, was in a nearby saloon playing cards while his wife and children were dying.

The second fire started at 3 o'clock Sunday morning in the five-story double deck tenement at 157 Fourteenth street, overa mile from the scene of the first. In this fire three tenements; Nos. 155, 157 and 159 were entirely wrecked, and No. 153 was damaged badly by water. One child was burned to death on the fourth floor of No. 157. She was Mabel Mangles, eight years of age.

As near as can be determined the fire Saturday night at 410 Newark street started in a defective flue in Schaeffer's wheelright shop on the ground floor of a three story frame building. Schaefer occupied the second floor as living apartments. The front rooms on the third floor were occupied by Charles Schroeder and his family, while James Blanchfield and family occupied the rooms in the rear. The Blanchfields first discovered the fire, which had gained such headway, and barely made their escape by way of the roofs of adjoining buildings. It was impossible to discover the fate of the Shroeder family until the fire had subsided.

When the police entered the building little save the shell remained, and they were obliged to exercise great care in climbing about the place. They finally reached the top floor and made their way into the front room. Stretched across the bed, blackened and charred, lay the mother, and clasped tightly in her arms was the little baby, Willie.

Besides the mother and baby, in the same bed lay the charred bodies of the girls Maggie and Kate. It is likely they were suffocated in their sleep. On a mattress on the floor near the window lay the body of the boy John, but the body of Henry, the oldest boy, was nowhere to be seen. Upon further search being made, the boy's body was found under a mass of debris in the hall, burned almost to a crisp.

It is believed that the boy was aroused during the fire and in his efforts to escape ran into the hall. There he was overcome by the smoke and his body covered with part of the roof which fell in at that point. The loss to the building and contents will probably not exceed $15,000.

CORBETT-FITZSIMMONS' MILL.

Provisions Will Be Made to Seat Fifteen Thousand People.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 1.—W. K. Wheelock, Dan Stuart's advance representative, who is now in this city, said to a reporter of the United Associated Presses that provision will be made to seat 15,000 people at whatever point in Nevada may subsequently be chosen by Mr. Stuart as the scene of the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight, and present indications tend to show that this accommodation will be no more than is absolutely necessary. The question of admission fees will be taken up when Stuart arrives in San Francisco, towards the end of the week. Wheelock said the medicated springs at which the champions will train, are among the finest he has ever visited and the Nevada climate in March is ideal for training purposes.

MYSTERIOUS MURDER.

A San Francisco Tailor's Wife Found Dead—Her Lover Commits Suicide a Few Hours Later.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 1.—Marie Sprinznik, the wife of Franz Sprinznik, a tailor, was shot and killed in her apartments at 918 Monroe street, Sunday night. There was no clue to the assassin, but suspicion was directed toward Franz Wolf, on whose account Mrs. Sprinznik recently separated from her husband. Sunday morning Wolf's body with a bullet hole through the brain was found in a room which he had rented a few hours before. Wolf's acquaintances state that he frequently threatened to kill Mrs. Sprinznik and then commit suicide. As the bullet which caused the woman's death exactly fits Wolf's pistol the supposition is that he made good his threats.

Funeral of the Late President Roberts.

Roberts, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, will take place at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon next from Roberts late country residence at Bala station. TENNESSEE CENTENNIAL

Many Eastern and Most of the Southern States Will Have Special Exhibits—Work Done by the Women of the South.

[Special Nashville (Tenn.) Letter.]

There is widespread and growing interest throughout the country in the Tennessee Centennial and International exposition to be held at Nashville, commencing May 1, and continuing until October 30, 1897. This will be the only feature of the kind of national importance during the year, and the progress that has been made and the plans that have been matured have already received so much attention and commendation from the press of the whole country that the success of the enterprise is already assured. It has never been intended by the people of Tennessee that this patriotic celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of their state should be merely of a local or sectional interest, but it is only recently that the full importance and broad scope of the exposition has been more generally understood and accepted as a national or international event. In fact, while the plans, grounds and buildings are just what the management originally contemplated, they find that the demands for space and privileges already exceed the capacity of the buildings, and the lively interest which has been created, especially since the close of the late political campaign, is an indication of the greater interest that will be felt everywhere when the exposition opens.

Several of the states have made appropriations for displays, and many others will do so in the spirit expressed in the message of Gov. Clarke to the legislature of Connecticut, who said:

"In common with other states, Connecticut has been invited by the state of Tennessee to participate in celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of her admission into the union, the event to take the form of a centennial and international exposition, to be held in Nashville for six months, opening May 1, 1897. Preparations are being made upon such a scale as to indicate that it will be an attractive and meritorious enterprise, and, aside from the material advantages it offers for the exhibition of Connecticut's products, it seems that we should unite with sister states in an exhibition of cordial interstate fellowship upon an occasion of this character. I, therefore, recommend that the subject be duly considered, suggesting that such appropriation be made as will enable the state to be creditably represented there, and that the appointment of a commission be authorized as its official representatives."

TENNESSEE CENTENNIAL—WOMAN'S BUILDING.

Rhode Island was the first eastern state to make an appropriation and to erect a building, and the governor of the far-away territory of Alaska, with the air of enterprising citizens, is preparing to make an elaborate exhibit which will show the resources and development of that country in splendid style. New Mexico will send 15 tons of material and other specimen products. The California state board of trade asks for large space for a great display of fruit. Ohio has made a liberal appropriation for a state display, and the city of Cincinnati will erect a building at a cost of $10,000, a single exhibit in which will cost $30,000. Vermont has made an appropriation, and the legislatures of other states now in session are asked to provide for exhibits, and where this cannot be done the public-spirited citizens and leading business men will provide the means for a creditable representation. Gov. Hastings, of Pennsylvania, visited the exposition grounds a few weeks ago in company with nearly all the leading state officers, and they were greatly astonished at the magnitude of the plant and the magnificence of the buildings. The governor gave the management the most positive assurance that the state of Pennsylvania should appropriate at least $40,000 for the purpose of making an exhibit worthy of the Keystone state.

The rivalry between the cities of Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis and Chicago, each of which will endeavor to make the best impression upon the southern people, in the hope of winning the trade of that section, is the best evidence of the great favor with which the centennial is looked upon in the business world.

A. Macchi, a foreign representative of the exposition, with headquarters in London, has special commissioners in every country in Europe, all of whom will be represented, 500,000 square feet of space having already been engaged for European exhibits, necessitating the construction of a large annex to the commerce building. The Russian and Scandinavian exhibits promise to be the most wonderful, representing home life, industry, commerce, art and education. A Japanese village has also been built, showing a street in one of the principal cities of Japan. These are only a few of the many indications of the interest outside of Tennessee and her neighboring states, all of whom are fully aware of the great opportunity presented.

The United States government has given the exposition splendid recognition, having made an appropriation of $130,000 for a building of magnificent architecture and an exhibit which will demonstrate the practical workings of the several departments at Washington. The plans of this building are now being made and the contract for the erection of the building will be awarded without the usual requirement of advertising 30 days for bids.

All of the main buildings have been completed except the great History structure, which will itself be one of the best specimens of art, and for which ground has been broken. The Negro building will soon be completed, and nothing will remain to be done in that line of work after the 1st of April unless it be some of the smaller affairs for concessions, etc.

In the woman's department the past month has marked the steady advancement of the work in all its branches, and the additional assurance of new features of interest and beauty, and the greater perfection of others already mapped out.

On the second floor of the Woman's building one of the large front rooms, whose windows look out toward the Auditorium, will be known as the Georgia room, and will be furnished and decorated entirely by the women of Georgia, under the direction of Mrs. Joseph Thompson, of Atlanta, the chief commissioner in charge. During the first week of the new year the entire board of Georgia commissioners held a meeting, at which the sum of $1,000 was voted to be expended in the beautifying and fitting up of this room. As this sum is already in hand, the appropriation means the immediate beginning of the work, under the direction of the appointed committee, who are already receiving bids and estimates. As finished the room will be a handsome reception room, and around its walls will be placed a few cases filled with choice specimens of the best attainments and handiwork of the Georgia women in various lines.

At the head of the wide stairway on the second floor another room will be furnished by a band of women as a handsome setting for the exhibits of their work and achievements, and during the past month in Chattanooga, the home of the workers, constant meetings have been held to decide upon a plan of decoration and the exhibits to be accepted for this room. One interesting feature which it will present will be a frieze around the walls, showing the native flora and bits of the scenery at various points on Lookout mountain.

In Marion county recently the women have secured a court appropriation of such good proportions as to insure at least one added feature to the building in addition to the county and woman's handiwork exhibit, which they will send as the result of their own efforts.

In Shelby county, with over $3,000 in hand, the women are progressing rapidly with the selection of plans and bids for their part of the work, and contractors will shortly be sent to Nashville to begin ou wall decoration and the placing of the tiling on the floor of the grand entrance hall of the building.

In Nashville for the past 30 days the leading feature of the work has been the organization of local Women's Centennial clubs in each of the wards of the city and many of the districts of the surrounding country. The first of these clubs was organized early in December, and through this agency already 500 women are enlisted in the cause whose cooperation had not been secured before. Each club has four officers, whose chairman directs the plan of work, and meets with the state board of the woman's department at their regular meetings.

The money made by the Davidson county members of the board will be used in providing the necessary funds for the committee's work, furnishing and advancing such parts of the building as have not been appropriated by different bands of workers, and in paying the entire running expenses of the building during the six months of the exposition.

Amply Atoned For.

Not many years ago, according to the annals of the India office, a queen's messenger, or some other inferior official, was robbed, though not injured in any way, on his road to Cabul, and the British government, of course, wrote to complain of it. No reply was received for months; but at last the emir wrote: "The matter you mention has been thoroughly investigated, and not only have the robbers of your messenger been put to death, but all their children, as well as their fathers and grandfathers. I hope this will give satisfaction to her majesty the queen." Chicago Inter Ocean.

FASHION LETTER.

[Special New York Correspondence.]

Fashions in dress are never so fascinating as at the approach of spring, when they blossom out like the flowers in such rapid succession that one becomes bewildered in the matter of selection from among such a host of pretty styles so different in appearance from the heavy materials of the winter. Already the shops are aglow with temptations galore in the way of warm-weather attire from the exhibit of light-weight, light-colored tweeds, fancy wools, ladies' cloths, French cassimeres and boucles, to the most diaphanous gauzes and muslins fit only for the most sultry day wear. The spring season promises to surpass all others in the variety of elegant and artistic accessories, which are certainly the dominant feature of the present fashions, and we can only wonder what will come next, and tentatively consider each new suggestion as it may apply to individual requirements.

Individuality in dress has a wide field in the midst of all the profusion, and the woman who is fortunate enough to possess good taste can this spring make a most artistic success of her season's outfit. With the diminished sleeves and the moderately full skirts exaggeration seems to have ceased, and the general outlines of fashion were never prettier than they are now. The new sleeves show such unlimited variety that they may be exactly what the wearer or the dressmaker chooses to have them. Besides being small, very many of the new models are still very much elongated by points at the waists and frills falling over the hands, the scalloped edges of some of the newest reaching almost to the finger tips, and veiling the entire hand. The very close coat sleeve is seen much more in some peculiarities of gowns than in others—for example, the Louis XV. coats have moderately full sleeves, but they are cut in such a way as to fit the forearm closely, with the fullness distinctly on the upper part near the shoulder. Length, not width, seems to be the aim in all the sleeves, and the manner of finishing them at the top varies almost with the making of each new advance spring model.

But for the moments before Lent the pretty details of dress appear to be the features most under consideration. Few wholly new gowns are yet invested in, as women are busy merely studying new effects, and slowly making up their minds regarding style, color, outline and general effect of their new spring gowns.

Meantime the change is continually rung on the item of small finery in the way of ruches, collarettes, fraises, frills, ruffs, plastrons, vest-fronts and the countless variety of bolero, Eton, Zouave, French Guard and other small jackets or jacket-fronts with which to vary the present attire. If any new costumes are invested in they are for some extra elegant occasion demanding the freshest and newest style of evening toilet, or else the expenditure is for skating suits, that are always in great demand at this time of year, and skating in heated rinks on artificial ice permits a variety of ornamental dress which was never dreamed of in the old days of skating out of doors. Not only are stylish costumes worn in boucle fabrics, tweeds, English serges, cheviots and various handsome tailor cloths trimmed with furs of every description, but velvet gowns come to the foreground here as well as on more dressy occasions—these in dark and black and wine shades, right out of every ten being completed with a short chamois-lined fur-edged bolero jacket, the toque muff and collarette of fur to match. Some of the handsome Russian bine costumes are made up with a bolero jacket, high girdle and flaring cape collar edged with mink fur, with a blouse vest of blue, cream, gold and green plaided silk barred with satin whose soft folds are held by the drop ceinture.

Not only in demi-dress toilets, gowns of ceremony and also in elaborate street costumes, but likewise in ball dresses are noted surprising color combinations. Blue, green and palo yellow were recently seen in conjunction on an imported ball gown trimmed with brown fur and lace. Another gown has a green and gold brocade, shot with pale rose color with sleeve puffs, Medici collar and girdle of mauve velvet. The bodice draperies were of pale ecru chiffon, silk embroidered with tiny heliotrope and mignonette blossoms, framed with an elaborate passementerie of jewel beads.

Mr. Editor, we are very sorry that you do not allow more than the mere mention of the candidates as they come and go, for though they are always the most agreeable of people, into office they are all certainly nice men, and it would give us a great deal of latitude in complimentary phrases.

Mr. Matson Rachal came very near having a very serious accident, last Sunday afternoon. He was starting out of town with sleigh bells merrily jingling, I do not know where he was going, but doubtless for another belle, when it seems his horse thought he had too many already, for it became frightened and ran off. Mr. Rachal was thrown out, his head striking the wheel of another buggy near by, knocking out two spokes, and it might have cost him his life, had not some bystanders caught the horse to which the buggy was attached, as his head was still in the wheel. He received only slight injuries, not sufficient to discourage him even, for he now drives a double team and the sleigh bells ring merrier than ever.

Walton.

January 31st.—Oh my! what a delightful party we had at Mr. Ira Percival's on last Saturday night," said one pretty school girl. "Yes, it was perfectly lovely," replied her companion. "Oh! Mr. C. write it up. We had the jolliest time you ever saw, and everything went off so quietly and nicely, and this cold weather makes the girls have such rosy cheeks; we had lots of fun." This was from a young friend who attends the Walton Academy. The Misses present were, Lillie Yates, Lora Diers, Mary Rouse, Edna Rausler, Mabel Bagby, Effie Lermound, Emma Hance, Hattie Edwards, Sallie Herndon, Lucy Fields, Ethel Waltz, Madge Holder, Lida and Mary Percival. The youngsters were Sidney Hudson, Ernest McElroy, Walter Herndon Jacob Cleek, Jennie Crome, Jas. McGee, Thos. Marlou Stephens, Charles Chambers, Robt. Byland, F. Hedges, Leon Prior, Willie Browning, Walter Rouse, Willie Harmon, Willie and Clayton Percival. It was a terrible night to go out but the young people had so much enjoyment that all the hardships of the road were entirely ignored.

S. L. (Cuz) Edwards, inspired by the confidence and returning prosperity which followed, as promised, the election of McKinley, has engaged in a productive industry in addition to his other avocations. Firmly of the conviction that the new administration, shortly to be inaugurated, will bring an immense tidal wave of the long hoped-for prosperity, he has struck out boldly and opened a new field for the service of his great talents. It is not known that his partner and brother, S. L., has any share in the new enterprise—it is believed not—and Cuz will reap the entire benefits and the crowning glory of the venture if it is successful. He is devoting a good deal of his time, and in the dim vista of the future he looks forward to a period when he shall be known as the successful introducer of THE WHITE RAT INDUSTRY.

The new cannery of the T. A. Snyder & Co. is in the nature of an assured fact. The company has secured eight acres between the Southern Railroad and the Lexington Pike, about a half mile below town, and as soon as the weather permits will commence sinking wells and prepare for erecting the necessary buildings. 485 acres have been offered, an excess of 175 acres that were required to secure the location of the plant. It is to be noted that the farmer submits to the reduction of 20 per cent. on his tomatoes in order to have the cannery established here, showing that he must always carry the heaviest end of the burden. The town gives nothing and will prosper at the expense of the producer.

Mrs. Byron Northcutt received, yesterday, a letter from Mr. L. P. Stephens. His many friends will be pained to learn that he has been very ill with the grip ever since he has been in Louisville, and that he is not yet well.

The sidewalk from Allen Arnold's to the Academy offers a splendid opportunity for some one to break an arm, leg or even a neck.

This week closed half the school year at Walton Academy. The number of pupils is now 63. The inclement weather has kept a surprisingly small number of outside pupils from school. Those qualities which have led some of the boys and girls to ride 4 and 5 miles to school during the last week, will help make strong men and women later on. C. L. Crisler was assisting a force of men to get up ice, last Wednesday. He was using a hoe to draw the ice out of the pool, and was lauding a large lump, when he slipped and in his effort to regain his feet he flourished the hoe in a wild manner, striking Wood Maxwell, one of the hands, on the head, cutting a hole through his hat and laying open an ugly gash in Maxwell's head. It was a very narrow escape from a serious injury.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 29th, 1897.

The senate did a wise thing when it defeated the amendment offered to the Millitary appropriation bill appropriating the cost of transportation of the West Point Cadets to and from Washington, in order that they might be allowed to appear in the Inauguration day parade. In the first place, spending money for such a purpose is an extravagance at any time and doubly so at this time when, as Senator Stewart pointed out, thousands of our people are in need of the actual necessities of life. In the next place, the military forces of the government should not be allowed to take any part in the inauguration of a President. The presence of the U. S. troops no doubt adds to the pleasure of those who view the parade, but all the same they ought not to be there. It is a bad idea, and the precedent of having a few U. S troops in the parade to give it variety, which we have been setting in this generation, may some day be taken advantage of by unscrupulous men by bringing enough of them to Washington to forcibly inaugurate some man who has not gone through the formality of being elected by the people. In my humble opiuion it would be a wise precaution for Congress to pass a bill prohibiting armed troops, whether state or national, from coming inside the corporate limits of Washington on inauguration day. The inauguration of a President isn't a millitary function and the millitary should have nothing whatever to do with it.

That arbitration treaty has not yet been reported to the Senate from the Committee on Foreign Relations, notwithstanding the public meetings and showers of telegrams and letters in its behalf. The general impression is that the Committee will recommend several amendments to the treaty, setting forth clearly that it is not to be allowed to interfere with our maintenance of the Monroe doctrine.

* * *

Senator Daniel made a speech against the Nicaragua Canal bill this week, opening with this dramatic language: "The bill is dead. The speech of Senator Turple killed it, and Minister Rodriguez has exposed its corpse in the public morgue." He expressed doubts as to whether the canal would be a commercial benefit to the U. S if it were constructed, and declared that the passage of the pending bill would in effect put the U. S into the bunco business. He further pointed out that after pouring the proposed hundred million dollars into the canal the U. S. could not maintain exclusive control over it. Independent of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty between the United States and England, there is a treaty between England and Nicaragua that gives the armies and navies of England free access to the canal. The speech of Senator Daniel was made after Senator Morgan had introduced amendments to the Canal bill intended to meet objections raised by Minister Rodrigez in behalf of Nicaragua. It is generally believed in Washington that Senator Daniel was right when he declared the bill dead.

Some of the Senators appear to have taken second thought about the bill authorizing the President to appoint representatives to an International monetary conference, which it was at first supposed was to be allowed to go through just as it was reported. Senator Cannou has offered an amendment directing the President to call a conference, and Senator Stewart has offered another, providing that the United States government shall, in case the conference fails to reach an agreement in favor of international bimetalism, withiu thirty days after the adjournment of the conference open the mints to the free coinage of all gold and silver presented.

The semi official announcement that McKinley has already selected his friend, William F. Hahn, of Ohio, to be U. S. Marshall of the District of Columbia, has aroused much resentment among the Washington republicans, who gave liberally of their time and money to help elect McKinley and who believed that he would live up to the home rule plank of the St. Louis platform, notwithstanding a hint dropped by Mark Hanna some weeks ago, intimating that the federal offices in the District of Columbia would be given to voters instead of non-voting residents.

Ex-Cougressman and Gov. Long, of Mass., is about to find himself in the same class with Bliss, of New York, who after having virtually accepted a Cabinet portfolio was compelled, by the red hot opposition to him, to recall his acceptance and to try to let himself down easy by saying it was on account of his wife's health. Massachusetts men headed by Senator Hoar are making a fight on Long, and the friends of everyother New England man who has cabinet hankerings are helping it along, and present indications are that all this will be too much for Long and that he will soon be letting himself down easy.

PERSONAL MENTION.

A RICH HARVEST.

It cost no more to sow good seeds than it does to sow old and worthless stock. How foolish is the person who fails to get the best to start with. No matter how often thought of this, when your garden has not done very well.

Will you jog along in the same old way this year, or use a little forethought and send to James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., for their Catalogue which contains a list of all that's new and good.

The seeds are always reliable—sure to grow and never disappoint. Send 10 cents for Catalogue and deduct this amount from first order. Really costs nothing.

Mrs. Mary Adams, widow of the late P P Adams, died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. George Ossman, of Beaver, last Sunday morning aged 84 years. The deceased was a daughter of Samuel Stephens, and was born and raised in this county. She was a sister of Elder E Stephens, of Erlanger, and Micajah Stepheus, of Florence, and one brother and two sisters in Illinois, and three of the above named are over eighty years of age. She was the mother of eight children, four of whom survive her, County Clerk B W. Adams; Mrs. Eliza Smith, and Dr S. M. Adams, of Big Bone, and Mrs. Geo. Ossman, of Beaver.

At the time of Mrs. Adams' death she was a member of the Beaver Baptist church, to which she had moved her membership from Big Bone, with which church she united many years ago. She was a lady devoted to her religion, a loving and indulgent mother and a good neighbor. None knew her but to love her, and her long useful life had endeared her to all with whom she was acquainted. Her funeral was preached at Big Bone by Rev. T. L Utz, yesterday at eleven o'clock, after which her remains were follo wed to their last resting place by a large concourse of sorrowing friends.

Last Thursday was a regular examination day for Common School graduates, and eight applicants for diplomas were examined by Supt Voshell, D. M. Snyder and A. J. Collins. Out of the eight five were successful and will receive the diplomas, which will be issued by the proper authorities at Frankfort, to whom the result of the examination will be certified by Supt. Voshell. The questions were furnished by the State Board of Education, and the examination was a very difficult one. The diplomas will be presented at the next session of the Teachers' Institute, by which time the number of graduates will likely be increased as a result of the June examination. Some time since the County Superintendent offered a prize to the school district to which belonged the graduate obtaining the highest average per cent. upon the examination, and Miss Edna Cowen, daughter of Mr. R. S. Cowen, captured that prize last Thursday for the Burlington public school district. Miss Edna has been a pupil of Prof Collins ever since he has been teaching here. Prof. Voshell is sanguine that great good will result from the issuing of diplomas to public school graduates, in as much as they are calculated to inspire increased efforts on the part of the pupils in the several schools.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

As One Planets Move in Order Guarded by the Steady Hand

Of God—The Same Holds All Safe From Harm and Regulates the Smallest Act of Life—"Him That Maketh the Seven Stars and Orion."

This sermon of Dr. Talmage looking at the midnight heavens through the eyes of one of the ancients is unique for practicality, and must set all to useful thinking. His text is: Amos v., 8: "Seek Him that maketh the Seven Stars and Orion."

A country farmer wrote this text—Amos of Tekoa. He plowed the earth and threshed the grain by a new threshing machine just invented, as formerly the cattle trod out the grain. He gathered the fruit of the sycamore tree and scarified it with an iron comb just before it was getting ripe, as it was necessary and customary in that way to take from it the bitterness. He was the son of a poor shepherd, and stuttered; but before the stammering rustic the Philistines, and Syrians, and Phœnicians, and Moabites, and Ammonites, and Edomites, and Israelites, trembled.

Moses was a law-giver. Daniel was a prince, Isaiah, a courier and David a king; but Amos, the author of my text, was a peasant, and, as might be supposed, nearly all his parallelisms are pastoral, his prophecy full of the odor of new-mown hay, and the rattle of locusts, and the rumble of carts with sheaves, and the roar of wild beasts devouring the flock while the shepherd came out in their defense. He watched the herds by day, and by night inhabited a booth made of bushes, so that through these branches he could see the stars all night long, and was more familiar with them than we who have tight roofs to our houses, and hardly ever see the stars except among the tall brick chimneys of the great towns. But at seasons of the year when the herds were in special danger he would stay out in the open field all through the darkness, his only shelter the curtain of the night heaven, with the stellar embroideries and silvered tassels of lunar light.

What a life of solitude, all alone with his herds! Poor Amos! And at 12 o'clock at night, hark to the wolf's howl, and the lion's roar, and the bear's growl, and the owl's te-whit-te-who, and the serpent's hiss, as he unwittingly steps too near while moving through the thickets! So Amos, like other herdsmen, got the habit of studying the map of the heavens, because it was so much of the time spread out before him. He noticed some stars advancing and others receding. He associated their dawn and setting with certain seasons of the year. He had a poetic nature, and he read night by night, and month by month, and year by year, the poem of the constellations, didivinely rhythmic. But two rosettes of stars especially attracted his attention while seated on the ground, or lying on his back under the open scroll of the midnight heavens—the Pleiades, or Seven Stars, and Orion. The former group this rustic prophet associated with the spring, as it rises about the 1st of May. The latter he associated with the winter, as it comes to the meridian in January. The Pleiades, or Seven Stars, connected with all sweetness and joy; Orion, the herald of the tempest. The ancients were the more apt to study the physiognomy and juxtaposition of the heavenly bodies, because they thought they had a special influence upon the earth; and perhaps they were right. If the moon every few hours lifts and lets down the tides of the Atlantic ocean, and the electric storms in the sun, by all scientific admission, affected the earth, why not the stars have proportionate effect?

And there are some things which make me think that it may not have been all superstition which connected the movements and appearance of the heavenly bodies with great moral events on earth. Did not a meteor run on evangelistic errand on the first Christmas night and designate the rough cradle of our Lord? Did not the stars in their courses fight against Sisera? Was it merely coincidental that before the destruction of Jerusalem the moon was hidden for 12 consecutive nights? Did it merely happen so that a new star appeared in constellation Cassiopeia, and then disappeared just before Charles IX. of France, who was responsible for St. Bartholomew massacre died? Was it without significance that in the days of the Roman Emperor Justinian war and faminine were preceded by the dimness of the sun, which for nearly a year gave no more light than the moon, although there were no clouds to obscure it?

Astrology, after all, may have been something more than a brilliant heathenism. No wonder that Amos of the text, having heard these two anthems of the stars, put down the stout rough staff of the herdsman and took into his brown hand and cut and knotted fingers the pen of a prophet, and advised the recreant people of his time to return to God, saying: "Seek Him that maketh the Seven Stars and Orion." This command, which Amos gave 785 years B. C., is just as appropriate for us in 1897 A. D.

In the first place, Amos saw, as we must see, that the God who made the Pleiades and Orion must be the God of order. It was not so much a star here and a star there that impressed the inspired herdsman, but seven in one group, and seven in the other group. He saw that night after night and season after season and decade after decade they had kept step of light, each one in its own place, a sisterhood never clashing and never contesting precedence. From the time Hesiod called the Pleiades the "seven daughters of Atlas" and Virgil wrote in his Aeneid of "Stormy Orion" until now, they have observed the order established for their coming and going; order written not in manuscript that may be pigeon-holed, but with the hand of the Almighty on the dome of the sky, so that all nations may read it. Order. Persistent order. Sublime order. Omnipotent order.

What a sedative to you and me, to whom communities and nations sometimes seem going pell mell, and the world ruled by some fiend at haphazard, and in all directions maladministration! The God who keeps seven worlds in right circuit for 6,000 years can certainly keep all the affairs of individuals and nations and continents in adjustment. We had not better fret much, for the peasant's argument of the text was right. If God can take care of the seven worlds of the Pleiades and the four chief worlds of Orion, he can probably take care of the one world we inhabit.

So I feel very much as my father felt one day when we were going to the country mill to get a grist ground, and I, a boy of seven years, sat in the back part of the wagon, and our yoke of oxen ran away with us, and along a labyrinthine road through the woods, so that I thought every moment we would be dashed to pieces, and I made a terrible outcry of fright, and my father turned to me with a face perfectly calm and said: "De Witt, what are you crying about? I guess we can ride as fast as the oxen can." And, my hearers, why should we be affrighted and lose our equilibrium in the swift movement of worldly events, especially when we are assured that it is not a yoke of unbroken steers that are drawing us on, but that order and wise government are in the yoke?

In your occupation, in your mission, your sphere, do the best you can, and then trust to God; and if things are all mixed, and disquieting, and your brain is hot and your heart sick, get some one to go out with you into the starlight and point out to you the Pleiades, or, better than that, get into some observatory, and through the telescope see further than Amos with the naked eye could—namely, 200 stars in the Pleiades, and that in what is called the sword of Orion there is a nebula computed to be two trillion two hundred thousand billions of times larger than the sun. Oh, be at peace with the God who made that and controlls all that—the wheel of the constellations turning in the wheel of galaxies—for thousands of years without the breaking of a cog or the slipping of a band or the snap of an axle. For your placidity and comfort through the Lord Jesus Christ I charge you "Seek Him that maketh the Seven Stars and Orion."

Again, Amos saw, as we must see, that the God who made these groups of the text was the God of light. Amos saw that God was not satisfied with making one star, or two or three stars, but he makes seven, and having finished that group of worlds, makes another group—group after group. To the Pleiades he adds Orion. It seems that God likes light so well that he keeps making it. Only one Being in the universe knows the statistics of solar, lunar, stellar, meteoric creations, and that is the Creator himself. And they have all been lovingly Christened, each one a name as distinct as the names of your children. "He telleth the number of the stars; he calleth them all by their names." The seven Pleiades had names given to them and they are Alcyone, Merope, Celæno, Electra Sterope, Taygete and Maja.

But think of the billions and trillions of daughters of starry light that God calls by name as they sweep by Him with beaming brow and lustrous robe! So fond is God of light—natural light, moral light, spiritual light. Again and again is light harnessed for symbolization—Christ, the bright and morning star; evangelization, the day-break; the redemption of nations. Sun of Righteousness rising with healing in his wings. Oh, men and women, with so many sorrows and sins and perplexities, if you want light of comfort, light of pardon, light of goodness, in earnest prayer through Christ, "Seek Him that maketh the seven stars and Orion."

Again, Amos saw, as we must see, that the God who made these two archipelagoes of stars must be an unchanging God. There had been no change in the stellar appearance in this herdman's lifetime, and his father, a shepherd, reported to him that there had been no change in his lifetime. And these two clusters hang over the celestial arbor now just as they were the first night that they shone on the Edenic bowers, the same as when the Egyptians built the Pyramids from the top of which to watch them, the same as when the Chaldeans calculated the eclipse, the same as when Elihu, according to the Book of Job, went out to study the aurora borealis, the same under Ptolemaic system and Copernician system, the same from Calisthenes to Pythagoras, and from Pythagoras to Herschel. Surely a changeless God must have fashioned the Pleiades and Orion! Oh, what an anodyne amid the ups and down of life and the flux and reflux of the tides of prosperity to know that we have a changeless God, "the same yesterday, to-day and forever."

Xerxes garlanded and knighted the steersman of his boat in the morning, and hanged him in the evening of the same day. Fifty thousand people stood around the columns of the national capital, shouting themselves hoarse at the presidential inaugural, and in four months or a great over the antipathies that a ruffian's pistol in Washington depot expressed the sentiment of disappointed office seekers. The worlds sits in its chariot and drives tandem, and the horse ahead is Huzza, and the horse behind is Anathema. Lord Cobham, in King James' time, was applauded, and had $35,000 a year, but was afterward execrated, and lived on scraps stolen from the royal kitchen. Alexander the Great after death remained unburied for 30 days because no one would do the honor of shoveling him under. The duke of Wellington refused to have his iron fence mended because it had been broken by an infuriated populace in some hour of political excitement, and he left in ruins that men might learn what a fickle thing is human favor. "But the mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting to them that fear Him, and his righteousness unto the children's children of such as keep His covenant, and to those who remember His commandments to do them." This moment "seek Him that maketh the Seven Stars and Orion."

Again, Amos saw, as we must see, that the God who made these two beacons of the Oriental night sky, must be a God of love and kindly warning. The Pleiades rising in mid-sky said to all the herdsmen and shepherds and husbandmen: "Come out and enjoy the mild weather, and cultivate your gardens and fields." Orion, coming in winter, warned them to prepare for tempest. All navigation was regulated by these two constellations. The one said to shipmaster and crew: "Hoist sail for the sea, and gather merchandise from other lands." But Orion was the storm signal, and said: "Reef sail, make things snug, or put into harbor, for the hurricanes are getting their wings out." As the Pleiades were the sweet evangels of the spring, Orion was the warning prophet of the winter.

Oh, now I get the best view of God I ever had! There are two sermons I never want to preach—the one that presents God so kind, so indulgent, so lenient, so imbecile that men may do what they will against Him, and fracture His every law, and put the pry of their impertinence and rebellion under His throne, and while they are spitting in His face and stabbing at His heart He takes them up in His arms and kisses their infuriated brow and cheek, saying: "Of such is the kingdom of Heaven." The other kind of sermon I never want to preach is the one that represents God as all fire and torture and thunder cloud, and with red-hot pitchfork tossing the human race into paroxysms of infinite agony. The sermon that I am now preaching believes in a God of loving, kindly warning, the God of spring and winter, the God of the Pleiades and Orion.

You must remember that the winter is just as important as the spring. Let one winter pass without frost to kill vegetation and ice to bind the rivers and snow to enrich our fields, and then you will have to enlarge your hospitals and your cemeteries. "A green Christmas makes a fat graveyard," was the old proverb. Storms to purify the air. Thermometer at three degrees below zero to tone up the system. December and January just as important as May and June. I tell you we need the storms of life as much as we do the sunshine. There are more men ruined by prosperity than by adversity. If we had our own way in life, before this we would have been impersonations of selfishness and worldliness and disgusting sin, and puffed up until we would have been like Julius Cæsar, who was made by sycophants to believe that he was divine, and the freckles on his face were said to be as the stars of the firmament.

One of the swiftest trans-Atlantic voyages made one summer by the Etruria was because she had a stormy wind abaft, chasing her from New York to Liverpool. But to those going in the opposite direction the storm was a buffeting and a hindrance. It is a bad thing to have a storm ahead, pushing us back; but if we be God's children and aiming toward Heaven, the storms of life will only chase us the sooner into the harbor. I am so glad to believe that the monsoons, typhoons and mistrals and siroccos of the land and sea are not unchained maniacs let loose upon the earth, but are under divine supervision.

I am so glad that the God of the seven stars is also the God of Orion! It was out of Dante's suffering camo the sublime "Divine Commedia," and out of John Milton's blindness came the "Paradise Lost," and out of miserable infidel attack came the "Bridgewater Treatise" in favor of Christianity, and out of David's exile came the songs of consolation, and out of the sufferings of Christ came the possibility of the world's redemption, and out of your bereavement, your persecution, your poverties, your misfortunes may come an eternal heaven.

Oh, what a mercy it is that in the text and all up and down the Bible God induces us to look out toward other worlds! Bible astronomy, in Genesis, in Joshua, in Job, in the Psalms, in the prophets, major and minor, in St. John's Apocalypse, practically saying: "Worlds! worlds! worlds! Get ready for them!" We have a nice little world here that we stick to, as though losing that we lost all. We are afraid of falling off this little raft of earth. We are afraid that some meteoric iconoclast will some night smash it, and we want everything to revolve around it, and are disappointed when we find that it revolves around the sun instead of the sun revolving around it. What a fuss we make about this little bit of a world, its existence only a short time between two spasms, the paroxysms by which it was hurled from the chaos into order, and the paroxysm of its demolition.

And I am glad that so many texts call us to look off to other worlds, many of them larger and grander and more resplendent. "Look there," says Job, "at Mazaroth and Arcturus and his sons!" Look there," says St. John, at the moon under Christ's feet." "Look there," says Joshua, "at the sun standing still above Gideon!" "Look there," says Moses, "at the sparkling firmament!" "Look there," says Amos, the herdsman, "at the seven stars and Orion!" Do not let us be so sad about those who shove off from this world under Christly pilotage. Do not let us be so agitated about our own going off this little barge or sloop or canal boat of a world to get on some "Great Eastern" of the heavens. Do not let us persist in wanting to stay in this barn, this shed, this outhouse of the world, when all the king's palaces already occupied by many of our best friends are swinging wide open their gates to let us in.

A SOUTH PARIS (Me.) man lately observed the 52d anniversary of his first marriage and the 25th anniversary of his second marriage on the same day.

HOW ABOUT THE REVENUE?

The Reciprocity Theory of High Protection Visionaries.

"Reciprocity," says a protection organ, "is free trade in dissimilar and non-competitive products." That is, one country will admit free articles which it does not produce in consideration of the other's letting in free what the latter does not produce.

Then why was the third section of the McKinley bill called a reciprocity section? This section threatened retaliation by taxing sugar, molasses, coffee, tea and hides, unless the countries producing them let in our exports at rates which the president thought were fair.

Are sugar, molasses, coffee, tea and hides commodities which we do not produce? On the contrary, we produce sugar, molasses and hides, three out of five of them. As no retaliation was attempted against countries producing tea, we may eliminate that and say that three out of four were articles which we produce. The definition quoted shows that the so-called McKinley reciprocity, devised by Senator Aldrich, was not reciprocity at all, since it was not mainly in products which this country does not produce.

But suppose we let in free all the commodities which this country does not produce in sufficient quantity to supply the wants of the people. That lets in sugar free, both raw and refined. It lets in wool free, because we produce but little more than half the wool needed by the people. There is a variety of other articles to which the same remark will doubtless apply, but these two are imported in large quantities. None of this class of articles will yield a dollar of revenue. Of course, then, you must get all the customs revenue from articles imported that compete with our domestic products.

What is the result? Having put the noncompetitive article on the free list, you must get revenue by taxes on competitive articles. "So much the better," says the too hasty protectionist, "since we can thus tax competitive articles all the higher." But they are already taxed well-nigh up to the point where importations cease. If you put on more tax importations will be smaller, and if you go as far as the protected interests demand you will stop importations altogether and cut off all the revenue.

The notion that higher tariff means more revenue is obsolete to a large extent. Many of our tariff rates prohibit importations in any quantity worth naming. Others are very near to the point of prohibition, and another turn of the screw will make them quite so. The theory that higher rates mean more revenue applies only to noncompetitive articles, or others taxed much below the point of prohibition, and even they may be so high that the people will buy them in smaller quantities. As to articles produced at home, when the rate is already high, an increase of the tariff will be more likely to reduce revenue than to raise it. Then whence comes the revenue?—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Protection Is What They Want.

The republicans are determined upon an extra session for the purpose, they say, of perfecting a tariff measure which will increase the revenues of the United States. If this indeed be their purpose, then they cannot reenact the McKinley statute of October, 1890, because that act was called an act to reduce the revenue. The republicans will go into special session to perfect a tariff bill on the excuse of increasing the revenue, but will take no sort of means to that end. They will meet for the purpose of increasing the protection already accorded overabundantly to American manufacturers. Their policy is to make not a revenue tariff, but a tariff for protection mainly, and they are to-day, as they were when Harrison was nominated in 1888, in favor of levying prohibitive duties. Under such a tariff bill as the republicans in the extra session will pass exports will fall off and the tariff will not yield the desired revenue. There is pertinent and emphatic objection, therefore, to the republican hypocrisy involved in the statement that they desire an extra session of congress for the purpose of passing a tariff bill to increase the revenue. The party does not want a tariff for revenue, but a tariff for protection, and that is why it will have a special session of congress early in the new administration.—Chicago Chronicle.

The Ohio Shepherds.

The political shepherds from Ohio are wolves in sheep's clothing. They frankly said before the Dingley committee that the tariff they demand is intended to shut out foreign wool altogether. They admitted that their purpose is to double the price of domestic wool and give it a monopoly. They did not deny that this would greatly increase the price of warm clothing. They confessed also that their schedule is not intended to produce revenue, but rather to prevent it. This is all the public cares to know about the howl of the wolves for more "protection." If their demand shall be granted the voters will do the rest, as they did in 1890 and 1892. —N. Y. World.

Hurting Themselves.

American manufacturers are constantly complaining of their inability to compete with the manufacturers of Europe, and are demanding protective tariffs to shield them from European competition. The nations of the world accept their statements for truth, and when they have need of manufactured goods they avoid America and American manufacturers, because Americans have proclaimed to the world that they cannot make goods and sell them as cheaply as Europeans can. They do not tell the truth when they make such statements, and the American people know it, but the people of other countries do not.—Springfield (O.) Democrat.

——Trade suppression is the Dingley idea, as it was the McKinley idea. But it is not the American idea, and the American people will not be long in showing it.—N. Y. World.

THE SELECTION OF SHERMAN.

Boss Hanna's Fine Hand Again Becomes Apparent.

There is considerable criticism of Maj. McKinley's selection of Senator Sherman for the post of secretary of state. It is a well-known fact now that the selection was made solely for the purpose of making a place for Mark Hanna, who aspires to be a senator of the United States, and while it may be presumed that the president-elect feels that Mr. Sherman is in every way eligible for the position to which he will without doubt be appointed, it is still a fact that serious question is raised as to his fitness for the very delicate work he may reasonably expect to be called upon to perform. Of course, there may be a spice of partisanism in the criticism that is leveled at the proposed appointment, but it is doubtful that it can be fully accounted for in this way. The Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Republic says among other things:

"The selection of John Sherman for the secretaryship of state creates the most profound surprise in Washington, and especially among the senators who have had to do with Sherman, day in and day out, for years. It is rather ungracious to say anything regarding a man as venerable in years as Mr. Sherman, and one, too, it must be said, who has rendered such conspicuous public services. But it is a matter of common notoriety here, well known to all the senators of all political parties, that Mr. Sherman has by no means the intellectual strength he had years ago. He has been failing for two years with great rapidity. Physically he is still strong and active. Mentally he has been growing feeble for some time, and notably since the last session of congress."

It would seem, in view of this, that the exigencies of Ohio politics fall short of justifying the selection Mr. McKinley has made. There is a possibility that the real purpose of Mr. Sherman's appointment will fail, as it is far from clear at present that Mr. Hanna can succeed in his efforts to reach the senate, but the Mansfield statesman will doubtless receive the honor intended for him in spite of the miscarriage of the plans for Mr. Hanna's exaltation. If the worst shall be realized in respect to Mr. Sherman it is to be hoped that the president-elect will be found to have been more fortunate in his selections of men to fill the other important places in his official family. It was broadly hinted some months ago by an eminent republican that Maj. McKinley is a weak, an impressionable man, and if this is true, the president-elect ought to have some strong men about him. Weakness from top to bottom of the administration would prove most unfortunate.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

PRODUCTION OF WEALTH.

The Protectionist Idea of Bringing About Better Times.

"The immediate mission of the republican party," remarks a republican organ, "is to start up idle factories, to encourage investment and production, to furnish work at good wages to unemployed labor."

An excellent mission, but how is it to be achieved? Simply by the exercise of the taxing power of the government. Nothing could be easier. Taxes are to be levied on things that the people need, for the benefit of the men with factories who can convince the leaders of the party that they should be helped. By the simple process of placing a tax on articles manufactured abroad, the people are compelled to buy at home and the home manufacturer can charge the value of the article plus the tariff and thus be encouraged by huge profits to keep at work. These profits, of course, for the public welfare he will divide with the men he employs.

The production of wealth is merely a matter of putting a government's fingers into the pocket of one citizen and transferring the money there to the pocket of another. Prosperity can be made by forcing all citizens to chip in and pay for the running of a factory which another eltizen would like to run, if big enough profits are assured. Hundreds of prosperous citizens, with millions, can be pointed out who are living proofs of the effectiveness of the tariff as a promoter of prosperity. With a bounty on goods and a premium on idleness, factories will be shut down, now and then, by wicked combines, but the taxing power is unlimited and the favored manufacturer never suffers for prosperity while the substance of his fellow citizens, who must buy from him at his price, holds out. He can live in a castle, ride in a coach and have money to burn.

But if it is the mission of a party, through the control of our government's taxing power, to start factories and keep labor employed at good wages, why this indirection and the trouble and annoyance of making up discriminating duties? Why not have government factories for the unemployed?

If we must have paternalism, let us have straight, honest, up-to-date paternalism, freed from the ancient folly and wrong of monopoly privileges. Let us be rid of the tax-made millionaires and give the money to the tax-supported laborers.—St. Louis Republic.

——It is estimated that the total appropriations of the present congress will be considerably in excess of $2,000,000,000 and will overtop the highest expenditures ever voted by any previous congress by from $20,000,000 to $40,000,000. What the republican policy will be and what the republican howl for more revenue means are foreshadowed in these appropriations. The bigger the deficiency, the better the excuse to lay on the taxes for the favored bounty grabbers; the heavier the appropriations, the richer the plucking for the party jobbers.—St. Louis Republic.

HERRMANN'S GREAT TRICK.

Now that Herrmann the Great is gone, there can be no harm in explaining how his wonderful trick of catching the bullets shot at him by six national guardsmen was done.

On both occasions the famous prestidigitateur stood alone upon the stage, while six picked marksmen from the state national guard fired point blank upon him from a platform built in the audience. On both occasions Herrmann, pale of face and painfully alert, caught the bullets previously marked by a committee of noted army men, and handed them back hot from the barrels for identification.

Of course, it was a trick, but it was a dangerous trick, and one that Herrmann disliked to do. But even he was less nervous than the marksmen, who, acting in perfect good faith, feared that they might kill the plucky magician.

Many have been the alleged explanations of this trick published in various newspapers. They have all been wrong. Herrmann himself told the Herald how it was done, and here it is:

Of course, there was an accomplice, and this accomplice was not one of the marksmen, but the sergeant in charge of them. This sergeant took the six regulation army bullet cartridges on a silver platter to the committee.

The committee examined them, made sure they were genuine, marked them plainly and replaced them on the platter. The sergeant instantly raised the platter in plain sight at arm's length above his head, walked over to the marksmen, and they themselves each took a cartridge, examined it and placed it in the rifle. Then came the shooting.

The trick lay in the platter, which had a false bottom. Under this bottom lay six other cartridges, identical in size, weight and appearance, but holding bullets made of a composition of plumbago and mercury. When the sergeant held the platter aloft he touched a spring, and by a clever mechanism these six "fake" cartridges jumped into the platter, while the genuine cartridge disappeared beneath the false bottom.

So it was the composition cartridges that the marksmen unknowingly put into their rifles, and on firing this composition was instantly melted by friction through the barrels and dissipated in the air.

Meantime, however, the supposedly empty platter was taken behind the wings, where the genuine cartridges were drawn out, quickly heated and carefully placed by an attendant on a table, where Herrmann, just before the firing, carelessly picked them up and palmed them. Holding them in his hands during the firing, he immediately produced them as the smoke cleared.

A simple trick, but a very dangerous one, for if the platter's mechanism failed to work completely, one or more of the genuine cartridges might have got into the rifles of the marksmen and thence into Herrmann's body.—N. Y. Herald.

As the man did so he gave him a tremendous kick behind.

"Begorra I did feel it, sure enough."

"Well," said the priest, "it would be a miracle if you didn't."—Boston Pilot.

STACKING FODDER.

An Ohio Farmer Describes an Apparently Excellent Method.

My way of stacking fodder is as follows: I begin the stack the same as a shock, that is, by standing bundles almost perpendicularly on the ground, butts down and tops pressed together. I continue in this way, pinching the bundles close together, until the shock, or prospective stack, is about 12 feet in diameter at the base (ground). This usually requires 50 or 60 bundles.

Next, instead of getting up on this shock, or stack bottom, and having some one pitch the bundles to me, while I lay them down horizontally, as is usually done, I remain on the ground, and continue there till the last bundle is placed, when a ladder is leaned against the stack and the top tied.

I begin the topping-out process by grasping a bundle with both hands and lifting it say three feet from the ground, laying, or more properly, speaking, standing it on one of the bundles of the last or outside course of shock or stack bottom. I continue in this way, walking around the stack and placing bundles "side by side," until I come around to the starting place. This completes the first elevated course. The butts of this course being about three feet from the ground, brings them to a point about where the bundles underneath are tied. See cut.

The bundles for the next or second elevated course are placed in order by means of a two-tined pitchfork. The butts of this course are about six feet from the ground, and like the butts of the first elevated course, come to about the middle of the bundles underneath.

The butts of the third or last course, consisting of say eight or ten bundles, are placed about nine feet from the ground. This makes a stack about 14 feet in height.

When the last course is placed in order the top of the stack is securely tied in two places—one within a foot or two of the extreme top, and the other around the butts of the top course.

Two men are not required to put up this kind of a stack. I built ten such stacks this year myself without any assistance. One man says he puts about 600 bundles in a stack. I put only about 120.

In stacking in this way there are no bundles lying down with butts sticking outward, as in stacks as usually built. They all stand up in an almost perpendicular form—butts down, tops up. The bundles having so much "pitch" they shed the water perfectly.

In feeding from such a stack I begin with the ground course, as the bundles may be easily pulled out. The top bundles remain untouched till the last, thus leaving no part of the stack exposed to the weather.

I adopted this plan three or four years ago and like it quite well. Its advantages are: (1) The bundles having so much pitch they shed the water completely. (2) In feeding therefrom the bottom bundles are fed first and the top left to protect the stack till the last. (3) One man can take the bundles from the wagon and construct such a stack without assistance.—Frank Leslie, in Ohio Farmer.

A Dakota Farmer's Remedy.

Frank Withee, a Yankton county (S. D.) farmer, after losing 160 out of 200 hogs, has succeeded in stopping the ravages of the lung trouble in his flock by a remedy of his own invention. When his hogs began dying at the rate of half a dozen a day he piled their carcasses in heaps and set fire to them. When only blackened and charred remains were left he fed the remnants to his hogs, with the above result. The disease is still raging in the neighborhood, and in some instances 15 hogs have died in one day in one pen.—Farmer's Voice.

PROTECTING QUEENS.

How to Rescue Them in Case They Should Be "Balled."

When a queen is balled you'll find a bunch of bees as large as a hickory nut or larger that seem to cling together in a very solid manner. You can't pull the bees apart, and you may roll the ball over and over.

If a strange queen is thrown into a hive she is usually balled, and, as nearly as we can make out, the process is something like this: The bees seize the queen at various points till she is entirely surrounded, then other bees seize the ones that have hold of the queen, and in this position they remain fixed for hours, until the queen is dead.

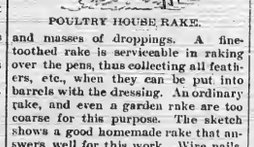
If a strange worker is thrown into the hive she isn't treated the same as a queen, and nothing but a queen is ever balled. The worker may be bitten or stung, but never balled.

The balling bees generally make a hissing sound, unlike the noise they make at any other time. Whether that proceeds from anger or what, we do not know.

Sometimes bees will ball their own queen, usually for the sake of protecting her. In the middle of a ball of her own bees, it certainly seems she ought to be safe from foes. You cannot pull the bees apart so as to free the queen, and if you should succeed in getting some of the bees away, or should manage to get the queen loose, the bees will immediately seize her again. Perhaps the quickest way to get the queen free is to throw the ball into cold water. The little miscreants will scramble to get out of the water as lively as they can, and at once seem to forget all about the queen, leaving her to her own fate.

Water is not always at hand, and you can blow smoke upon the ball. If you blow hot smoke upon them, as usually you will if you hold the nozzle close enough, you will at once seal the queen's doom, for the bees will promptly sting her; but if you hold the smoke at a distance and keep up a strong stream of cool smoke the bees will soon conclude they want to find some place with a purer atmosphere. — Southern Cultivator.

INEXCUSABLE WASTE.



Why Some Poultry Men Do Not Make Their Business Pay.

One cannot fully realize the extent of loss entailed upon those making any sort of pretense to poultry raising, until the various grades of it are examined in the great markets and a selection is made of that which is desirable to suit a reasonably well cultivated taste. Here is where the critical test is made of the sort of care the poultry has received from time of incubation until properly dressed and packed ready for shipment to the central market, as well as the profit which is to be realized or the loss sustained by the systematic or careless producers. Packages stand side by side in every commission house in Chicago, amounting to thousands of tons per annum, of poultry of all grades of quality, invoking the discriminating prices which rendered unto the indifferent poultry raiser that which belong to the slothful, and unto the systematic the profits which belong to the industrious; some shippers obtaining four or five cents per pound while others obtain ten to 15 cents, and actually the higher priced product is more satisfactory to the consumer than the cheaper stuff. Some of the poultry is plump, white and nicely dressed, while much of it is thin, dark colored and repulsive to look upon. The surprising thing is that the shippers of this poor stuff are offended because they fail to receive the highest quotations in return for their shipments. There is room for a tremendous amount of improvement in the raising and handling of poultry. The farmers need a good deal of education upon this subject to enable them to do their best.—Farmers Union.

POULTRY HOUSE RAKE.

Homemade Contrivance That Answers Well for Its Purpose.

The winter poultry quarters should have four or five inches of loam or road dust on the floor for the fowls to scratch in and dust themselves in, but this soon becomes covered with feathers and masses of droppings. A fine-toothed rake is serviceable in raking over the pens, thus collecting all feathers, etc., when they can be put into barrels with the dressing. An ordinary rake, and even a garden rake are too coarse for this purpose. The sketch shows a good homemade rake that answers well for this work. Wire nails, driven very close together, form the teeth. A strip of hard wood should be used for the head, while an old hay-rake handle can be pressed into service for the handle.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Europe's Egg Consumption.

A Parisian scientist asserts that he has computed trustworthy statistics concerning the number of eggs annually consumed by the nations of Europe. According to his tables the greatest egg-eating countries are England and Germany. In 1895 England imported 1,250,000,000 eggs, for which was paid about $20,000,000. The eggs came principally from France. During the same year Germany imported 20,000,000 pounds of eggs, also representing about $20,000,000. Most of these eggs came from Russia and Austrin-Hungary. Of all European countries Russia has made the greatest advance in exportation. In 1890 she exported only 11,000,000, but in 1895 the number rose to 1,250,000,000, representing a value of $10,200,000. A significant fact in connection with these statistics is that in those countries which are the greatest exporters of eggs the omelet is the favorite dish.

SUITABLE STREET GOWNS.

Costumes for the Winter Season Approved by Dame Fashion.

The gowns which most interest our readers at present are those designed for the street, traveling and for general wear, and are made with less fullness and weight than heretofore. The skirts are made up with five, six or seven gores, depending upon the width of the material, which governs economy in cutting. The seven-gored skirt is rather the favorite, and is used when the material warrants it. The back is plaited or gathered, and the space at the top containing the fullness is very narrow. Some of the skirts that are plaited in the back are laid in tiny side-plaits, while others have three box-plaits graduated to a narrow space at the top, the outer plaits overlapping the inner ones. Street skirts are made from 4¼ to 4½ yards in width, and all fit closely across the front and hips, with an easy hang across the front and sides at the bottom. All the fullness is worked toward the back breadths, which are cut with a bias seam directly in the back, to give the standing-out effect so much desired. Many dressmakers are wiring the tops of their skirts in the lining across the back, to give a slight bustle effect. A small pad directly under the dress-band in the back which fills in a hollow found in most figures is an addition to all gowns, and the weight is really less felt.

The drop-skirt is much used, and is economical where one wishes to use the same lining for several skirts. The lining, which is usually of silk, is cut and fit precisely like the outside, and can be hung from separate bands or attached to the same belt. If worn with one skirt alone, hang them from the same band and catch all the seams once lightly together up a distance of 20 inches from the bottom.

Sleeves were never more varied in style or more becoming to the figure than the sleeve of to-day, which makes the hug or much exaggerated sleeve-covering of a short year ago look indeed like a burlesque. The prevailing sleeves are fitted as snugly as is comfortable, from the wrist to a considerable distance above the elbow, above which we find puffs, frills or draped fullness, which may be tucked, shirred or plaited, but no fullness is carried on the under part of the sleeve. The very small leg-o'-mutton sleeve still finds favor, especially on gowns of quite heavy material. While many of the sleeves show a trimmed top—that is, the fullness trimmed with bands, straps or galloons—the best style street gowns show sleeves of comparative plainness, and must fit to perfection. Skirts for the street show a variety of foot trimming, though the elegance of the plainly finished skirt still holds its own in the handsomer and heavy weight materials.—Woman's Home Companion.

CALLS HIMSELF "PROFESSOR."

The Man with the Striped Shirt Was Appalled.

The train was about to leave the station, and a young man leaned over the seat, shook hands with the middle-aged gentleman, and said:

"Good-by, professor."

A man with wide stripes in his shirt bosom looked at him narrowly, and after the train started said:

"Kin you do any tricks with cards?"

"No; I never touch a card."

"Mebbe ye play the pianny?"

"I know nothing of music, except as a mathematical science."

"Well, ye ain't no boxer. I kin see by yer build. Mebbe ye play pool?"

"No."

"Er shuffleboard?"

"I never heard of the game before."

"Well, say, I've guessed ye this time. It's funny I didn't think of it before. You're a mesmerist?"

"I'm nothing of the kind."

"Well, I'll give up. What is yer line? I know ye're in the biz, 'cause I heerd that young feller call ye 'perfesser.'"

"I am an instructor in Greek, rhetoric and ancient history."

"Of course not."

"An' he calls hisself perfesser," he said, to himself. "Don't know how ter do anything but talk Greek 'n' things, an' calls himself perfesser. Talk about nerve!"—Philadelphia Record.

Artlets.

Make a rich paste with the white of one and the yolks of two eggs, four ounces of sugar, six ounces of butter, a pinch of salt, a pound of flour and just enough water to make it of the right stiffness for working; work it lightly, roll it out to the thickness of a quarter of an inch, line some patty-pans with it, fill them with uncooked rice and bake them in a moderate oven until done. Use strawberries, cherries, peaches or other canned fruit to fill them, after removing the rice; add more sugar if necessary, put them in the oven to get quite hot, and serve, or they may be allowed to get quite cold before serving.—Leisure Hours.

Almond Cakes.

One pound of sifted flour, half a pound of butter, three-quarters of a pound of sugar, two eggs, half a teaspoonful each of essence of lemon and of bitter almonds, two teaspoonfuls of ground ginger, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, four ounces of almonds, blanched and chopped very small, two ounces of mixed candied peel, also very finely chopped. Mix all the dry ingredients together, then rub in the butter; add eggs and essences last of all. Mix to a smooth paste, and roll out on a floured board to half-inch thickness; cut in round or fancy shapes, and bake on a dry tin in a slow oven.—Ladies' Home Journal.

MUSIC IN NERVOUS DISORDERS.

The value of music in the treatment of certain forms of nervous diseases has before now been called attention to by physicians. One advantage perhaps of this therapeutical agency is that in the event of its doing no good it is not likely to do harm. In a recent number of the Gazette Medicale attention was drawn to the remarkable result attending the administration of music to a little girl of three, who was afflicted with serious nervous disorders, resulting in epilepsy and paroxysms of fear, which kept her awake all night. The ordinary remedies, including bromide of potassium, were tried without any effect, and at last the physician recommended the mother to play some soft, rather melancholy music to her daughter before putting her to bed. Chopin was recommended, especially the waltzes in the minor key. The remedy worked like a charm, for it is said that from the night the child went to bed under the influence of music she lost all her nervous symptoms and slept without waking until the morning. In order to prove that this was not the result of mere chance, the music was omitted on one evening, and the child passed a night of misery, not so intense as before the adoption of the treatment, but still very marked.

NOT DUE TO HER SERIOUS TALK.

Mother Permitted a Spanking to Exert Its Persuasive Powers.

"Did you notice," asked the girl with the saintly expression of the girl with the laughing eyes, "how beautifully Tommy Jackson behaved in church today?"

The girl with the laughing eyes nodded silently, and the girl with the saintly expression went on dreamily:

"I think that I must have managed to touch his stony little heart at last," she said, thankfully, "but it has been a hard struggle. I talked to him seriously on Saturday when I was calling on my Sunday school pupils, and his mother seemed much interested. She said she had punished him severely only the Sunday before last, and see how shamefully he behaved last week. While yesterday—"

"She punished him, too," interrupted the girl with the laughing eyes, merrily, "only she reversed her usual order of proceedings. Generally she spanks him after she comes home from church, and he forgets all about it before the next Sunday comes around. But yesterday she had a brilliant idea and today she spanked him before setting out."

"O," said the girl with the saintly face, and there really didn't seem anything else to say.

REASONS FOR USING

Walter Baker & Co.'s Breakfast Cocoa.

1. Because it is absolutely pure.
2. Because it is not made by the so-called Dutch Process in which chemicals are used.
3. Because beans of the finest quality are used.
4. Because it is made by a method which preserves unimpaired the exquisite natural flavor and odor of the beans.
5. Because it is the most economical, costing less than one cent a cup.

Be sure that you get the genuine article made by WALTER BAKER & CO. Ltd., Dorchester, Mass. Established 1780.

"Out of the frying-pan into the fire." Take care that you don't go that way, when you try to make your washing easier. Better be sure of what you're doing.

Get Pearline, the original washing-compound, the best-known, the fully-proved. There are plenty of imitations of it. But even if they're not dangerous—and some are—they're not economical.

Pearline used properly, goes farther, does more work, and saves more wear, than anything else that's safe to use. 626

Thought and study are harder work for some men than manual labor, but it pays to think and plan. If farmers would study management more they would not need to economize so much; if they would be more liberal in improving their stock and farms they would make dollars where rigid economy saves cents.—Farmers Home Journal.

POLITICAL.

The indifference displayed by the people in selecting candidates for office and the recklessness with which they vote and labor for their election should preclude them from condemning their servants for inefficiency and incompetency. After all it is the people who are to blame for the incompetent lawmakers that break into our legislative halls. Through personal friendship they will vote for a numbskull and then expect him to be transformed by some mysterious power into an intelligent lawmaker.

Competency and integrity should be the principal requirements in a candidate and the man who do not combine these two qualifications has no claims to the suffrage of any community. It has become too much a custom for communities to discharge a debt of gratitude, local in character and often purely personal, by electing their hero to a state office where his incompetency frequently works irreparable damage. It would be far better to remunerate him with a money consideration raised by a subscription and let him remain at home, reserving the honors of office for those who are able to discharge its duties. —Commonwealth.

The Indianapolis Sun, a red-hot gold standard sheet, supported Maj. McKinley for President. In its issue of last Sunday, under the caption "Broken Faith," the Sun sends out a mournful wail of the situation. It says in part: Immediately following election day there was a spasm of enthusiasm that found vent to the benefit of the people. Many of the idle factories began to resound with the whirl of machinery, the noise of hammers and the tramp of workingmen. Retail dealers took heart and began to reach out. It all lasted about three weeks. The manufacturers and railroad men have their faith. The dispatches from New York and other places indicate the number of men out of work was never greater, and that railroads are reducing their force of employes to the extent of hundreds; many of the factories that are in operation—owned and controlled, too, by the very men who promised work and wages without stint—have cut the pay of their men, fifteen and even a greater per cent. The condition at present is deplorable. It is even worse than 1893. These are cold, hard, undeniable facts. The Sun regrets that it is compelled to publish them, but truth must prevail."

Chairman Johnson, of the Democratic State Central Committee, has issued the following circular letter, dated Lexington, Ky., Jan. 21, 1897, to the Democratic County and Legislative District Committee.

The resolution passed by the State Central Committee indicated a custom as old as the party, but it was not promulgated as a rule or as an absolute standard to govern you in your local affairs. Conditions are now exceptional and require different methods of treatment in different localities.

You are expected to study the situation and do what is wise and best to unify and strengthen the Democratic party in your district. It is the privilege and responsibility of county committees to do this, and you who achieve the best results consistent with the principles and purposes of our party, will furnish the best indications of the line of action that ought to be pursued by the Central and Executive Committees when they meet to deal with matters pertaining to State campaigns.

I will be glad to advise with you as to questions about which you may be in doubt, and will co-operate to make your committees representative of the energy, courage and intelligence of your people, but you must understand that you are responsible for the management of party affairs within your jurisdiction, and that success is one of the most convincing evidences of merit. Respectfully,

P. P. JOHNSON
Chm. Dem. S. Cen. and Ex. Coms.

P. S.—Chairman will please have the foregoing communication read to their respective committees the earliest opportunity. P. P. J.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch says if Virginia is to be called the Mother of Presidents, Kentucky may as well be called the Mother of Governors.

Ever since the early days of the century Kentucky has not only kept her own list as Statesmen full, but has supplied several other States with officials and representatives in both branches in Congress.

She even went so far as to furnish a vice President for the United States four years ago in the person of Adla E. Stevenson, after lending him to Illinois a while.

She then furnished the two men, John M. Palmer and Shelby M. Cullum, who now represent the State of Ilinois in the United States Senate, besides our own Senator Vest.

In like manner the Bluegrass State has gone on in an unpretentious manner furnishing statesmen for other States of nearly a century and of the twenty-nine Governors of Missouri, all except two or three were natives of Kentucky.

For example every Governor since Charles H. Hardin, elected in 1874, was a Kentuckian, with the exception of Albert P. Morehouse, who finished the unexpired term of Gov. Marmaduke, elected in 1884, who died in office.

Kentucky became a State in 1792 and had been a member of the Union 28 years when Missouri was admitted August 10, 1821.

It was at the home of such sturdy pioneers as Daniel Boone, and when the "Great West," as the country on the shady side of the Mississippi river was then called, commenced to open up after the Louisiana purchase in 1803, Boone and many others, filled with a spirit of adventure, crossed the river and became settlers in the territory now known as Missouri.

These men and those who followed them became the ruling spirits in the new country they had helped to develop, and many of them were honored with positions of responsibility.

No more winter after this "spell" if the ground theory is correct.

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

[News]

Reynard led a pack of hounds through several of the streets of Owenton the other day.

W. H. Rankin says the cold snap has not affected the peach crop. The buds on the Kentucky river peach farm being very healthful.

The plug horse buyer bought 9 head Monday, ranging from 50c to $1 per head. He remained over Monday night and some parties nipped two of them.

The Board of Supervisors finished their work last Saturday. The work consisted mostly in placing values up to where they were last year, the assessment having fallen quite a little below.

The Farmers Supply, Co., one of the largest General Merchandise establishments in Owenton made an assignment last Thursday. It was quite a surprise to the people of the town and county, as it was looked upon as being one of the thriftiest firms in the country.

[Herald]

The contemplated infirmary scheme has about fallen through, as the turnpike purchase is as much debt as the county can manage. John Vest has made a proposition to care for the paupers at the rate of $1.35 each per week.

The weather was too cold for much of a crowd to be in town Monday, consequently business was rather dull, Joe Finley bought at Walter Brown's stable 5 horses and five mules, paying for the horses from $35 to $55, and for the mules from $25 to $75. He also bought some horses and mules at Headley Brown's stable, paying about the same prices. Cal Bruner bought some mules. The soap grease man quoted carcasses at from 50 to 74 cents. The blind tigers were well patronized.

There are several large sales of personal property advertised for this month.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1897. NO. 16.

THE McKINLEY cabinet will be composed largely of lesser Republican lights.

HON. E. E. SETTLE delighted the people of Owenton with his lecture, "Will it Last?"

WHEN the date line is filled Gov. Bradley's call for an extra session of the legislature is ready for promulgation.

MR. HANNA'S attack of insomnia has grown worse since Asa Jones' Senatorial boom has been launched in Ohio.

THE penal and charitable institutions are causing the Republican administration in this State a great deal of trouble.

IT appears that in so far as Gov. Bushnell is concerned Mr. Hanna can accept a position in McKinley's cabinet or stay at Canton.

THE Grand Jury says that the Louisville city government is honey-combed with corruption. It did not take the Republicans long to do the work.

THE latest from Gov. Bradley on the question of a special session of the legislature is to the effect that he has not decided on a date upon which to convene the law-makers.

MAJOR MCKINLEY'S protest against the expending of $50,000 on his inauguration comes rather late. The uses to which he recommends the money put are certainly deserving, and he should not have waited until this late day to point them out.

THE Kansas legislature has before it the following bills: to send inebriates to the gold cure at the expense of the county; to stop any train at any station where any passenger desires to get off; to force corporations to completely disclose their business and to surrender to the municipality all profits over six per cent. These breezy people are getting desperate.

The silver Republican Senators who went over to the Popocrats are the victims of ingratitude. As they come up for re-election before Popocratic Legislatures they are set aside.—Louisville Commercial.

AND the Republicans would treat the bolting Democrats exactly the same way under similar circumstances.

Indiana has been shamefully gerrymandered by the Democrats for years. So has Kentucky, as Gov. Bradley pointed out in his message. These gerrymanders will be replaced by honest apportionments as soon as possible.—Louisville Commercial.

IF present conditions are not changed the honest apportionment will never be made.

IT is said that Lyman J. Gage will resign a salary of $25,000 a year to become Secretary of the Treasury at a salary of $8,000 a year, and yet it is claimed that he is a very fine business man, but the proof appears to be quite to the contrary. It may be that Mr. Gage accepts the $8,000 position and is willing to take the chances of circumstances, whereby he will be enabled to make up the difference, presenting themselves.

ONE of the candidates for the Democratic nomination for Clerk of the Grant County Court, hoped to clinch his victory by offering, in the event that he was successful, to donate to the county each year during his incumbency, a certain per cent. of the fees of the office. This attempt to bribe the voters was severely rebuked at the primary, and the candidate making the above mentioned offer received only twenty votes in the entire county.

Let us have harmony by all means; but not for office and office only. The voters will have none of that sort of harmony. The day of the noisy demagogue with his selfish self-assertion and his impudent claims is ended for a little while at least. The people want and will have fair, open dealing, no tricks and no lies, done in secret and artfully planned to deceive. That old trick will no longer catch anybody. —Courier Journal.

The C.-J. has discovered that its old tricks will no longer catch anybody, and that "the people will have fair, open dealings." Therefore it will have to change its programme again, and is already crying for harmony, but nobody will respect any proposition it may make along that line.

In this issue John Maurice Lassing is announced as a Democratic candidate for renomination and election to the office of County Attorney. He is a son of Dr. H. C. Lassing, who resides near Union, and who was married to Miss Annie Coleman, of St Louis county, Missouri, in 1863. To this union six children have been born, John M. being the oldest, his birth place being Elm Tree Place, near Union, this county, the residence of his grandfather, the late Morris Lassing.

Mr. Lassing's education was begun at White Haven, when that institution was enjoying its palmiest days. From White Haven he went to Center College at Richmond, this State, where he graduated with the highest honors, in 1886. Having completed his education he began teaching school, and while teaching in Morgan Academy he was made Assistant Cashier of the Boone County Deposit Bank, Dr. J. G. Furnish being Cashier at the time. Previous to this time, however, he had begun reading law under F. Riddell. In 1887 he organized and put in operation the Bank of Petersburg.

In the fall of 1888 he entered the Cincinnati Law School, and by taking a two years' course in one, he graduated in June, 1889, being seventh in a class of ninety-four students. July 4, 1889, he located in Burlington to practice his chosen profession, and was soon controlling a good practice which he now holds.

October 21, 1891, he was married to Miss May Lillard Brady, youngest daughter of R. A. Brady, and to them have been born two bright, handsome boys—Charles Warren, aged 4 years, and Robert Brady, aged 2 years. His is, indeed, a happy family.

Law and politics are companions and in 1891 Mr. Lassing was elected County Attorney without opposition, which being the first term under the new constitution, was limited to three years. He has made a faithful and able official and has looked closely after the county's interests in minor as well as in larger affairs, and in the matter of delinquent taxes alone the county has realized from his services enough to nearly pay his salary for the two years he has held the office. His interests are thoroughly identified with the county, and if elected to a long term of office he will continue a deserving public servant.

C. C. ROBERTS' announcement as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for County Judge appears in the proper column. Mr. Roberts needs no introduction to the voters, neither does his democracy need any testimonials. He has made a splendid Sheriff, being accurate and prompt in the discharge of his official duties, and if elected County Judge, he will fill the position with fidelity and honor to his constituents and credit to himself.

THE third act in the election of Major McKinley to the presidency of the United States will be performed to day when the electoral votes, as cast by the several States, will be counted in the United States Senate, after which he will be, authoritatively, declared elected President. On the fourth of next month the Major will be inaugurated, and then the fun will begin.

IN this issue Mr. J. W. Duncan is announced as a candidate for renomination and election to the office of Circuit Clerk. Mr. Duncan has had long experience in the office, is a clever gentleman and a good Democrat. If the office is given to him again he will continue to discharge the duties thereof with the same zeal and alility as he has done in the past.

THE prospects for a big river are now good, The ice is all out except an occasional straggling flow. The steamboat interests have been favored for a year now.

Some political architect must have made a mistake in estimating the tensile strength of Bushnell's backbone.—Enquirer.

Chauncey Depew says positively that better times are coming. Probably he is learning a new story.—Chicago Times-Herald.

It looks as if Mr. Hanna had paid a pretty stiff price for the squelching of the Alger Presidential boom.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Up to the present time Governor Bushnell has not seen fit to respond to Mark Hanna's "Come and Play With Me."—Washington Post.

Up to the present time Matthew Stanley Quay has not engaged a pew in that church John Wanamaker is to build.—N. Y. Journal.

Then, too, it is more or less saddening that Hanna should have to do battle for the wearing of John Sherman's cast off.—Philadelphia Call.

If Lyman J. Gage does believe in Spiritualism he should not be shaken by the "Cabinet trick" played on John Sherman.—St. Louis Republic.

Mark Hanna carried the county early, but as yet he hasn't succeeded in carrying Bushnell for that senatorial appointment.—Akron Ohio Democrat.

No one would have suspected that it is more difficult to make a United States Senator than it is to make a President.—Philadelphia North American.

Of course, it will require some time for Secretary Sherman and Secretary Alger to acquire the habit of looking pleasant at each other.—Washington Post.

Of course, John Sherman doesn't object to Alger. People will buy his book now just to see what one high Republican official thinks of another.—Chicago Dispatch.

Major McKinley is somewhat hampered in making his Cabinet selections by the fact that wealth and statesmanship are not always concomitants.—St. Louis Republic.

Senator Sherman is certainly no more lacking in fitness for the Secretaryship of State than Hanna is in fitness for the Senatorship. The exchange seems fair.—St. Louis Republic.

Mr. Peffer's defeat is said to be a severe blow on him. But a man with such a profusion of whiskers as Peffer has ought not to complain of the severity of the blow.—N. Y. Journal.

After a long period of watching, waiting and hoping, Hon. Russell A. Alger has finally succeeded in securing something that several Republican statesmen didn't want.—N. Y. Journal.

Mark Hanna has not been able to make up his mind as to just what the Governor of Ohio is the advance agent of but, at the same time, he suspects it is something warm.—Washington Post.

Nobody can say that Hon. H. Clay Evans ever declared that he would not accept a Cabinet portfolio. Why, he would take a place as lawn-mower if he couldn't get anything else.—Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

About three-fourths of the members of Louisville's reform administration have been indicted for various offenses. Reform in Louisville is about the same as in several other communities that might be named.—N. Y. Journal.

One of Joseph Benson Foraker's most widely quoted post-election utterances was "Prosperity will come in 20 minutes after McKinley's election." This leads us to believe that Foraker carries a dumb watch. —Omaha World-Herald.

The big three—Hanna, Sherman and McKinley—thought they could mold to their hearts' desire the piece of putty in the Governor's chair. But they had not counted on the cold weather which hardens even putty.—Zanesville Signal.

Secretary Olney says he believes Spain desires to "do what she thinks is right." But the trouble with Spain is that her views of what is right conflict with all established rules of justice, propriety and decency.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Date of Primary Election Changed to June 5, 1897.

Pursuant to the call of the Chairman of the county Democratic Executive committee, the committee met in D. E. Castleman's law office in Burlington, last Monday afternoon. The following members were present: D. E. Castleman, chairman; B. L. Rice, Secretary, P. E. Cason, proxy for Elijah Parker; Reuben Conner, Richard Stephens, Robt. McGlasson, Geo. Ossman, proxy for J. C. Hughes.

The chairman stated the object of the meeting to be for the purpose of considering the propriety of changing the date of the primary election as fixed at the last meeting. A motion to reconsider the action of the committee on the second Monday in December was made and carried, and the order made on that date is now held for naught.

It was agreed by the committee to hold a primary election to nominate candidates for the various county offices to be filled at the regular election in November, 1897. It was further agreed that said primary election be held on the first Saturday in June, 1897, and the Executive Committee will meet in the Court-house in Burlington, at 2 o'clock p. m., on Monday, June 7th, 1897, and count the votes cast for each candidate for the respective offices, and the candidate receiving the highest number of votes cast for any office will be declared the Democratic nominee for that office.

The committee adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That all persons who voted for Bryan and Sewall at the last November election, and all persons who did not vote but would have voted for Bryan and Sewall had they voted, and all young men who will be legal voters at the next November election, and will pledge themselves to support the Democratic party and the nominees of said primary election, shall be allowed to vote.

Resolved, That all persons who desire to be candidates before said primary election shall, on or before the 5th day of April, 1897, record their names with the chairman of the county committee, and pay their assessments to him.

Resolved, That only such candidates who pay their assessments to defray the expenses of said primary election, on or before the fifth day of April, 1897, shall be entitled to have their name placed upon the ballots to be voted for.

Resolved, That all candidates for precinct offices and for Coroner who wish their names to appear upon the ballots for said primary, shall pay to the chairman of the county committee one dollar, to help pay the expenses of said primary election.

The chairman and secretary were authorized to assess the candidates to defray the expenses of the primary election.

PERHAPS the most remarkable art exhibit in the world is that of the lunatics in Ville-Evrand asylum in Paris. Most of the patients in the asylum have been painters or designers, and the physicians in charge inaugurated a "salon" of their work. The effect on the minds of the patients is said to be excellent.

IT has been a source of interest and wonder to Arctic explorers to find such quantities of singing birds within the Arctic circle. They are abundant beyond belief. But the immense crops of cranberries, crowberries and cloudberries that ripen in the northern swamps account for the presence of the birds.

MRS. MARIA LLOYD STEELE, who died the other day in Annapolis, Md., in her 92d year, was a daughter of Francis Scott Key, the author of "The Star-Spangled Banner." She was born in the old Key homestead at Blenheim, formerly Bladensburg. She was a descendant of Gov. Lloyd, of Maryland, and a niece of Chief Justice Taney.

NOTHING can exceed the power of the voice of a perfect orator. Edward Everett, whose own utterance was such an entrancing spell, declared that Webster's voice was the most melodious that ever issued from human lips. Henry Clay's voice was called a band of music. Beecher's voice was a trumpet or a lute at will. George William Curtis' voice was "a harp of a thousand strings."

STAGES propelled by motors are soon to be introduced on Fifth avenue, New York. The stages are now drawn by horses, which seem out of place in these piping days of rapid transit. The directors of the Fifth Avenue Stage company, therefore, have concluded to experiment with motors, and if the scheme works well they will equip the 50 stages of the company in that way.

A SEMI-OFFICIAL notification has been issued by the prince of Wales, recommending that the schemes on the part of the people destined to celebrate in a fitting manner the sixtieth anniversary of the queen's accession to the throne should take the form of "works of mercy among the sick and suffering and of enterprises that may tend to brighten and ameliorate the condition of the poorer subjects of her majesty."

THERE is a hamlet in Hancock county, Maine, known as Green Lake, but it was never known that it got this appellation from its great wealth in frogs. The Ellsworth Enterprise, however, reports that Mr. Laban Franklin had occasion to put a lump of lime into his spring a few days ago, then in a few days cleaned it out. In doing so he found 350 frogs, most of them dead, evidently killed by the lime. He continued his search, and, taking the wall down, found 25 to 30 more.

THE big ocean greyhounds will soon be equipped with lifeboats harnessed to balloons, so as to be practically unsinkable. Cylinders filled with compressed gas will be placed in compartments of the lifeboats, and from these the balloon, which will be harnessed with cords to a hollow mast connected with the cylinders, is inflated. The mast, which is iron tubing, is adjustable. The combination boat will doubtless prove of the greatest service in saving people far out at sea.

MANY people have a genuine curiosity to know if they would be seasick in case they should take an ocean voyage. An easy way to put the matter to a test is to stand before the ordinary mirror that turns in its frame, and let some one move it slowly and slightly at first, and gradually growing faster while you look fixedly at your own reflection. If you feel no effect whatever from it the chances are that you can stand an ordinary sea voyage without any qualm.

THE Engineering and Mining Journal, an excellent authority, makes the world's output of gold during the year 1896 $218,500,000, against $201,105,000 in 1895. Other experts predict that when actual returns have been received the output of 1896 will reach $220,000,000. The United States is at the head of the list of gold producers, with $57,000,000, or a little over $10,000,000 more than in 1895. Africa comes next, with a small increase. The bulk of the increase is in the United States.

IN Dantzic alone during last year nearly one hundred tons of amber were turned to the smoker's purpose in pipes and cigarette holders. This, of course, is amber of the familiar yellow variety. Sicilian amber, on the other hand, shows a wonderful variety of tints, from ruby red to turquoise blue, as may best be seen in the private collection of Arnold Bufflum, an American of fortune, who has made colored amber his hobby, has written a book about them and has recently been on a visit to London, carrying with him a number of his finest specimens.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND

Preparing to Leave the White House—Artisans, Laborers and Expressmen Without Ready at Work Preparing for the Incoming of the New Chief Magistrate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The advance signs of moving day for the distinguished tenants of the executive mansion are plainly visible now in and around the white house. Artisans of various degree within, and laborers and expressmen without, are busily at work each day in services affecting both the incoming and outgoing chief magistrates, so that immediately after the inaugural exercises on the fourth of the coming month the new president and his family will enter the corridors of the mansion refurnished, and with an interior new-like air, while the ex-president and his family will at the same time speed swiftly away to the historic shades of Princeton. Mrs. Cleveland is taking considerable interest in having the house in proper shape for its new mistress, which that lady will view for the first time in her additional exalted station when on the eve of inauguration day she will with President-elect McKinley, be entertained at dinner by President and Mrs. Cleveland. There will be no luncheon entertainments given by Mr. Cleveland to his successor March 4. That function will give way to the necessity of an early forming of the grand parade, at the conclusion of the official ceremonies at the capitol.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The Venezuelan copy of the boundary arbitration treaty was mailed Wednesday by Senor Andrade, and will be sent forward to Caracas, by steamer leaving New York Thursday, and due at La Guayara the 11 inst.

As the Venezuelan congress does not meet until the 20th, the treaty will reach there in ample time for considerable public discussion before ratification is possible.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—On account of the adverse action of congress, Secretary Lamont will remove his order to bring the West Point cadets to Washington for inauguration, and Secretary Herbert will not order the naval cadets away from Annapolis, although he had intended to do so.

The Bill Pensioning "Bridge Burners."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The house committee on invalid pensions Wednesday reported favorably the bill pensioning at $12 per month the surviving members and widows of members of the organization known during the late war as the "East Tennessee Bridge Burners." This was a secret military company organized in 1861 for the purpose of burning bridges to aid Gen. Thomas in occupying certain portions of Tennessee. Their undertaking was perilous, for if captured they were not treated as prisoners of war, but were summarily executed. On this account the special rating of $12 per month is regardless of length of service.

Will Not Be Recalled.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The report cabled from London that Ambassador Bayard would present his letters of recall on February 20 is clearly an error, as the state department has sent no letter of recall to Mr. Bayard, and will not do so during this administration, consequently he will have none to present. It is understood that the department of state has uniformly declined to grant even any leaves of absence to any diplomatic and consular officers for the past and current month, so that when the administration changes on March 4 all officials will be at their posts.

FRANK BUTLER,

The Australian Murderer, Holds Quite a Levee in the San Francisco Prison.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 4.—Frank Butler, the Australian murderer, held quite a levee in the city prison Wednesday.

During the morning Mrs. Emma Butler, the Napa widow, called at the prison and after closely inspecting the prisoner, concluded he was not her recreant husband.

Butler's lawyers called on him Wednesday afternoon and had a brief consultation. The murderer told them plainly they need not expect pay for their services as he had no money. They assured their client they would do all in their power to prevent his extradition. Owing to the continuance of the proceedings before United States Commissioner Heacock, the detectives and their prisoner can not start for Australia before the middle of March.

ROBERT MARMONT,

A Professional Athlete, Falls and Breaks His Neck.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Robert Marmont, a professional athlete, met death Wednesday night while practicing in the gymnasium of the Twelfth regiment armory. Marmont, with Frank St. John, a member of company K, of the Twelfth Regiment National Guard, repaired to the armory gymnasium after supper and donned their athletic costumes. Marmont had just seized the Mexican rings and was swinging about ten feet from the floor when St. John turned to arrange his belt, and at the same moment heard a fall, and saw his companion lying on the floor on his face. An ambulance was immediately summoned, but on its arrival Marmont was dead. Later Deputy Coroner Weston made an examination of the body, and said that death was caused by a broken neck.

MARK HANNA

Will Likely Accept the Position of Postmaster General.

J. Addison Porter Accepts the Position of Private Secretary to the President-Elect—Perry S. Heath Tendered a Very Handsome Appointment.

CANTON, O., Feb. 5.—The indications now are that the political intentions of M. A. Hanna will occupy the cabinet guessers the rest of this week. It is rumored here by many of Mr. Hanna's Cleveland friends who have visited Canton withing the last 36 hours that he may decide to accept the position of postmaster general. The most generally accepted opinion is that Mr. Hanna thinks he will not be appointed to the senate by Gov. Bushnell, though the rumor that Gov. Bushnell has decided to appoint Lieut. Gov. Jones to fill the seat in the United States senate which will be vacated by John Sherman on the 4th of March, is not thought to be wholly reliable. An earnest effort on the part of loyal republicans attached to both wings of the party in Ohio is now being made to continue the harmonious relations which have existed in the state for the last year and a half and it is by no means certain that Gov. Bushnell may not at the last moment appoint Mr. Hanna to the senate, though up to this time he has in no way indicated his willingness to do so. Whether Mr. Hanna is appointed to the senate to fill Mr. Sherman's unexpired term, in the senate or not he will be a candidate for election for the regular term before the legislature which is to be elected next fall, and which meets to choose a United States senator in January next. Many of Mr. Hanna's friends want him to go into the cabinet, and Maj. McKinley has desired it ever since his election. The belief that he will be appointed postmaster general is growing hourly. Mr. Hanna will be here at 1 o'clock Friday, and will spend the night, and it is more than likely that he will come to some definite and final conclusion respecting the cabinet, though if he awaits the efforts of those who are trying to arrange matters in the interests of party peace, he may not announce his decision for two or three weeks.

The appointment and acceptance some time during the night of J. Addison Porter of the position of private secretary to the president-elect put a stop to further discussion on that subject.

Perry S. Heath, of Indiana, who was a good deal talked of in connection with the office of private secretary came here Thursday in response to a telegram from the president-elect. Mr. Heath was offered a very handsome appointment, which he has long desired, and which he accepted Thursday evening. He applied for the position which was offered him Thursday several months ago, and Maj. McKinley, who has known him for many years, and who thinks highly of him and of the work he did in the campaign, said he was glad to be able to give him the appointment he wanted. The position to which Mr. Heath has been assigned has, however, not been given out.

Mr. McKinley said Thursday night: "I have received no definite word yet from Mr. Goff."

This statement indicates that his name is still under consideration for a cabinet position.

J. Addison Porter, Maj. McKinley's private secretary, will be here Friday.

The name of Dr. Seward Webb, of Shelburn, Vt., has been presented to Maj. McKinley for consideration as a cabinet possibility and was being seriously thought of, when owing to illness in his family and business engagements, he asked Gen T. S. Peck to visit Canton and withdraw his name.

It may be set down as a settle fact that Gen. Powell Clayton, of Arkansas, will get the Mexican mission. It has been offered him and he accepted.

Private Secretary Boyle is slated for the consulship at Bradford, Eng. Col. R. M. Rownd, of Cleveland, wants to be bank examiner, and will likely get it.

The Fellow "Servant" Bill.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Feb. 5.—The Fellow "servant" bill was passed by the senate Thursday by a vote of 20 to 7. The bill will now go the governor for his signature, and it is believed that Gov. Stevens will sign the bill without delay. The bill grants the employes of railroads the right to sue for damages sustained in the discharge of their duty. The bill has been before the legislature in one form or another for over ten years.

Alabama Cotton House Fails.

SELMA, Ala., Feb. 5.—Maas & Schwentz, cotton commission merchants, and S. Maas & Co., wholesale grocers, kindred firms, made an assignment Thursday morning, naming M. S. Smith as assignee. Liabilities $300,000. The creditors are New York banks, who rediscounted paper for the defunct Commercial bank of Selma, the failure of which necessitated the assignment.

An Iowa Bank Suspends.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Bank Examiner George A. Stone, at Mt. Pleasant, Ia., has been ordered to take charge of the First National bank of Griswold, Ia., which closed its doors Wednesday. The capital of the bank is $50,000. The last report, made on December 17, its total liabilities were $80,000, and its surplus $10,000. The total assets, including bonds were given at $147,000.

Wedded at Last.

BOWLING GREEN, Ky., Feb. 5.—Mr. Albert C. Jurey, of Pewee valley, and Miss Mary Potter, of this city, but who was attending school at Pewee valley, attempted to elope from the college and get married Monday night. Teachers got on to their plans and foiled the attempt, sending the young lady to her home here. Mr. Jurey quickly followed, and pressed his suit so ardently that the old folks consented to the union for Friday afternoon. The wedding will take at Jeffersonville, Ind. The prospective groom is 20, the bride-to-be 17, and both are prominent and wealthy.

THE INTERIOR.

McKinley Wishes to Give That Portfolio to Judge McKenna—Hanna Has Not Yet Accepted the Position of Postmaster General.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 6.—To all inquiries Friday Judge Joseph McKenna frankly admitted that he would become a member of President-elect McKinley's cabinet, saying the invitation had been extended, and that he had accepted the proffered position. He still says the particular department to which he will be designated has not yet been named, and will most likely be the interior rather than the attorney generalship, yet might be either.

CANTON, O., Feb. 6.—Mark Hanna spent three hours with Maj. McKinley Friday afternoon, and then, contrary to original expectation, returned to Cleveland. Mr. Hanna said there was no warrant for the report that he had accepted the position of postmaster general. His talk with Maj. McKinley was a very pleasant one, and it is believed by the politicians here that Mr. Hanna will in the end yield to the desire of the president-elect to have him in his cabinet. There are no fresh developments in the senatorial situation, and Gov. Bushnell, who holds the key to it, remains mute respecting his intentions. He has not said he would not appoint Chairman Hanna to the senate of the United States to succeed John Sherman, and on the other hand, he has given no one the smallest reason to think he would.

JUDGE JOSEPH M'KENNA.

Louis C. Murray, of Louisville, who was here Friday, is authority for the statement that Gen. Alger told him that Col. J. J. McCook, of New York city, is a very strong cabinet possibility. The impression is that Col. McCook, who is a well-known lawyer, may be made attorney general, for the reason that his appointment would not be opposed by either wing of the republican party in New York. Judge Emory Speer, of Georgia, is also talked of as a cabinet possibility in case Gen. Goff, of West Virginia, does not accept a portfolio.

It is Maj. McKinley's wish to give the portfolio of the interior department to Judge McKenna, of California, and this will probably be done. J. Addison Porter, of Hartford, Maj. McKinley's private secretary, came to Canton Friday afternoon and will remain here till some time on Saturday. Ex-Congressman Bellamy Storer, of Cincinnati, who is an applicant for a foreign mission, was here Friday.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 6.—John K. Gowdy, chairman of the republican state committee during the last campaign, returned from Canton Friday evening and announced that he had been appointed and had accepted the post of consul general to Paris, the place now held by Samuel E. Morse, of this city. Next to the post at London it is the most lucrative position in the foreign service, and even under the recent rulings of the state department it is supposed to be worth from $5,000 to $20,000 per year.

The new consul general to Paris is a farmer about fifty-five years old, who was born and raised in Rush county, this state. He was a private soldier during the war, and has been in politics for a number of years, having served as sheriff and auditor of his county. He has been chairman of the republican state committee of Indiana since 1890.

DESPERATE FIGHTING

LONDON, Feb. 6.—A dispatch to the Central News from Athens says that desperate fighting has occurred between the Christians and Mohammedans in the island of Crete. The Mussulmans have set fire to the city of Canea and the place is now burning. The city is in a state of anarchy, and a Christian is safe nowhere. Many Christians who had locked themselves in their houses were driven out by the flames only to meet death at the hands of the Turkish soldiers, who shot them down at sight. A number of Christians have succeeded in finding refuge on the warships in the harbor, but the outlook for those still in the city is very precarious.

The situation is so critical that marines have been landed from the British and French warships to protect the consulates of their respective governments.

A later dispatch to the Central News says that Christian quarters in Canea have been almost destroyed. The various consulates are crowded with fugitives.

Banker Jack Arrested.

HOLLIDAYSBURG, Pa., Feb. 6.—Col. Wm. Jack, one of the three partners in the defunct banking house of Gardner, Morrow & Co., was arrested Friday for taking deposits after he knew that the bank was insolvent. He entered $5,000 bail for a further hearing.

Cotton Broker Suicides.

GALVESTON, Tex., Feb. 6.—Ormson Hey worth, a cotton broker, was found hanging by the neck in his office at an early hour Friday morning. Financial difficulties, caused by unfortunate speculation in cotton, is supposed to have been the cause.

DOWN ON TOBACCO NOW.

He Went Up with It. However, When the Stock Rose.

"Nicotine," said the mornlist, according to the Washington Star, "is a terrible drug."

"I sometimes think that it doesn't hurt a person who indulges in moderation," responded the Star reporter, who was smoking a cigar.

"That's the danger of it. It is the more pernicious because of its many insidious phases. If I had my way I'd abolish every leaf of tobacco from the markets. It's a constant temptation to waste, and I am thankful that I never squandered my resources in any such way."

"You never smoked?"

"Never."

"Nor chewed?"

"Certainly not."

"Nor used snuff?"

"The idea is preposterous!"

"I suppose you must have saved a great deal of money, then? These small expenses count up very rapidly. But, of course, a man must invest his money to get as comfortable an income as you appear to enjoy. A friend of mine was telling me about how you laid the foundation for your fortune. It was a small speculation, was it not?"

"Um—yes, it was."

"Would you mind telling me just how you managed it?"

"Why, you see, a friend of mine who knows all about the market gave me a tip and I bought some stock in the tobacco trust."

One of Mrs. Pinkham's Talks

Concerning a Mother's Duty to Her Young Daughter. Together with a Chat with Miss Marie Johnson.

Irregularity lays the foundation of many diseases, and is in itself symptom of disease. It is of the greatest importance that regularity be accomplished as soon as possible after the flow is an established fact.

Disturbed fluence of the menstrual function poisons the blood. In young girls suppression develops latent inherited tendencies to scrofula or consumption, and no time must be lost in restoring regularity. Many a young girl goes to her grave because this difficulty has been thought lightly of, and mother has said, "Time will bring about a cure; she is young, I don't worry about her."

Mother, when you see your daughter languid and indifferent to things that usually interest a young girl, when you note that flush on her cheek, that glassy appearance in her eyes; when your daughter tells you that even the weight of her dress waist oppresses her, and that she has terrible pains in her stomach shortly after eating, don't ignore these signs! If you do, you will be following your daughter to the grave, for she will die!

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the greatest regulator known to medicine. Make haste to use it on the first appearance of the tell-tale symptoms; it will restore all the female organs to their normal condition.

Miss Marie Johnson's letter to Mrs. Pinkham, which follows, should interest all mothers and young ladies. She says:

"My health became so poor that I had to leave school. I was tired all the time, and had dreadful pains in my side and back. I would have the headache so badly that everything would appear black before my eyes, and I could not go on with my studies. I was also troubled with irregularity of menses. I was very weak, and lost so much flesh that my friends became alarmed. My mother, who is a firm believer in your remedies from experience, thought perhaps they might benefit me, and wrote you for advice. I followed the advice you gave, and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills as you directed, and am now as well as I ever was. I have gained flesh and have a good color. I am completely cured of irregularity. Words cannot express my gratitude, and I cannot thank you enough for your kind advice and medicine."—MISS MARIE F. JOHNSON, Centralia, Pa.

This is what those important little organs, the kidneys are when healthy. In disorder they may differ in all three particulars. Disease usually destroys them successively, not simultaneously, and one may be active while the other is semi-paralyzed. MAXIMO GOMEZ

Refuses to Confer with Captain General Weyler.

The Rebel Leader Doubts the Sincerity of the Spaniards

In Their Proposed Reforms in Cuba—A Horse Under Weyler Shot by a Cuban Sharpshooter—The General Narrowly Escaped Being Shot.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—A special dispatch to the Herald from Havana, Cuba, February 6, via Key West, Fla., says:

Gen. Weyler's attempt to arrange for a secret conference with Gomez in Santa Clara over the question of the proposed Cuban reforms has proved a complete fizzle.

Gen. Gomez sent word, it is said, that he would not confer with Gen. Weyler upon any subject whatever and refused to meet him under any circumstances.

While the rebel leader doubted the sincerity of the Spanish government and declared that the proposed reforms would not be promulgated in good faith, he expressed a willingness to meet any accredited agent of the government, except Gen. Weyler, for the purpose of giving the insurgent views on the question.

The news of Gen. Gomez's refusal to treat with Gen. Weyler caused intense excitement Sunday in official and political circles.

NEW YORK Feb. 8.—A special to the New York World from Key West, Fla., says: As Gen. Weyler was marching with his columns just before entering Santa Clara his horse was shot from under him by a Cuban sharpshooter. It is supposed the shot came from a distant hillside.

Throughout the march from Rodas the captain general was assailed by missiles of this kind and several times barely escaped being wounded.

He is greatly worried over it, and large scouting parties precede the advancing Spanish columns to clear the way.

A Spanish force of 500 men was ambushed Wednesday night near Nazarene, just west of Santa Clara, where Gen. Weyler was then, and narrowly escaped annihilation.

The insurgents had mined the road and bridge over a creek, and hid on the roadsides. As the Spaniards were crossing the bridge mines were exploded killing 20 or 30 men and wounding many more. The blowing up of the bridge divided the Spanish force. The Cubans fired on those in the rear and then charged with machetes. Many Spaniards were driven into the creek where they were drowned.

The Cubans captured 50 prisoners and report over 100 Spaniards killed, drowned or wounded and missing. The Cuban loss was slight.

RAILWAY EMPLOYES

Protest Against Gov. Pingree's Two-Cent Railway Fare Bill.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 8.—The railway employes of the Chicago & West Michigan system Sunday held a mass meeting to protest against Gov. Pingree's two-cent railway fare bill. There were delegates present from every town along the line of the road, over four hundred being in attendance. A resolution was adopted declaring that the proposed law would cause the roads of the state to cut down the number of employes to curtail expenses, thereby forcing men into idleness and causing hardship and suffering to families dependent upon them for support.

Bill Prohibiting Monopolies or Trusts.

PIERRE, S. D., Feb. 8.—The senate passed the bill prohibiting the formation of monopolies or trusts within the state, or any corporation or company in this state acting as agents for trusts which limit production or fixes prices or prevents competition to the detriment of the public. The penalty is a fine of not less than $5,000 or more than $10,000 for the first offense, and not less than $10,000 nor more than $30,000 for the second offense.

Pleasure Boat Sunk.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 8.—The rain of the past two days has caused a rapid rise in the rivers. The docks at Brownsville on the Monongahela river, were washed away Saturday by floating ice, causing a loss of $3,000. The pleasure steamer Josephine was sunk at Glenwood. The loss will be $5,000, but it is believed the boat can be raised. No further damage is expected.

GOFF AND HANNA

Refuse to Accept Portfolios in McKinley's Cabinet.

CANTON, O., Feb. 8.—Mercus A. Hanna has positively declined the offer of the postmaster generalship or any other cabinet position, and is no longer under consideration as a cabinet possibility. The news comes direct from Mr. Hanna through one of his friends who arrived from consultation with him Sunday afternoon, who also conferred with the president-elect Sunday evening.

CANTON, O., Feb. 8.—Word from Judge Goff has just reached Canton, warrants the announcement upon high authority that he can not be a member of Maj. McKinley's cabinet.

Judge Goff visited Canton at the request of Maj. McKinley about two weeks ago, who told him he would like to have him accept a position in his cabinet. Judge Goff is an old and valued friend of Maj. McKinley's and very much desired to be associated with him in an official capacity, but his personal and domestic affairs were in such condition just at the time that he could not give a definite answer and asked time for reflection. He now finds that his wife's health will not warrant the occupation of portfolio

Gary and Lewis McComas, of Maryland, St. John Boyle, of Kentucky; Maj. Warner of Missouri; H. Clay Evans of Tennessee, and P. C. Hanson, of Georgia and Judge Emory Spear, will also be considered within the next few days by the president-elect.

THROUGH A BRIDGE.

Accommodation Train Goes Into the Creek—Engineer Killed and Passengers Injured.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Feb. 8.—An excursion train on the Cumberland & Pennsylvania road, a branch feeder of the Baltimore & Ohio, went through a trestle at Franklin Mine, Md., at midnight Saturday night. The track walker passed over the trestle a short time before and it was all right. The train was running at full speed. The engine crossed over in safety but the combination coach and rear car fell through the trestle into a raging creek. There were 15 passengers on board. The train filled with water, and the battling of the passengers for an exit was terrible. As far as known all the passengers escaped. John Howard, the fireman of the train, jumped as the engine was toppling over and received serious injuries. Engineer Ross was so badly injured that he died Sunday. The accident was caused by the center props of the trestle being knocked down and carried away by an ice gorge.

THE WARSHIPS

CHARLESTON, S. C., Feb. 8.—The expected warships did not arrive Sunday. The water front was lined with anxious people all day long but not a gunboat came over the horizon line.

The Clyde liner Comanche came in Sunday night from New York and had not spoken the warships at Hampton roads Thursday morning. Capt. Pennington told of a severe storm encountered off the capes on Saturday, and from his description of it the warships must have caught it also. The ships that left Hampton roads Thursday were the cruiser New York, the battleship Maine, the cruiser Columbia and the double turreted monitor Amphitrite. This last named vessel is built with very low free board and it is thought would have an extremely rough time in a severe storm.

At a late hour Sunday night the warships had not been reported, but it is expected they will show up Monday morning.

Another Unseaworthy Vessel.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—Sunday morning's Journal said: Still another vessel of the United States navy has been found unseaworthy. It is the monitor Puritan, the last one added to the list of vessels available for service. The Puritan was to have left the navy yard next Tuesday to join the fleet in command of Adm. Bunce off Charleston harbor. The engines were given a dock trial a few days ago and it was discovered that they did not work smoothly. Many of the valves were found to be leaky.

Incessant Firing Outside Canea.

ATHENS, Feb. 8.—A dispatch from Canea to the Astynetes that incessant rifle and cannon firing was heard outside Canea Saturday and Sunday, and that the Turkish troops took part in the firing, using artillery. Many Christians were killed. It is reported that the Christians have captured the arsenal at Suda. The Astynetes correspondent adds that he saw Moslems pillage the bakers quarters in Canea and killing and mutilating cpiret bakers.

Peculiar Suicide.

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.—Warren E. Linney committed suicide at his residence on West Adams street Sunday afternoon. With a copy of Shakespeare in front of him and the book open at Hamlet's soliloquy, he plunged a knife through his heart and fell forward upon the words he evidently had been reading

AN ABSTRACT

Of the Proposed Reforms in Cuba and Porto Rico as Signed By the Queen Regent.

MADRID, Feb. 6.—A full abstract of the proposed reforms for Cuba and Porto Rico, approved by the queen regent, will be promulgated Saturday in the official Gazette.

Article 1 The laws of March 15, 1895 will be simplified.

The municipalities and assemblies of the six provinces of Cuba will enjoy all the liberties compatible with the laws and respect of individual rights.

The assemblies will have the right to elect their presidents. In each assembly there will be an executive committee elected by the assembly every six months, and its president will be elected by said committee.

The mayors and deputy mayors will be elected by the municipalities from amongst the members. They will exercise without limitation the functions of municipal administration.

The provincial assemblies will have the right to suspend the decision of the municipalities when they go beyond the limits of municipal rights, but in this case the municipalities will have the right of appeal to the highest court of the province.

The provincial assemblies will have large powers in matters of taxes in accordance with the general local system of taxation.

The appropriations for the provinces and municipalities will be separate.

The council of administration of the island will be composed of 35 councilors, 21 of them will be elected by the people.

The governor general will be honorary president of the council and the actual president will be nominated by the governor general from among the members of the council.

In order to be elected councillor it is necessary to have the same qualifications as are required to be deputy to the Cortes and it is necessary to have resided two years in the island.

The cortes will determine the amount of expense of sovereignty (imperial expenses) and will determine the total of the budget. To meet that amount the council of administration will vote every year the taxes and revenues necessary to supply the expenses, approved by the cortes. Only in the case of the council of administration not having approved and voted by the first of July the taxes and revenues necessary to meet the budget approved by the cortes, the governor general will "decree" them with the advice of intendente.

The council of administration will frame and approve the local budget.

The establishment of educational institutions to qualify for governmental positions, except for those of the army and navy will pertain to the council of administration as regards the custom tariff, will be as follows:

1. It will fix all custom duties.

2. It will modify the fiscal duties for revenue of importations in the island, subject to these modifications; national products directly imported to Cuba will enjoy the indispensible protection, taking into consideration the, the taxes on foreign products will be for revenue only.

3. Taxes for revenue established by the council of administration will be applied alike to foreign and to national products.

4. Taxes on exports will be equally levied and will not be differential; but it will be possible to except from these rules the direct exports to Spain for home consumption.

5. No prohibition on exports will be imposed upon products directly exported for home consumption in Spain.

The custom tariff will consist of these parts: One, for revenue only, equally applied and in the same proportion to foreign and home products and the other will consist of differential duties imposed on all foreign products, and in this there will be a margin of protection for the national industry with a maximum that the cortes will establish.

The government will fix, for the first time, the articles of tariff which will make up the differential columns. The taxes will not exceed 20 per cent of the value of the articles. The government will decree a revision of the valuation of merchandise after hearing all those interested pro and con.

The council of administration will be consulted as to the advisability of negotiating commercial treaties and conventions, which it is the intention of the government to negotiate, and this will be done after the final drafting of the treaty and its presentation for the approval of the cortes.

The council of administration will respect mutual pending contracts and at the expiration of the same will have the right to accept or repeal them. The council will also have the power of enforcing in the island the treasury laws of the peninsula so far as regards a contract with the Bank of Cuba.

Article 2 provides that the government will embody in a single decree the present rules and those of the laws of May 15, 1895, developing both in bylaws, which shall not change the strict sense of the present decree.

Article 3 enacts that the above mentioned rules will apply also to Puerto Rico.

Article 4 prescribes that the date for the application to Cuba of the law of 1895 and of the present decree to Cuba and Peurto Rico shall be fixed by the government as soon as the state of the war will permit it.

Plague Scare at Marseilles.

MARSEILLES, Feb. 6.—Many vessels from India arrive at this port, and the ravages of the plague in that country has excited among the inhabitants of this city a very lively fear that some of them will be the means of introducing the disease here. The most vigorous precautions have been taken by the authorities.

Only One of the Crew Saved.

CORUNA, Spain, Feb. 6.—An unknown French sailing vessel has been lost on Cape Torinna, the western extremity of this province (Calicia.) Only one of her crew was saved.

FIFTY-FOURTH CONGRESS

Second Session.

WASHINGTON, Feb 1.—SENATE—Not in session Saturday.

HOUSE—No business of general importance transacted in the house Saturday.

WASHINGTON, Feb 2—SENATE—A resolution was offered by Mr. Chandler (rep., N. H.), and was referred to the committee on privileges and elections, instructing that committee to investigate the recent presidential and state election in Delaware and to report to the senate whether a republican form of government existed in that state.

The Nicaraguan canal bill was taken up and an unsuccessful effort was made to have a day and hour fixed for a final vote. The discussion then proceeded on Mr. Vilas' motion, submitted last Thursday, to have the bill recommitted. Mr. Vilas spoke of the inter-oceanic canal project as an historic dream.

HOUSE—The first thing the house did Monday was to refuse to consider the bill reported by the committee on interstate and foreign commerce to prohibit railroad ticket scalping. In the course of the session, which was devoted to miscellaneous business, the following bills were passed: To prohibit the carrying from one state to another of obscene literature, or articles designed for indecent or immoral purposes; giving officers in the volunteer service of the United States the brevet rank held by them and the right to wear the uniform of that rank, for the protection of national military parks.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—SENATE—Mr. Chandler introduced a resolution Tuesday declaring it to be the sense of the senate that the United States should not permanently acquiesce in the single gold standard, and that the efforts of the government should be directed to secure and maintain the use of silver as well as gold as standard money with the free coinage of both. The resolution went over. The conference report on the immigration bill was taken up and was opposed in a long speech by Mr. Gibson (dem., Md.). An equally long speech was made in favor of the conference report by Mr. Lodge. The remainder of the day's session was taken up by the Nicaragua canal bill. Mr. Vilas (dem., Wis.) had the floor and continued his speech against it. Mr. Vilas had not finished his speech when, at 5:05, the senate adjourned until Wednesday.

HOUSE—Nearly all of Tuesday was spent by the house in listening to a discussion now raging between two electric lighting companies in the District of Columbia, which found its expression in connection with the consideration of the bill making appropriations for the expenses of the district for the year ending June 30, 1896. The bill remains the unfinished business on the calendar. The house passed the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill, with trifling changes.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—SENATE—The two resolutions offered last week by Mr. Allen (pop., Neb.) looking to the impeding or preventing of the sale of the Union Pacific railroad property under a judicial decree of foreclosure, were Wednesday discussed at much length by Mr. Thurston (rep., Neb.). The morning hour expired before Mr. Thurston finished his speech and the resolutions went over till Thursday. The Nicaraguan canal bill was before the senate for the remainder of the day's session. Mr. Vilas occupied the floor all the time in the delivery of his third day's speech against the bill. The speech was varied with roll calls to enforce the presence of a quorum, and as it was apparent that Mr. Vilas was "talking against time," the friends of the bill made a rather feeble effort to "sit on it," but eventually yielded to the inevitable and agreed to an adjournment.

HOUSE—The discussion of the contested election case of George W. Cornett vs. Claude A Swanson, from the Fifth district of Virginia, occupied nearly all the whole of Wednesday's session of the house, and by an overwhelming vote Mr. Swanson's title to the seat was confirmed by the house. The case came from the committee on elections No. 3, which reported in favor of Swanson. Three republicans, half the majority membership, however, recommended that the seat be declared vacant on the ground that the Watson election law, under which the election was held, was unconstitutional, and, therefore, there was no valid election.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—SENATE—The house bill to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors in the capital, was taken up and discussed, but went over without action. The conference report upon the immigration bill was discussed to and a new conference ordered. The Nicaragua canal bill was taken up and the remainder of the day's session was occupied by Mr. Vilas in opposition to it, this being the fourth day of his speech.

HOUSE—Consideration of the bill making appropriations for the expenses of the District of Columbia for the year ending June 30, 1896, engaged the attention of the house Thursday, to the exclusion of almost all other business and at adjournment it was still the unfinished business. The further conference asked by the senate upon the immigration bill was agreed to and conferees were appointed. Among the few bills passed in the course of the day were the following: Granting right of way through the Gila river reservation in Arizona to the Hudson Reservoir and Canal Co.; granting a pension of $20 a month to the widows of Gen. J. B. Carr and Gen. John Huff.

WASHINGTON, Feb 6.—SENATE—The vacancy which has existed in the senate since the 4th of March, 1895, by reason of the failure of the Delaware legislature to elect a senator from that state, was filled Friday by the admission of Mr. Richard R. Kenney, whose credentials, in due form, were presented by Mr. Gray (dem., Del.) and were accepted as prima facie evidence of his right to the seat. The Nicaraguan bill was taken up and speeches in opposition to it were made by Senators Allen (pop., Neb.) and Cuffery, (dem., La.). Afterward a dozen fifty pension bills and some 25 other unobjected to house bills were taken from the calendar and passed, and the senate at 6:03 p.m. adjourned until Saturday.

HOUSE—With a few interruptions the house applied itself Friday to the consideration of unfinished business, and while thus engaged disposed of 99 more private pension bills. Among them were bills granting pensions of $50 a month to the widow of Gen Erastus A. Taylor; to Edwin C. Spofford, of the 35th Massachusetts infantry; to Shubael Gould, of the 8th Iowa; Hans Johnson, of the 37th Iowa; to Maj. Gen. Julius A. H. Stahel to the widow of Gen. Mathew P. Trumbull; and of $30 a month to the widow of Gen. John C. Gow. W. H. Stoneman, of California. Reports were presented and ordered printed upon the contested election cases of Benoit vs. Bolmer, from the Fifth district of Louisiana. The second from that district in this congress; of Hopkins vs. Kendall, from the Tenth Kentucky district, and of Beattie vs. Price, from the Third Louisiana district—all in favor of the sitting member. The conference report on the military academy appropriation bill was agreed to.

Col. Crofton Retired.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The president, taking advantage of a prerogative rarely exercised, placed Col. Robt. E. A. Crofton, commanding the Fifteenth infantry, with headquarters at Fort Bayard, N. M., on the retired list of the army Thursday, under the statute enabling the executive, as commander-in-chief, to retire an officer who reaches the age of 62 years.

Suicided on His Sweetheart's Grave.

ENGLISH, Ind., Feb. 6.—Just after noon Friday Alexis Gasvan, a young man of Bremen, Germany, committed suicide upon the grave of Miss Corinna Peters at White Sulphur, near here. Gasvan arrived Thursday, expecting to marry Miss Peters, and was told that she had died of consumption three weeks ago. He seemed stricken with grief and wandered gloomily about, finally going to the cemetery. The weapon was found by his side as he lay full length upon the grave, his brains oozing out. He will be buried here and his friends in Germany notified.

FOREBODINGS OF REPUBLICANS.

In a Quandary as to How to Increase the Revenue.

After the bitterness with which the republicans have denounced the Wilson act and the confidence with which they proclaimed their intentions to raise more revenue for the tariff, it seems strange to hear the Washington correspondent of a republican paper like the St. Louis Globe-Democrat writing guardedly about the financial situation.

"It is popular," he remarks truly, 'to hold the writ responsible for national ills." There is now a determined effort to increase the revenue, but "if the expenses of this government had been held down to what they were in 1890, we would have had a surplus of $60,000,000 last year, instead of a deficit of $40,000,000."

The exact amount of the deficit last year, by the way, was given elsewhere in the same paper as only $26,000,000. But the essential point is that the extravagant expenditures of congress are responsible for the deficit. In fact, the correspondent is forced to admit that "probably the McKinley tariff would have failed, and certainly the tariff that preceded the McKinley tariff would not have furnished the revenue for such an addition as has been made to the expenditures."

This is certainly a conservative statement. For the McKinley tariff still holds the record for a deficit creator, by having fallen behind $75,000,000 in its last year. The result is that "to-day there is grave doubt in the minds of the members of the ways and means committee whether they can frame a tariff bill which will be equal to the revenue-raising demand this increase in expenditures makes upon it."

Naturally. For since lowering the tariff did not increase the imports sufficiently to raise the required revenue, it is difficult to accomplish the increase of imports by raising the tariff. And the task is rendered harder by the necessity of diminishing the imports even while increasing them. The feat would be considered impossible but for the editorial assurance of the same paper that though nobody knows how it is to be accomplished, the country has faith in the ability of the republican members of the ways and means committee to do it. If so, they ought not to be wasting their time in congress when they could make $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 a month in business. But it will be noticed that they have "grave doubts" of their ability to frame a tariff that will produce enough revenue when business is stagnating and congress is trying to see how much it can spend.—Kansas City Times.

TROUBLE FOR M'KINLEY.

Some Knotty Points in the Wilson Law for Him to Handle.

Maj. McKinley will have trouble in finding data upon which to base his message calling an extra session of congress to tinker with the tariff.

According to the major's favorite theory in political economy, the source of prosperity is the home market and the sign of it is the diminution of the imports of foreign goods.

When the major comes to look at the figures he will find that under the Wilson law there is a steady decline in imports. Low as the import record of last year was, it is going lower at a rapid rate this year. At the port of New York the imports for this month have been falling under those of the same period last year at the rate of about $4,000,000 a week.

On the other hand, the major will find that while the imports have been diminishing the exports have been increasing. The foreign trade of the country increased last year millions of dollars.

If these facts mean anything beyond well-known market conditions they mean that prohibition of foreign goods and the consequent heavy taxation of the people to fill the pockets of the favored few are not needed to keep the home market for American manufacturers; that under freer trade the American manufacturers can retain the home market and capture the foreign markets.

If the major urges higher tariff taxes for revenue purposes, the decreasing revenues of his own law will damn his argument. The fact is, he is practically reduced to the plain statement that we ought to have higher taxes because Hanna promised them to the "patriots" who lent their purses to the republican party.—St. Louis Republic.

The Wary Manufacturers.

It is gratifying to observe that the manufacturers see the futility and unpopularity of an attempt to secure for themselves high tariff duties at the special session of congress which it is understood is to be called soon after President McKinley's inauguration. At the session of the National Association of Manufacturers in Philadelphia the following were the resolutions adopted bearing upon the subject of the tariff: "That the rates of duty should be made as low as possible, consistent with adequate protection." If the manufacturers who go before congress adhere to this policy the country will have to be grateful, and will be saved much agitation and the reaction that necessarily must follow any attempt to restore the high schedules of the tariff act of 1890.—Chicago Record (Ind.).

——With one hand the republican party is holding out its hat for increased revenue to cover a treasury deficit and with the other it is making huge additions to the appropriation bills. Its theory seems to be that wild extravagance and high taxation are the true remedies of a deficit in the revenue of the treasury.—Atlanta Constitution.

——Now comes the story that Gov. Dingley, of Maine, may reconsider and consent to go into the cabinet after all. He may not get the chance. It was said that he declined in the first place, because he was not sure but Hanna would be in the cabinet. The new republican national boss is not noted for forgiving such things.—Albany Argus.

SHERMAN AS PREMIER.

It is a source of wonder to many that Mr. Sherman can be regarded as a safe man in an important government position. The views of these persons are mirrored in a reference to the senator's record by the Indianapolis Sentinel, which exclaims at the appointment, and says: "He (Sherman) has tangled up the financial system of the country to such an extent that no living man thus far has disentangled it. Give him time and opportunity as secretary of state and he will leave to his successors such a mess of imbroglios with foreign countries that a Talleyrand would fail to solve and settle. How the wily old Buckeye succeeds in 'fooling' so many people pretty much all the time is beyond our ken."

There is some reason in this view of Senator Sherman's case. He was undoubtedly an important factor in the creation of the financial legislation under which the government now transacts business and which is admitted on all sides to embody an unsafe and altogether objectionable system. The trouble in which the country was plunged nearly four years ago, and from which it has not begun to recover, is traced to the existing financial laws, in the making of which Mr. Sherman's influence was a potent influence. In view of this, it is not to be wondered at that the proposal to make the Ohio senator secretary of state is the cause of some apprehension throughout the country. He seems to be a man whose opinions waver, and it is never a difficult matter to quote him in favor of all sides of any of those stable public questions that are of permanent interest and importance. We have had Mr. Sherman for and against a protective tariff; for and against the maintenance of a single gold standard, and, as a matter of fact, he is widely looked upon as a statesman with a tendency to vacillate. Whether or not such a man is fitted for the post of secretary of state in the present critical condition of international affairs is a question that is reasonably open to discussion, and there is nothing singular in the existence of a widespread conviction that his appointment to that post will amount to a mistake if not a serious blunder.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

FOR DEMOCRATIC SUCCESS.

Leading Feature of the Platform for 1900.

The accomplishment of the full and complete restoration of silver to its time-honored place as money, side by side with gold, is the fixed purpose of the democratic party. This will be the leading feature of the platform of 1900 as it was for 1896. Our opponents will talk of international agreement for bimetallism, and international conferences may be held, but the real purpose of all such expedients will be to deceive the people and gain time to more securely fasten upon them the clutch of the gold standard. The democratic shibboleth will be independent action for bimetallism on the part of America, spurning to be the follower and tool of Great Britain or any other foreign nation.

The object and purpose of the campaign which began right where it left off in November, 1896, and will continue until November, 1900, may be epitomized in these words: The repeal of all laws by which silver has been demonetized and its use as money abridged, the prohibition of all discriminations by the government or any of its officers against either gold or silver, and the admission of both metals to the right of free and unlimited coinage at our mints at the ratio of sixteen to one, with full power for all the money thus coined as legal tender for all public dues and in all transactions of the citizen.

This will not be debasement or repudiation, as the gold standard advocates exclaim. It will simply put a stop to the money power scheme of continued contraction, and, as democracy believes, will provide for a healthy enlargement of the volume of money on a sound basis.—Illinois State Register.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

——A curious public would be glad to know what Mr. Platt's programme will be in case the major cuts up rough.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

——The best evidence that Senator Sherman's mind is weakening is his persistent pleading for the appointment of Mark Hanna to the senate.—St. Louis Republic.

——Gen. Alger says that the old disagreement between him and Senator Sherman has entirely died out. Nothing has been heard from Senator Sherman yet.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——The textile industry appears to have done pretty well during 1896, in spite of all unfavorable conditions. There were 207 new mills constructed, against 198 in the preceding year.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat (Rep.).

——After their liberal contributions to the campaign which they supposed had brought a victory to them, the trusts must be rather astonished at the feeling that has been developed against them since election.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

——The presence of Gen. Alger and John Sherman in McKinley's cabinet will be a graceful recognition of their skill and daring in the bribery of negro delegates. It will also be a reminder of the many nice things they have not said about each other.—Kansas City Times.

——The mutterings of revolt which come from Washington against the sway of Speaker Reed were to be expected. It is inevitable that if an arbitrary control of a deliberative body is put into the hands of any man the people who do not get what they want will be discontented. The fact is, every student of the house knows, that it has long since ceased to be a body for free debate.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

While crushing corn, one day last week, a large piece of iron resembling a spike, was thrown into the hopper of J. F. Weaver's crusher along with some corn, and the noise it made in its attempted journey through the machine was terrific and frightened several persons who chanced to be present. Mr. Weaver stopped the crusher as soon as possible and removed the piece of iron, which was broken in several fragments that had received a severe chewing. The crusher was considerably injured, and it took some time to straighten the pinions that were sprung, and make other necessary repairs.

And then you will be tried for murder if you kill; or for shooting at another person with intent to kill if your murderous attack does not produce death. In either case, if your defense is not good, the circumstances will be, at least, mitigating.

H. W. Harrison, dentist, of Rising Sun, Ind., will be in Burlington on the first and third Mou lay in each month, to do work for those who wish anything in his line. He will be here two days each visit. He is a son of the late R. F. Harrison, of Carrollton, and a graduate of the Pennsylvania College of Dentistry at Philadephia. He is highly recommended in his profession.

J. F. Cason's sale, last Thursday, was attended by a very large crowd, and the prices realized were, generally, satisfactory to Mr. Cason. Cows brought from $35 to $38; corn, 25 cents per bushel in the crib; hay, about $6 per ton; fodder, 25c per shock in the field. The candidates were out in full force, and were busy presenting their claims.

One of our young friends who contemplates engaging in agriculture this spring has commenced purchasing his outfit, and some of the boys who keep an eye on his proceedings say he makes all his purchases backward, buying a wagon before purchasing a horse; the harrow before the plow; a grind stone before an axe, &c.

K. of. P. at Lexington.—Low round trip rates to Lexington and return will be in effect via the Q. & C. Route from all points between Erlanger and Pine Knot, Ky., account of K. of P. meeting February 19-20th. Tickets will be good for return until February 21. Ask agents for particulars.

W. T. Ryle, who lives out on the Woolper pike, lost his meat house and contents, by fire, Sunday night. It is supposed that destruction was the result of a piece of meat falling into the fire that was used to smoke the meat. The meat of eight hogs was burnt.

One of the candidates was asked by a friend, the other day, about a certain voter who is an old bachelor, when he replied, in a tone which showed that he was certain as to the truth of his declaration, "Why, he and his boys are all for me"

The Boone County Deposit Bank has put a new lock on its safe door, one that is locked and unlocked by the timer, doing away entirely with the combination, and making the safe much more difficult to enter by blowing.

When it was ascertained that it would require $1,200 to put up a telephone from Burlington to Florence the scheme was abandoned instantur. It was evident that the necessary amount could not be raised.

Attorneys Lassing & Riddell evidently anticipate a wave of prosperity, and to be ready to take care of their portion of same, have put a fire and burglar proof safe in their office.

The only mouth piece Burlington will ever have is the RECORDER. It will continue to speak for Burlington and the remainder of the county for some time to come.

The remains of Mr. S. P. Brady were removed from the vault here last Wednesday to Bellevue, where they were consigned to their last resting place.

About the largest snow of the winter fell last Sunday night. The ground was in no condition to receive it, and traveling was rendered very slavish.

Thirteen candidates were on the streets in Burlington, last Thursday morning. Several of them were lined up to start to the Cason sale.

Those desiring to take part in the RECORDER'S guessing contest will please bear in mind that guesses will not be received on credit.

In another column is advertised a 60 acre farm, on the Lexington 'pike for sale, a short distance south of Florence, this county. It is a rare opportunity for someone to secure a good farm at a most reasonable price.

The Fiscal Court, at its special session last week, remodeled its former order in regard to pay for teams to work on the public roads, and fixed the rates as follows: For a two-horse team and driver, $3 per day; for a three-horse team and driver, $3 50 per day; for a four-horse team and driver, $4 per day.

There are, in this county, a good many stockholders in the defunct Knoxville Building Association. They ought to have a meeting and arrange to have their claims looked after. If they unite for that purpose the cost to each individual claimant will be less than if the claims are looked after separately.

About the time a person gets use to a snow it is transformed into mud, and by the time you are becoming reconciled to the mud another snow falls. Such alternating is growing monotonous, and an impeachment of the weather clerk will be about the proper thing if he does not provide a more uniform weather for the future.

JUDGE WARREN MONTFORT, DEAD.

Judge Warren Montfort died at his home in Pineville, Bell county, on the first day of this month, after a brief attack of pneumonia. His remains were returned to New Liberty, Owen county, where they were interred last Wednesday.

Judge Montfort was for many years a resident of Owen and Henry counties, and while a resident of the latter county, in 1874, he was elected to the office of Commonwealth's Attorney in this district, Henry county being a portion of this judicial district at that time. When Henry was taken from this district Judge Montfort moved to Owenton, Owen county, and in 1886, he was elected Circuit Judge. Both of the above named positions he filled with great ability, displaying rare legal attainments both as barrister and as judge.

He served four years in the Confederate army, being captain of a company under Gen. John Morgan, and was a brave soldier, loved by the men under his command.

Judge Montfort was a polished, affable gentleman and was immensely popular with the people of this county, with whom he had been associated for many years, and it is with sorrow that they have learned of his death, and extend to the wife, son and daughter who survive him, their deepest sympathy.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

February 5th, 1897.

The scheme to keep Senator-elect Kenney, of Delaware, out of his seat, which was concocted by "Little Billie" Chandler and other Republicans of his ilk, is in a fair way to fall through. Although the Senate Committee on elections is controlled by Republicans it has refused to be a party to this scheme to the extent of reopening the claim of DuPont to the seat, and it is not believed that the flimsy claim of Gas Addicks will be seriously considered by the committee at all. A republican Senator said today that he thought Kenney's credentials were all right and that he was satisfied he would be seated.

Nobody seems to have any idea that the amended arbitration treaty with England, which has been favorably reported to the Senate, will be acted upon at this session. In fact, its friends would be afraid to force a vote at this time lest it should result in rejection of the treaty.

One of the legacies of the Harrison administration is a treaty that binds the United States to pay $6,000 a year towards the support of a monarchy and an almigaty poor specimen of monarchy at that. The treaty in question was made with Germany and England and the money goes to pay the expenses of the senil savage King of Samoa. A year or so ago President Cleveland recommended legislation looking towards the abrogation of this treaty, and each year there has been a protest made when the House reached the item of the Diplomatic and Consular appropriation bill carrying that $6,000. This week when the item was reached Representative McMillin moved that it be stricken out, because he did not think it right that our people should be contributing money to the support of a monarchy anywhere and under any circumstances, but his motion was voted down, not because a majority of the House favored the appropriation but because they considered that as long as the treaty is allowed to stand we are honor bound to pay our share of the money.

Gen. Bradley T. Johnson, who was recently in Cuba is now in Washington and doing some very plain talking. For instance he said: "The Cubans will surely succeed unless the policies of the administration in aiding Spain crushes hope out of the Cubans."

Hon. John W Kern, of Indiana, now in Washington, says of the democracy of his State: "The democratic party in Indiana is as full of life and in as good condition as it has been during any time within the last twenty years. Every day since the election has intensified the belief of the voters out our way, who supported the Chicago ticket, that they had the right side of the argument. Instead of higher wages and full time, promised by the Republicans, wage-earners have experienced a decrease in their earnings since last November. Even now there are thousands of good men who were scared or bunoced into leaving the Democratic party that are very willing to come into the fold once more. They realize that they have been made the victims of a big confidence game."

The dismissal for the second time of a silver democrat from the Treasury department may result in a scandal. The man dismissed is Mr. William E. Ryan, an expert accountant, who was a candidate for Congress in the Rochester (N. Y.) district last November. Mr. Ryan was first dismissed the day after election. On Dec. 2nd he secured a reappointment at a reduced salary, under a civil service certificate. He recently served notice of his intention to contest the election in his Congressional district, on the ground that the use of the Myers Ballot Machine was illegal, and this week he was again dismissed. It is said he was given a hint by a person in authority that it would not be wise for him to make a contest, and he thinks he now knows why.

If Senator Chandler can tell in the speech he has promised to make on his resolution declaring it to be the sense of the Senate that this country should not permanently accept the single gold standard, but should strive to have gold and silver put on the same terms by the free coinage of both, any other reason for the adoption of the resolution than the bamboozling of silver Republicans into the belief that their party is going to do something for silver the silver majority in the Senate will doubtless vote to adopt his resolution, although they and everyone else know that it would be meaningless so far as accomplishments are concerned. Everybody knows that the Senate believes in the free coinage of silver.

The Florence Bimetallic Democratic Club will celebrate Washington's birth day, Monday, February 22d. We will have some good speakers on hand—Judge Tarvin, D. E. Castleman, and others. Club and League men are expected to be on hand, and the Club extends a cordial invitation to the ladies and our single gold standard friends. Speaking will begin at 12 o'clock noon.

STILL retain its rhythmic flow,
Because I read it many times;
It ran like this, when long ago
It came to me from Billy Grimes.

'Twas "writ" with bright red ink, I mind,
And right above a pair of hearts
Were pierced by knives of some queer kind,
Which Billy meant for "Cupid's darts."

DEEP SORE GUFL: IVE LOVED YOU AWFULL HARD
THO' FORE THIS HERE IVE MADE NO SINE
BUT NOW YOU'LL SEE BY THIS SMALL CARD
IAM YOUR OWN TRUEW VOLENTINE

Ah, how I laughed until I cried
O'er Billy's sentimental screed;
Tho' well I knew the loyal pride
That lay behind its ill-spelled creed.

Had he not battled for me well,
When once a spiteful boy had said
[He missed and I the word did spell]
My golden locks were "fiery red?"

And had he not—true-hearted boy—
Saved up his pence to buy a treat,
And then with quaint, transparent joy,
Laid down the treasure at my feet?

'Tis true I scorned his snubby" nose,
His freckles and his warty hands;
His odd, old-fashioned, home-made clothes,
His servile mien at my commands.

And with a girl's strange wayward whim,
Behind my checkered pinafore,
I joined in making sport of him,
Because myself he did adore.

Poor Billy! years have come and gone
Since last I gazed into your eyes,
And saw, like some poor wounded fawn,
Your look of anguish and surprise.

And I have roamed 'mid scenes afar,
Have quaffed life's cup unto the lees;
And on my heart is many a scar
Of woundings made by hate's decrees.

And oft I wonder, after all,
If with that little blotted line
That lies beneath time's somber pall,
I did not lose "My Valentine."

—Rose Pearle, in Chicago Tribune.

THE HIGH-TOP SWEETING TREE.

A Valentine Story.

THEY all cried—everyone of the Bells, from Peggy, who was 16, down to Rufus (who was six, and despised a crybaby), when old Mr. Pigeon moved away. He was such a tried and trusty friend, and, if he was 60, such a congenial companion. He was always ready to go fishing or coasting with the boys, or to take the girls to drive; although he was a bachelor and lived alone, and had a double carriage and the largest sleigh on Pippin Hill—because he had so large a heart, Peggy said. He knew as much about the wild things in the woods as "The Hunter's Own Book," and on a rainy day or when one had the mumps or the measles he would tell stories by the dozen—stories that were worth telling, too, for he had been "'round the world and home again," and knew all there was to know about cannibals and buccaneers and wild men, and all such distinguished and interesting people.

It happened that the only houses on the tip-top of Pippin Hill were the Belfry (I suppose the Bells' house may have received that name because Papa Bell always spoke of his children as his "small fry;" anyway, that is what everyone in Bloomsboro' called it) and the old Pigeon house, which had belonged to this Mr. Pigeon's grandfather. The houses backed up to each other, and there was a mutual backyard fence, so, of course, it was very desirable that the neighbors should be friendly and congenial; more than this, there was a mutual apple tree. The gnarled old "high-top sweeting" was directly on the boundary line between the two estates, and the mutual fence had been cut in two to make space for it. Its branches were low and spreading, in spite of its high top, and they spread very impartially over the Bells' smooth lawn and over Mr. Pigeon's orchard, and dropped their delicious fruit—early, the first sweet apples that there were—almost as evenly as if it were measured on each of their owners' land. The only difference was that the August sunshine lay longer upon Mr. Pigeon's side, so the first red and yellow, mellow and juicy apples dropped upon his orchard grass—and he tossed them up to Christine in her seat in the low crotch of the tree, the seat that he had made for her.

It was Christine who thought the most of Mr. Pigeon and he of her, because they both had a twist, Christine said. She would always speak of her trouble cheerfully, even jokingly. You would scarcely have thought that she minded it at all; it was a spinal weakness which had bowed her shoulders and twisted her head to one side. The others didn't mind much when Christine was left out of things; they were a rough, merry set, but Mr. Pigeon had always remembered her. His twist was in one of his legs; he had to wear an uncomfortable iron boot, and walked with a queer, sideways motion.

When Becky, who was 11 and was called the Bloomsboro' Budget, because she carried all the news, came home with the dreadful intelligence that Mr. Pigeon was going to move away, no one would believe it.

"In the first place, it's too dreadful to be true, and in the next place he would have told us," said Peggy.

But it really proved to be true. Mr. Pigeon's sister—his own sister!—had gone to law to obtain a share of her grandfather's estate, which he had failed to bequeath to her because she had gone contrary to his wishes in some way, and the only share that she would have was that old estate on Pippin Hill. Perhaps the law might force her to take something else as her share, since he had held possession there so long; but she was Hitty, and he should give it up to her. That was what Mr. Pigeon said in answer to the indignant remonstrances of the Bells. She was Hitty; that was all he would say; perhaps it wasn't much of a reason, but the Bells understood. We all know what it is to give up things to people just because they are Iky or Polly or John.

So it happened that the Bells' dear Mr. Pigeon went away to a little house that he owned down at Pequanket Mills and Miss Mehitable Pigeon came to live at the old place on Pippin Hill and owned half of the high-top sweeting tree.

And the very first thing she did—it was September when she came—was to threaten to have Tommy Bell arrested, because when he shook their side of the tree her side shook too, and she said the top of the tree leaned toward their side and more apples fell there, so when the apples were picked and divided she must have an extra bushel. She threatened to have their yellow kitten drowned because he scampered after the flying leaves in her garden, and she did have their cross gobbler killed because it ran after her red morning gown, as a gobbler will, you know, and gobbled at her. He wasn't much loss, and she sent him home plucked and dressed, with the message that she should have eaten him if she had not feared he would be tough.

She complained that Becky's peacock squawked and Dicky's guinea pigs squeaked, and the vane on their stable had "a rusty squeak" that kept her awake nights; and if one of the little Bells mounted the fence she came out and "shooed" him off as if he were a chicken.

Christine, who was inclined to look on the bright side and to think well of every one, said that she would probably grow better when they got better acquainted, and she gave Tommy and little Rufus five cents each not to use their bean slingers over the fence or make faces through the knothole.

"SHE DIDN'T TAP ME WITH A WAND, SHE SENT ME A VALENTINE."

But instead of growing better their new neighbor grew worse. She had the mutual fence built up ten feet high, she had the branches of the sweeting tree lopped off where they interfered with the fence, and Christine's seat thrown down to the ground so roughly that it was broken. She said she had let people impose upon her all her life, and she wasn't going to any more.

Papa Bell, who was an easy man and absorbed in his business, said he supposed that so many children and squeaking things did make them troublesome neighbors; but he thought they should have to remonstrate with Miss Pigeon about the fence, because it took away so much of their sunshine. Christine begged him to wait; she always would believe that people were going to be better, and she knew there must be something good about Miss Pigeon, because she looked like her brother—"only the twist seemed to be in her mind, poor thing!"

It was November when Christine's seat was thrown out of the tree, so she could not have used it any more that season anyway; and when anyone asked her how she was going to do without it in the spring, she always answered: "Perhaps Miss Hitty will be good by that time." But that transformation didn't seem in the least likely to anyone else. She never forgot that Mr. Pigeon had said she was Hitty, though how she could ever be Hitty to anybody was more than the other young Bells could understand.

Christine would bow to her, too, and smile, shyly, although Miss Pigeon only scowled dreadfully in response. Far more difficult to forgive than their own wrongs was the injury she had inflicted upon her brother. He wrote to them doleful letters which showed plainly how homesick he was for the good air and the goodfellowship of Pippin Hill. One of the neighbors who saw him at Pequanket said one would hardly know him—he had "pined away" so.

After that little Rufus (honorably) returned the five cents to Christine, because he knew he should yield to the temptation to make faces through the knothole again.

Christine turned a little pale when she heard this about Mr. Pigeon, and she put on her thinking cap. She couldn't go to school like the others, she couldn't go skating; in fact, there were so many things she couldn't do that it would have been very discouraging to one who believes less firmly than Christine did that things as well as people were going to be better; but that gave her all the more time to wear her thinking cap. And Christine's thoughts were pretty apt to blossom into deeds some way.

Christine had made the Christmas wreaths of evergreen and holly from their own Pippin Hill woods, and she had sent two beauties to Miss Pigeon, who had promptly returned them with the message that she didn't want such rubbish littering up her house. Now when they heard that sad news from Mr. Pigeon she was making valentines. She had a very dainty knack with both pencil and brush, for a 14-year-old girl, and her valentines were more beautiful than any that could be bought in the shops, or so the Bloomsboro' young people all thought.

The fashion of sending valentines might wane elsewhere, but it always flourished in Bloomsboro, perhaps because Christine Bell kept it up. She sent them to the very last people who expected to have a valentine—to neglected old people and forlorn sick people, to Biddy Maguire, just from the old country, and "kilt" with homesickness, and to Antony Burke, the old miser, for whom no one had a civil word and who, perhaps, didn't deserve one. And for every valentine that was disregarded or thrown impatiently aside, a dozen made a little warmth and comfort in a sad heart; for nobody has yet begun to understand how great is the day of small things.

Christine was more mysterious than usual this year about her valentines; she colored when Peggy said she would better send one to Miss Pigeon, but they never thought she would; they thought she was only sensitive about her Christmas wreath. When Mr. Pigeon went away he gave Christine an old desk that he had had ever since he was a boy. It had initials and hearts and anchors cut into it and was whittled at every corner; you would have known if you'd seen it anywhere that it had belonged to a boy. But Christine would have it in her own room; she thought it was beautiful. It had his boy-letters and diaries in it, and she had laughed and cried over them. And now she had found in that old desk material for the very queerest valentine she had ever made; and although she liked to share the fun of making her valentines with the others, she was a little secretive about that.

What should the paper be but a leaf from one of the old diaries, one side all written over in an unformed, boyish hand; and this is what was written on it, the ink faded by time:

"I cant bare to rite becos hity has the Fever and I cant bare knot to rite becos it seems like I ating somboddy. she held mi hand tite when she did knot now enyboddy last nite and i did knot let them send me to bed the fellers say if she does di I hav other sisters but they are knot hity the fellers do knot understand wen enybody sais she will evver hav a bo like our agusta hity sais the Tom Tinker verse and that means me as is rote on the list leef of this Diry mi name is Thomas Tinkham Pigeon hity has gott a Temper but so hav a Good Meny People and she is Good way inside and she is hity and she and I will always liv together but I cant bare to rite eny more for I want to now what the dokter sais, they say a feller must be A Man but wen it is hity I cant bare—"

Here the words became illegible on the old yellow paper; there were blots and smudges as of tears. Though valentines are supposed to be dainty, Christine didn't try to clean it a bit! And on the unwritten side, instead of painting any of her pretty flowers or drawing hearts or cupids, she only wrote "the Tom Tinker verse" which Hitty had lovingly quoted to her brother:

"Tom Tinker's my true love, and I am his dear,
I'll gang along wi' him his budget to bear."

It certainly was a very queer valentine. Christine thought it would probably be returned, even more scornfully than the Christmas wreath—if Miss Pigeon should guess who sent it—and she would be likely to guess that it came from the Belfry; for she knew that her brother had given them many of his belongings.

She sent it with fear and trembling, and she told none of the others, for the older ones seemed, in their hearts, to share the feeling of Tom and little Rufus, that the only form of approach to Miss Pigeon was bean-slinger in hand.

The valentine wasn't returned; but nothing seemed to come of it. The Bells' Jane heard from Miss Pigeon's Jane that her mistress had neuralgia. One day after March had come, and a bluebird had been seen to alight upon the high-top sweeting tree, as Christine came along the garden path there come a shrill, imperative voice through the knothole in the fence.

"If you have any more of those leaves, stuff them through the knothole; if you have the whole diary throw it over the fence."

Of course Christine wasn't going to do that with the diary that seemed so precious; but she did send it around to Miss Pigeon's door by old Jeremy, the gardener, for none of the boys would go.

It was about a week after that a man made, under Miss Pigeon's direction, a new seat in the crotch of the apple tree—a seat that was delightfully comfortable for a back that wasn't straight. Miss Pigeon seemed to know just how. When it was finished she went up and examined it and tried it. Then she called to Christine, who was sitting on the porch.

"I'm a cantankerous old woman. I was born cantankerous," she said. "But there's your seat!"

No one at the Belfry knew what to think of Miss Pigeon; it was little Rufus' opinion that a good fairy had tapped her with her wand and turned her into something else, and he was much disappointed to find, on peeping through the knothole, that she looked just the same.

"It's delightful," Christine said, slowly. "But it isn't exactly what I meant by the valentine," she added, to herself.

But a few days after, what Christine had meant by the valentine really did happen! Sometimes things that seem too good to be true do come to pass in this world. Miss Pigeon mounted the high buggy in which she drove herself and went down to Pequanket; when she came back Mr. Pigeon was with her! Tommy discovered it first as they drove into the yard and raised a shout. All the young Bells rushed pell-mell into the apple tree and dropped from its branches into Miss Pigeon's orchard—even Peggy who was 16—shouting and laughing and crying all together. They quite forgot Miss Pigeon until her harsh voice broke into the whirlwind of greetings; with all its harshness there was a queer little quaver in it!

"He's come back and he's going to stay," she said. "It is he that belongs here and not I. If you're born with a cross-grained disposition you've got to get over it when you're young or you'll have to have more'n a ten-foot fence between you and other people! I'm going back to nursing people in a hospital—yes, I can, though you wouldn't think it; and they like me! There's a doctor I know who has invented a new contrivance for—for making backs straight"—her voice really broke now, but she recovered herself instantly; "they're easier to straighten than crooked dispositions! I'm going to send one here, and I want her to try it." She nodded toward Christine, and then she turned away suddenly. Little Rufus ran after her—prudently keeping his hand on the bean-slinger in his pocket. (They had discovered at an early stage of the acquaintance that if Miss Pigeon had a weakness it was a terror of the bean-slingers.) "Are you really just the same? Didn't a good fairy turn you into something else?" he demanded, breathlessly.

Miss Pigeon turned and looked down upon him, her strong features working.

"Yes, she did!" she answered, gruffly.

"Did she tap you with her wand?" pursued little Rufus, eagerly, delighted with this confirmation of beliefs that were scorned in his home circle.

"She didn't tap me with a wand," said Miss Pigeon; "she sent me a valentine!"—Sophie Swett, in N. Y. Independent.

AN UP-TO-DATE VALENTINE.

She's up to date and away beyond,
And many worship at her shrine;
She sent an arrow through my heart
And claims me as her valentine.

Valentine to a Sick Doll.

Dolly, dolly darling!
O, dolly, dolly mine!
They laugh because I tell them
That you are my valentine.

They think that I shall have, dear,
A doll in place of you;
Now, don't be frightened, dolly,
For that's what I'll never do.

I know your nose is melted;
I know one eye is gone;
My father said this morning
That you really were forlorn.

But that's the very reason
Why you should always be
The very dearest dolly
In the whole round world to me.

If my nose should get broken,
If I looked queer and wild,
Would my mamma exchange me
For another bran-new child?

Growing Better.

The world grows better, so they say;
More gentle, dignified and sunny.
Perhaps no one will think some day,
That comic valentines are funny.

TENNESSEE CENTENNIAL

Made Possible by the Grit of Nashville's Citizens.

This Exposition Is the Only National Event of the Year 1897—What Is Being Done to Make It Successful.

[Special Nashville (Tenn.) Letter.]

In many respects the Tennessee Centennial and International exposition to be held at Nashville, from May 1 to October 30, this year, will serve as an appropriate demonstration of patriotism and enterprise upon the threshhold of a new century in the history of the state, and of a new awakening in the south.

The "Old Volunteer state" is fortunate in the absence of any similar national attraction during the year; fortunate in the wealth of its resources, which are yet to be developed; fortunate in the central geographical position, which makes Nashville the most accessible point in the south, and no less fortunate in the spirit of enterprise and zeal of her citizens, who have made this vast undertaking possible. Being one of the most highly favored states in the union, in the great variety of wealth of soil, hills and forests, the materials for the essential features of a great industrial exposition are found within her own borders.

However, this is not to be merely a display of commercial and industrial progress. History, education, art and science are to have the preference in the arrangement of the displays, and the chief aim of the managers of the exposition is to show the patriotism of the people of Tennessee, to illustrate the perfection of art, the progress of science, the genius of invention, the progress of civilization, and incidentally to promote industrial and commercial enterprise. It was fortunate for the state that in and around Nashville were found the men who had faith in the outcome of an exposition pitched upon so high a plane. And even here the most faithful and sanguine friends of the Centennial met with many discouragements, not only in the unfavorable condition of business throughout the country, but from the lethargy of the people throughout the state. But having put their hands to the work they went forward, meeting all difficulties and overcoming all obstacles until success was assured. No other city in the country has ever accomplished so great a work, unaided, and under such great difficulties, and this fact is recognized by other cities. The Buffalo Express, in a full-page art supplement illustrating and describing the exposition, said:

"This article would be incomplete without a complimentary reference, well deserved, to the city of Nashville, which has assumed the chief burden of this ambitious undertaking. Nashville has fairly earned the proud cognomen 'The Athens of the South.' With a population of only 100,000, at most, it has ventured fearlessly into a field where far more influential communities have hitherto feared to tread. Think of Buffalo undertaking such a labor of love and assuming such a tremendous financial responsibility. Without the added attraction of an exposition Nashville is well worthy of a visit. It is an admirably laid-out, favorably located and excellently drained city with many substantial business blocks and numerous handsome residences. A large amount of northern capital has been invested in its development 'since the war,' and it is one of the largest, if not actually the leading manufacturing center of the south."

The wilderness of Tennessee reached the dignity of statehood, June 1, 1796. It was the third state coming into the union after the original 13, and in the century which has passed since its admission, its institutions, many of which have become famous, have been thoroughly grounded, and its greatness and stability have been firmly established. Tennessee has furnished more than her quota of men for the highest office in the gift of the American people, and her statesmen and soldiers have won honor on the battlefield and fame in the halls of legislation, while others have won distinction on the bench and at the bar, and in professional, commercial and public life. Her earlier citizens won world-wide fame as volunteers in the defense of the nation, and thereby earned the distinction for Tennessee as the "Volunteer State."

The characteristics of the early settlers of the state, their high sense of honor, devotion to principle, their bravery and determination, tempered with hospitality and intelligence, and unflinching devotion to their country, have descended to the present generation, and to-day her best people are found in the front ranks in the matter of the arts and sciences, while the average intelligence of her citizens is inferior to no state in the union. There are within her borders some of the most famous educational institutions in the country, which, with her efficient system of public schools, provide for the better education of the rising generation.

Nashville, the capital of the state, and the most central city, is entitled to the proud name of the "Athens of the South." Vanderbilt university is perhaps the leading educational institution, but there are a score of other noted universities, colleges and classical schools, aside from the splendid public schools. Her commercial and manufacturing interests are correspondingly notable. The 1,000 wholesale, jobbing and manufacturing establishments of the city are doing $160,000,000 worth of business annually, the dry goods trade alone amounting to $9,000,000, and the grocery trade to $6,000,000 yearly. Sixty thousand spindles are at work in her cotton mills, producing 20,000,000 yards annually, and five flouring mills are producing 7,500 barrels of flour daily. It is estimated that the population of Nashville, with her suburbs, is 150,000, while 10,000,000 people reside within a night's railroad ride of the place where the great Centennial exhibition of 1897 is to be held. Situated in the heart of the rich and fertile blue grass region of Tennessee, where the lands are generally under a high state of cultivation, where the people are endowed with unusual intelligence, where the scenery is picturesque, and the climate perfect any more suitable location for a second world's fair could not have been found.

No other city in the state, and no other city of the same population in any state, could have found a more beautiful spot for holding an exhibition, or have furnished the facilities for carrying the people to and from the grounds. The park is dotted over with shade trees, with a luxuriant growth of blue grass, beautified by thousands of evergreens, plants, shrubs and blooming flowers. Artistically terraced and divided by beautiful drives and walks and charming lakes, and yet made still more attractive and enchanting by the erection of buildings which represent art and history, science and education in all things worth knowing, it now becomes a little city, that nestles languidly and happily amid the hills—a veritable paradise, to which all the world is invited to come and enjoy its peaceful quietude while drinking at the fountain of knowledge within its portals. It is an ideal southern scene, where the world may behold the emblems of peace, the perfection of art, the progress of science, the evidences of prosperity, and at the same time enjoy genuine southern hospitality at its best.

NOISE OF BIG GUNS.

Its Effect Upon Nervous Hens—The Farmer's Mournful Tale.

The United States proving ground at Indian Head, on the Potomac below Washington, is in a shallow ravine, half a mile or more wide, and running back for a mile or so from the government wharf. Outside this depression, as the tale is told by veracious graduates of the naval academy who have been stationed at the post, there is a semi-circular belt some ten miles broad, where chicken raising is impossible. Within the ravine the ordinary hen of commerce lays eggs, and, if undisturbed in her intentions of domesticity, hatches them with only the usual vicissitudes to which hens and eggs are subject. The sharp, cracking bang of the big guns that are fired at heavy armor plates day after day does not disturb the process of incubation within the post. But the farmers in the adjacent country, north, east and south tell a unanimously mournful tale of "setting" after "setting" of selected eggs that have gone the melodorous way of eggs that are set upon and not hatched. Not an egg in all the belt, the farmers say, has developed a chicken since the proving ground was established. This failure of the eggs to do their duty is very naturally attributed by the farmers to the firing of the big guns; the rural citizens explain it by saying that the "noise makes the hens nervous." The officers have worked it out to their satisfaction that the fecundity of eggs within the depression and the lack of it in those without are due to the strength of the heavier sound waves that start from the muzzles of the guns. The first impact of these really big waves, they say, is well outside of the projecting hills about the station. The noise of the guns is far louder, they say, out beyond the hills than it is inside the ravine, with the guns right at hand. Outside, where the sound waves bump the earth hardest, they rattle the eggs into unproductivity. As to main facts and as to explanation, as was said above, this tale rests wholly upon the veracity of men trained to truthfulness in a school that is supposed to hold the virtue of George Washington above all others.—N. The One Thing That Was Needed.

Willie had swallowed a penny and his mother was in a state of much alarm. "Helen!" she called to her sister in the next room, "send for a doctor; Willie has swallowed a penny!" The terrified and frightened boy looked up imploringly. "No, mamma," he interposed; "send for the minister."

"The minister?" asked his mother, incredulously. "Did you say the minister?"

HARBOR OF HOME.

Type of Heaven When the Family Gathers Around.

A Beam Glows in the Window of the Sheltered Haven of Home—The Spot That is Brightest on Earth—Talmage's Word Pictures of the Ideal Fireside.

This sermon of Dr. Talmage will set many memories ringing with the good old times. Dr. Talmage's subject Sunday was: "Harbor of home," and the text, Mark v., 19, "Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee."

There are a great many people longing for some grand sphere in which to serve God. They admire Luther at the diet of worms, and only wish that they had some such opportunity in which to display their Christian prowess. They admire Paul making Felix tremble, and they only wish they had some such grand occasion in which to preach righteousness, temperance and judgment to come. All they want is an opportunity to exhibit their Christian heroism. Now the apostle comes to us and practically says: "I will show you a place where you can exhibit all that is grand and beautiful and glorious in Christian character, and that is the domestic circle."

If one is not faithful in an insignificant sphere he will not be faithful in a resounding sphere. If Peter will not help the cripple at the gate of the Temple he will never be able to preach 3,000 souls into the Kingdom at the Pentecost. If Paul will not take pains to instruct in the way of salvation the sheriff of the Philippian dungeon, he will never make Felix tremble. He who is not faithful in a skirmish would not be faithful in an Armageddon. The fact is, we are all placed in just the position in which we can most grandly serve God, and we ought not to be chiefly thoughtful about some sphere of usefulness which we may find awhile gain, but the all-absorbing question with you and me ought to be: "Lord, what wilt Thou have me (now and here) to do?"

There is one word in my text around which the most of our thoughts will to-day revolve. That word is Home. Ask ten different men the meaning of that word and they will give you ten different definitions. To one it means love at the hearth, it means plenty at the table, industry at the workstand, intelligence at the books, devotion at the altar. To him it means a greeting at the door and a smile at the chair. Peace hovering like wings. Joy clapping its hands with laughter. Life a tranquil lake. Pillowed on the ripples sleep the shadows.

Ask another man what home is, and he will tell you it is want, looking out of a cheerless fire grate and kneading hunger in an empty bread tray. The damp air shivering with curses. No Bible on the shelf. Children, robbers and murderers in embryo. Vile songs their lullaby. Every face a picture of ruin. Want in the background and sin staring from the front. No Sabbath wave rolling over that doorsill. Vestibule of the pit. Shadow of infernal walls. Furnace for forging everlasting chains. Fagots for an unending funeral pile. Awful word! It is spelled with curses, it weeps with ruin, it chokes with woe, it sweats with the death agony of despair.

The word "Home" in the one case means everything bright. The word "Home" in the other case means everything terrific.

I shall speak to you of home as a test of character, home as a refuge, home as a political safeguard, home as a school, and home as a type of Heaven.

And in the first place I remark that home is a powerful test of character. The disposition in public may be in gay costume, while in private it is in dishabille. As play actors may appear in one way on the stage and may appear in another way behind the scenes, so private character may be very different from public character. Private character is often public character turned wrong side out. A man may receive you into his parlor as though he was a distillation of smiles and yet his heart may be a swarm of nettles. There are business men who all day long are mild and courteous and genial and good natured in commercial life, keeping back their irritability and their petulance and their discontent, but at nightfall the dam breaks, and scolding pours forth in floods and freshets.

Reputation is only the shadow of character, and a very small house sometimes will cast a very long shadow. The lips may seem to drop myrrh and cassia, and the disposition to be as bright and warm as a sheaf of sunbeams, and yet they may only be a magnificent show window to a wretched stock of goods. There is many a man who is affable in public life amid commercial spheres, who, in a cowardly way, takes his anger and his petulance home and drops them in the domestic circle.

The reason men do not display their bad temper is because they do not wish to be knocked down. There are men who hide their petulance and their irritability just for the same reason that they do not let their notes go to protest; it does not pay. Or for the same reason that they do not want a man in their stock company to sell their stock at less than the right price, less it depreciate the value. As at sunset the wind rises, so after a sunshiny day there may be a tempestuous night. There are people who in public act the philanthropist who at home act the Nero with respect to their slippers and their gown.

Audubon, the great ornithologist, with gun and pencil, went through the forests of America to bring down and to sketch the beautiful birds, and after years of toil and exposure completed his manuscript and put it in a trunk in Philadelphia for a few days of recreation and rest, and came back and found that the rats had utterly destroyed the manuscript; but without any discomposure and without any fret or bad temper, he again picked up his gun and pencil and visited again all the great forests of America and reproduced his immortal work. And yet there are people with the ten-thousandth part of that loss who are utterly irreconcilable, who, at the loss of a pencil or an article of raiment, will blow as long and sharp as a northeast storm.

Now, that man who is affable in public and who is irritable in private is making a fraudulent overissue of stock, and he is as bad as a bank that might have four or five hundred thousand dollars of bills in circulation, with no specie in the vault. Let us learn "to show piety at home." If we have it there we have it not anywhere. If we have not genuine grace in the family circle our outward and public plausibility merely springs from a fear of the world or from the slimy, putrid pool of our own selfishness. I tell you the home is a mighty test of character. What you are at home you are everywhere, whether you demonstrate it or not.

Again, I remark that home is a refuge. Life is the United States army on the national road to Mexico; a long march with ever and anon a skirmish and a battle. At eventide we pitch our tent and stack our arms; we hang up the war cap and lay our head on the knapsack; we sleep until the morning bugle calls us to marching and action. How pleasant it is to rehearse the victories and the surprises and the attacks of the day, seated by the still camp fire of the home circle!

Yes, life is a stormy sea. With shivered masts and torn sails and hulls aleak, we put into the harbor of home. Blessed harbor, there we go for repairs in the dry dock of quiet life. The candle in the window is to the tolling man the lighthouse guiding him into port. Children go forth to meet their fathers as pilots at the Narrows take the hand of ships. The doorsill of home is the wharf where heavy life is unladen.

There is the place where we may talk of what we have done without being charged with self-adulation. There is the place where we may lounge without being thought ungraceful. There is the place where we may express affection without being thought silly. There is the place where we may forget our annoyances and exasperations and trouble. Forlorn earth pilgrim! no home? Then die. That is better. The grave is brighter and grander and more glorious than this world, with no tent from marching, with no harbor from the storm, with no place of repair from the scene of greed and gouge and loss and gain. God pity the man or woman who has no home!

Further, I remark, that home is a political safeguard. The state must be built on the safety of the home. The Christian hearthstone is the only corner stone of a republic. The virtues cultured in the family circle are an absolute necessity for the state. If there be not enough moral principle to make the family adhere, there will not be enough political principle to make the state adhere. "No home" means the Goths and Vandals, means the Nomads of Asia, means the Numidans of Africa, changing from place to place according as the pasture happens to change. Confounded be all those Babels of iniquity which would overtower and destroy the home. The same storm that upsets the ship in which the family sails, will sink the frigate of the constitution. Jails and penitentiaries and armies and navies are not our best defense. The door of the home is the best fortress. Household utensils are the best artillery, and the chimneys of our dwelling houses are the grandest monuments of safety and triumph. No home. No republic.

Further, I remark, that home is a school. Old ground must be turned up with subsoil plow, and it must be harrowed and reharrowed, and then the crop will not be as large as that of the new ground, with less culture. Now, youth and childhood are new ground, and all the influences thrown over their heart and life will come up in after life luxuriantly. Every time you have given a smile of approbation—all the good cheer of your life will come up again in the geniality of your children. And every ebullition of anger and every uncontrollable display of indignation will be fuel to their disposition 20 or 30 or 40 years from now—fuel for a bad fire a quarter of a century from this. You praise the intelligence of your child too much sometimes, when you think he is not aware of it, and you will see the result of it before ten years of age in his annoying affectations. You praise his beauty, supposing he is not large enough to understand what you say, and you will find him standing on a high chair before a flattering mirror. Words and deeds and example are the seeds of character, and children are very apt to be the second edition of their parents. Abraham begat Isaac, so virtue is apt to go down in the ancestral line; but Herod begat Archelaus, so iniquity is transmitted. What vast responsibility comes upon parents in view of this subject!

Oh, make your home the brightest place on earth, if you would charm your children to the high path of virtue and rectitude and religion! Do not always turn the blinds the wrong way. Let the light which puts gold on the gentian and spots the pansy pour into your dwellings. Do not expect the little feet to keep step to a dead march. Do not cover up your walls with such pictures as West's "Death on a Pale Horse," or Tintoretto's "Massacre of the Innocents." Rather cover them, if you have pictures, with "The Hawking Party," and "The Mill by the Mountain Stream," and "The Fox Hunt," and "The Children Amid Flowers," and "The Harvest Scene," and "The Saturday Night Marketers."

Get you no hint of cheerfulness from grasshopper's leap and lamb's frisk, and quail's whistle, and garrulous streamlet, which, from the rock at the the mountain top clear down to the meadow ferns under the shadow of the steep, comes looking for the steepest place to leap off at, and talking just to hear itself talk? If all the skies hurtled with tempest, and everlasting storm wandered over the sea, and every mountain stream went raging at the mouth with mad foam, and there were nothing but simoons blowing among the hills and there were neither lark's carol nor humming bird's trill, nor waterfall's dash, but only bear's bark, and panther's scream, and wolf's howl, then you might well gather into your homes only the shadows. But when God has strewn the earth and the heavens with beauty and with gladness, let us take into our home circle all innocent hilarity; all brightness and all good cheer. A dark home makes bad boys and bad girls, in preparation for bad men and bad women.

Above all, my friends, take into your homes Christian principle. Can it be that in any of the comfortable homes of my congregation the voice of prayer is never lifted? What! No supplication at night for protection? What! No thanksgiving in the morning for care? How, my brother, my sister, will you answer God in the day of judgment with reference to your children? It is a plain question, and therefore I ask it. In the tenth chapter of Jeremiah God says He will pour out His fury upon the families that call not upon His name. O parents, when you are dead and gone, and the moss is covering the inscription of the tombstone, will your children look back and think of father and mother at prayer? Will they take the old family Bible and open it and see the mark of tears of contrition and tears of consoling promise, wept by eyes long ago gone out in darkness? Oh, if you do not inculcate Christian principle in the hearts of your children, and you do not warn them against evil, and you do not invite them to holiness and to God, and they wander off into dissipation and into infidelity, and at last make shipwreck of their immortal souls, on their deathbed and in the day of judgment they will curse you! Seated by the register of the stove, what if on the wall should come out the history of your children? What a history—the mortal and immortal life of your loved ones! Every parent is writing the history of his child. He is writing it, composing it into a song or turning it into a groan.

My mind runs back to one of the best of early homes. Prayer, like a roof over it. Peace, like an atmosphere in it. Parents, personifications of faith in trial and comfort in darkness. The two pillars of that earthly home long ago crumbled to dust. But shall I ever forget that earthly home? Yes, when the mariner forgets the sun that warms it. Yes, when the mariner forgets the star that guided him. Yes, when love has gone out on the heart's altar and memory has emptied its urn into forgetfulness. Then, home of my childhood, I will forget thee; the family altar of a father's importunity and a mother's tenderness, the voice of affection, the funerals of one dead; father and mother, with interlocked arms like intertwining branches of trees making a perpetual arbor of love and peace and kindness—then I will forget thee—then, and only then. You know, my brother, that a hundred times you have been kept out of sin by the memory of such a scene as I have been describing. You have often had raging temptations, but you know what has held you with supernatural grasp. I tell you a man who has had such a good home as that never gets over it, and a man who has had a bad early home never gets over that.

Again, I remark that home is a type of Heaven. To bring us to that home Christ left His home. Far up and far back in the history of Heaven there came a period when its most illustrious citizen was about to absent Himself. He was not going to sail from beach to beach; we have often done that. He was not going to put out from one hemisphere to another hemisphere; many of us have done that. But He was going to sail from world to world, the spaces unexplored and immensities untraveled. No world had ever hailed Heaven, and Heaven had never hailed any other world. I think that the windows and the balconies were thronged, and that the pearly beach was crowded with those who had come to see Him sail out of the harbor of light into the oceans beyond. Out and out and out and on and on and on and down and down he sped, until one night, with only one to meet Him, He arrived. He disembarked so unpretending, so quiet, that it was not known on earth until the excitement in the cloud gave intimation that something grand and glorious had happened. Who comes there? From what port did He sail? Why was this the place of His destination? I question the shepherds, I question the camel drivers, I question the angels. I have found out. He was an exile. But the worlds has had plenty of exiles. Abraham, an exile from Ur of the Chaldees; John, an exile from Ephesus; Kosciusko, an exile from Poland; Mazzini, an exile from Rome; Emmet, an exile from Ireland; Victor Hugo, an exile from France; Kossuth, an exile from Hungary. But this one of whom I speak to-day had such resounding farewell and came into such chilling reception for not even a hostler went out with his lantern to help Him in—that He is more to be celebrated than any other expatriated one of earth or Heaven.

THE farmers in a number of northern Indiana counties have perfected no organization whereby it is agreed not to purchase any farm implements this year. A system of exchange has been agreed upon. The leaders in the movement disclaim the establishment of a boycott on manufacturers or dealers, and declare the organization is the outgrowth of business and financial depression.

RUSSIAN thistles, a patch of which have flourished for some time near Whipple, A. T., have overgrown well-trodden paths there and made them impassable either for men or animals. The thistles of this plot are said to be the only ones in Arizona, and the people urge that they be exterminated before they become a pest everywhere in the territory.

ONE NEW-YEAR'S.

Reception of a President That Wasn't Held in the White House.

"There was one New Year's reception held by the president in the city," said a local historian, "which was not held in the white house. Though the event is seldom referred to, it is a fact all the same. The reception I speak of, though the function then generally went by the name of levee, was given by President Madison on New Year's day, 1815, in the Octagon, at the corner of Eighteenth street and New York avenue. The British in 1814 having burned the white house, President Madison moved over to the Octagon house, which was owned by Col. John Tayloe. He spent over five months there. All who attended the levee have long since passed away, but it has been my good fortune in past years to have talked to several gentlemen who were present. They describe it as a very elegant affair. All the expenses of the levee were paid out of Col. Tayloe's pocket, that gentleman being enormously wealthy and liberal as well. His income was said to be at that time $75,000."

AN INTERMITTENT HEART.

Stopped Every Third Beat.

But Mrs. Strope's Heart Now No Longer Lags But Throbs Regularly.

From the Leader, Cleveland, Ohio.

In a large, commodious house at No. 104 Huntington Street, Cleveland, Ohio, lives Mrs. Emily A Strope, widow of the late X. M. Strope, and she is the mother of a young man who has been, and is now one of this city's successful and energetic pharmacists. Mrs. Strope who has lately recovered from serious cardiac difficulty when questioned by a reporter regarding her late illness stated as follows:

"Two years ago, I had my first experience with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. For a long time I was troubled with an ailment which I feared would eventually drive me crazy or leave me a physical wreck. It was indeed strange, no doubt, to some, but my heart did not beat as it should. Its action was irregular. There would be two pulsations, or perhaps three, and then a sudden cessation. My heart seemed to rest for the period of one or two beats, and then resume its action. Sometimes such lapses would not be frequent as that, but scarcely a day passed that they did not occur. It felt as though something would strike the heart with great force, and push it out of place. During the period, whenever I lay down to sleep or rest, my hands would become perfectly numb and helpless. I could feel the temporary paralysis coming over them, but I could do nothing which would prevent it. My feet were affected in a like manner, and I had considerable difficulty in walking when such a spell had possession of me. Naturally that state of affairs completely upset my nerves, and any one whose nervous system is well will shuddering can appreciate and understand the misery, chiefly mental, which I endured. I lost much sleep and rest, and often I was compelled from sheer exhaustion to sit down during the day to obtain some repose. But as soon as I did so I felt that numb sensation come over my hands and feet, and I rocked violently in my chair to drive it away, but frequently to no avail.

"One day, my son who was keeping a drug store at the time, brought me home some of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and advised me to take them for my heart trouble. I did so and soon began to feel better. I used the pills about two months and they certainly cured me, for now my heart beats regularly and all numbness has disappeared and my circulation is in splendid order."

We print the above hoping Mrs. Strope's experience may be beneficial to others who may suffer from derangement of the heart.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female. They are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Henry Johnson, a well-known young man of McCracken county, became suddenly blind while sitting before the fire, and nothing has served to restore his sight.

Daniel Garhart, of Madison county, was chopping wood, when his ax caught in a wire clothes line, rebounding, striking him in the forehead splitting his skull open.

W. H. Darnell, of Hardin, Marshall County, writes to the Paducah Visitor: "I am fifteen years of age and weigh 180 pounds, and I am six feet six inches high with my shoes off."

T. D. Hargis, of Marshall county, is dead, aged eighty-five years. He was a magistrate for sixty years and had married 1900 couples. His court docket shows 2000 judgments which were never reversed by the higher courts.

Mrs. Betsy Beeswick, aged 94 years, died in Mercer county last week. Until very recently her faculties were as clear as in youth. She died in a mile and a half of the place where she was born, and never saw a railroad.

The State Treasurer says that he does not know how long he will pay current bills, and he has already stopped paying old warrants. John Thomas had his eyes blown out and Joe Ritchie had a leg blown off by a premature explosion of a blast in a stone quarry on Spring Hill near Frankfort.

A fight in which six or seven men took part occurred in the office at the Frankfort penitentiary last Thursday. The furniture of the office was badly broken up.

Rumor has it that at least two State institutions have asked the Governor to so mention them in his proclamation calling the extra session that they can ask for additional appropriations.

The penitentiary shops that have been under construction for some time will be completed this week. The machinery is being arranged, and before the last of the month every able-bodied convict in Kentucky will be at work.

Vince Clark, 15, of Coy, Marshall County, made himself a gun of a gas pipe and a piece of wood. When he attempted to fire the weapon the load flew backward, instead of forward. Both the boy's eyes were blown out, and his face was horribly maimed.

W. W. Evans, of Bowling Green, has sued the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company for $15,000 damages, because they put him on their black list, after the strike of three years ago. He claims the fact has prevented him from securing employment or holding a position any length of time after he does secure one.

Mr. J. M. Wilson, Jr., the popular editor of The Log Cabin, is an applicant for the position of postmaster at Cynthiana. Capt. J. M. Wilson is an applicant at Falmouth, Dr. Wilson at Williamstown, and a son of his is an applicant at London. What's the matter with the Wilsons? They're all right, all right.—Cynthiana Democrat.

The first stage coach ever used on the old Cumberland Gap wagon road across Cumberland mountains and along Yellow creek is still kept as a relic by an old blacksmith in Lee county, Va. The old coach was drawn by four horses, but it is a load by itself for four horses in these days. It has a cushion on the driver's seat made of buffalo hide, tanned.

Despondent over the shame of her position and the notoriety given to her, Miss Lydia Carver, the victim of an assault last week near Fulton, has already made one attempt at suicide and it is feared that she will repeat the effort to kill herself. Her father has offered a reward for the capture of his daughter's assailant. It is now believed that the guilty party was a white man with his face blacked.

The Republican administration at Louisville seems to be now sitting on a pretty hot stove. All kinds of unlawful acts have been proven against them, and will no doubt, cause several to board awhile in the State Hotel here. Alderman DeGarmo, it seems, has acknowledged that he received a bribe of $25, but his attorney is trying to get him off on the plea that it was taken "unintentionally." Mayor Todd should feel disgusted with his associates and immediately resign.—Argus.

The Advocate tells of one of Mt. Sterling's citizens who, though not so young as he used to be, has a supply of energy that would be a fortune in itself to many a younger man: "J. G. Trimble, Sr., will in June be seventy-four years old. He was visiting in Hazel Green during the severe cold spell. He left Hazel Green on Saturday morning, when the thermometer was 6 degrees below zero, and rode horse-back to this city, a distance of forty-two miles, made a social call in the evening and next day appeared as active and vigorous as a young man. He is a fine horseman and is at home in the saddle."

The Stanford Interior Journal tells of a Lincoln county man who seems to be equal to any emergency: "The other night a man was put in jail here so dead drunk that he did not know when it was done. When he awoke the next morning and began to inquire 'where he was at,' the prisoners, having decided to have a little fun out of him, told him that he had been put in jail for killing a certain person. He wouldn't believe it till Frank Brooks, from the second floor, hallooed down: 'Is that man dead—shot last night?' Then, realizing the situation, he blurted: 'I swear to God he shot at me twice before I shot at all.'"

Mr. Henry Singer, a well known and thrifty farmer, of near Duvall Station, in this county, has for the past two years been domesticating the ground hog with much success. Mr. Singer found a burrow in which he captured 17 ground hogs, and, taking them to a small lot on his place, he built a close wire fence through which none could escape. Last year the hogs increased to 205, and last Fall there were 1,673. Of this number Mr. Singer killed 1,000, which he has salted away and will smoke dry, as Kentucky farmers do with ordinary pork. The ground hog when so cured is a great delicacy, and Mr. Singer has more than enough to furnish his meat for the coming year.—Georgetown News.

As we go to press we regret to say that S. L. Scott, our much esteemed citizen and popular County Court Clerk, is very low, his condition being worse than it ever has been before. His ailment, as is well understood, is pulmonary trouble, and the gravest fears are entertained that he will not be with us more than a day or two.

The following well known farmers of Upper Whites Run sold tobacco this week to Thompson Calvert for Mr. Barker at the prices stated: A. T. Tandy, 8 cts; W. J. Spicer, 8 cts; A. T. Spicer, 8 cts; Chas. Baird, 8 cts; T. H. Davis, whole crop, 7 and 2½; J. H. Spicer, whole crop, 8 and 2.

Mrs. Wm. Nevill, better known as Aunt Peggy, had the misfortune to get her clothes on fire last week during the cold weather, while standing in front of the fire. She ran to the door. The blaze was leaping above her head. She screamed for help, and Granville Johnston who happened to be near the house, rad to her rescue. He burned his hands very badly in putting the fire out. Had it not been for him the old lady would have burned to death.

Warsaw has lost another of its valuable citizens in the death of H. T. Chambers, who died at his home here Monday morning, at 7 o'clock. He became ill a couple of months ago with an affection of the bowels, and at first it was thought he would soon recover. An operation was performed for the removal of a small tumor and he was given every attention by the best of physicians hoping that he would soon be strong and well. Blood poisoning had already begun and it was impossible to arrest its serious consequences. The blow was a severe one to his many friends, and family.

John W. Brammell was arrested at Hallam and brought before County Judge Lee upon the charge of bigamy, which he confessed and went to jail in default of $500 bail. He recently married Miss Nannie Smith, but had left a wife at Swallowfield.

The Fiscal Court has completed the purchase of the following turnpikes in this county: Owenton and Stamping Ground, 16 miles, $2,932; Owenton and Gratz, 9 miles, $3,270,80; Owenton and Sparta, 12 3-4 miles, $17,850; New Liberty and Sanders, 4 miles, $5,600; Maddox and Jonesville, deed not quite completed; New Liberty branch (Garnett) and road from Sparta pike at first toll-gate to New Liberty, $272 less repairs to be made; Jonesville and Glencoe (Cortes), $960 less repairs, to be inspected.

The receipts at the Cincinnati tobacco market last week was not heavy, and the stocks in the warehouses were decreased. The sales during the week were very satisfactory, and the demand was steadier than for a long time. There was a marked advance in all the low grades except the very meanest. A continuation of the activity is expected, and a good, steady market is predicted by the warehousemen.

The Saturday Bulletin, published in Aurora, has changed its form and is now a six column quarto, and much improved in appearance. The Bulletin is a well edited paper.

The ground-hog winter, if such this be, is a very unpleasant one.

Dr. Hunter has been accused of entering into all sorts of deals arising out of the Senatorial situation in this State, and at last he has become enraged and arises to denounce the untruths that have been set afloat for the purpose of injuring him. The more Hunter's enemies try to squelch him, politically, the more formidable he becomes, and his call to Canton, last week, almost broke their hearts.

It is said that Mr. Hanna uses the pronoun "we" when speaking of Mr. McKinley.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1897. NO. 17.

THE last opinion in the Jackson-Walling case has been stolen.

J. M. LASSING will attend the meeting of the Southern Building Association at Knoxville, Tenn., on March 4th, in the interest of several clients.

SOME enterprising reporter has discovered that Gov. Bradley and Hon. John W. Yerkes do not speak as they pass by, but Gov. Bradley and Mr. Yerkes, who surely are posted in regard to the matter, say that there is no trouble between them.

One hundred and fifty men rode into Vanceburg last Saturday to the residence of the County Judge and informed him that they had just traveled twenty-five miles of turnpike road and had removed five toll-gates. Nobody was arrested, and nobody seemed to be afraid of arrest.

HON. C. J. BRONSTON, of Lexington, and Miss Belle Wisdom, of Paducah, were married in St. Louis, last Saturday evening. They were to marry last May, but the event was postponed on account of the serious illness of the bride. Mr. Bronston is a leading lawyer and politician in Lexington.

JOHN D. CARROLL, of Eminence, and a recent candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Ashland District, has declared in favor of protection. The peculiarity about his protection theory is he wants protection to begin anew and commence among the farmers. That is a pretty good idea.

IN this issue Mr. G. W. Hoard, of Beaver, is announced as a candidate for Assessor. He is as good a Democrat and as clever a gentleman as lives in Boone county. He has devoted all his life to farming, and is now, for the first time, asking his party for an office. If elected he will fill the office acceptably to all.

IN the candidate column will be found the announcement of Thos. G. Willis as a candidate for Assessor. Mr. Willis, a life-long Democrat, is asking his party for the first time to honor him with an office. He is well qualified for the position to which he aspires, and will fill it satisfactorially to the people if elected.

THE Court of Appeals has handed down its opinion, refusing Jackson and Walling a rehearing by that tribunal, and their only hope now of escaping the scaffold is through the Governor's pardon, which is a very slender thread upon which to depend. It is generally believed that Governor Bradley will refuse to commute their sentence to imprisonment.

SENATOR GOEBEL, of Covington, is being boomed for the next Democratic nomination for Governor. He has many warm friends in every part of the State, and they are in dead earnest when they speak of him in connection with the Governorship. Senator Goebel would not only make an excellent Governor but as a Democratic candidate he would unite all the factions of the party and pull down an old time Democratic victory.

RICHARD R. QUAY, son of Senator Quay, has been arrested at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, charged with criminal libel. The charge was preferred by State Senators C. L. Magee and William Flyn, who claim that he caused to be published an article stating that they sold out to Hanna in the McKinley canvass. It is said that in the defense of his son Senator Quay may give away some of the most important secrets of the last national campaign, and, thereby cause considerable trouble among some of the Republicans. If there is any danger of that the case will never come to a trial.

MR D. E. CASTLEMAN, Chairman of the Judicial District Committee, has called a meeting of the committee at this place on the 23d inst., for the purpose of perfecting the call of the committee. At the meeting held in Walton early last month, the committee adjourned for dinner, and before Mr. Castleman returned from his dinner, the other members of the committee met and appointed a member to draw up the order to conform to the points agreed upon, and then adjourned and left on the train for Cincinnati, except Dr. Scott. Mr. Castleman has written twice to the members to whom was delegated the authority to draw up the order, for the order but has been unable to get an answer to any of his letters, and has concluded that his only remedy is to reconvene the committee.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, February 13th, 1897.

The country is indebted to the Democrats in Congress for their promptness in frightening the Republicans from carrying out a scheme which might have upset the country and made no end of trouble had it once been started. This scheme was the contemplated objection to the counting of the vote of South Carolina, when Congress assembled in joint convention to count the electoral votes, by the negro member of the House from that state. Just as soon as the intention to make this objection was known, the Democrats in Congress informed the Republicans that if the objection was made and sustained by either branch of Congress they might as well abandon all idea of inaugurating McKinley, and that the count of the electoral votes would not be allowed to proceed. As soon as the Republican leaders ascertained that the Democrats were in dead earnest they repudiated the scheme, and put all the responsibility upon "that fool-nigger," who was made to announce that he had changed his mind about objecting to the counting of the vote of South Carolina. Congress counted the votes all right and there was no trouble, but had not the Democrats been prompt in showing their resentment the vote of South Carolina would have been protested and thrown out—not to help McKinley, but as the first step towards turning the State over to the negroes and others who thrived under the notorious Chamberlain-House regime.

The latest estimate is that the number of gold Democratic postmasters, whose nominations will be left unacted upon by the Senate will exceed 200. Some of these were recess appointments and are now filling the offices to which they were nominated, but they will have to step out as soon as McKinley nominates their successors and the Senate confirms them, and the silver Senators will do their part towards preventing delay in such cases.

* * *

The Governor of Arkansas evidently loses no opportunity to let the world know where that State stands on the financial question. The credentials of Senator Jones for his new term beginning March 4th, this week presented to the Senate, have the name of the State conspicuously printed across the top in silver letters and the great seal of the State is also silver. And Senator Jones is proud of his connection with a State which is so thoroughly devoted to silver, just as the State has shown its pride in keeping such a champion in the Senate.

* * *

President Cleveland ought to be getting used to having his vetoes overruled by Congress by this time. The bill making changes in the Eastern Judicial district of Texas, which had the support of the entire Texas delegation in Congress, is now a law notwithstanding a veto, and the House this week passed two private pension bills over vetoes. It is not surprising that Mr. Cleveland should have remarked that he had no influence with Congress.

* * *

A delegation of Michigan lumbermen who think their interests will best be "protected" by not increasing the duty on white pine lumber are in Washington to protest against the increase which the Republicans of the Ways and Means Committee have decided to make. These gentlemen do not hesitate to state their reasons for opposing an increase of duty on white pine lumber. They own extensive stumping privileges in Canada and fear that if the duty is increased that, in addition to their having to pay the duty, the Canadians may as a retaliation for the increase of duty impose a crown tax on stumpage privileges. Another proof that the whole principle of "protection" is based upon individual self-interest without regard to general good.

To the Democratic voters of Boone County:

It has been reported over the county that I want the County Infirmary in connection with the jail. Such is not the case. If I am elected jailer I will live in the town of Burlington within the distance of the jail the law requires.

The Grant County Circuit Court was in Session, when the death of Judge Montfort was announced, and Judge Green adjourned court for the day, and the bar held a meeting, and adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas, The Hon. Warren Montfort, who was born in Switzerland county, Indiana, on the——day of——1837, and lived in Kentucky since his early boyhood, departed his life at his home in Pineville, Ky., on the first day of February, 1897. And

Whereas, The deceased was for four years a soldier in the Confederate army, and afterwards Commonwealth's Attorney from 1874 to 1880, and Circuit Judge of this Judicial District from 1886 to 1892, and afterwards an active member of this bar until he removed to Pineville. Therefore be it

Resolved, By the assembled bar of the Grant Circuit Court that in his death the people of the whole State have lost an honorable, amiable and useful citizen. One who as a soldier was brave and devoted to the cause of his country, and the welfare of the men under his command.

As Commonwealth's Attorney he was able, faithful and true to all his official obligations. During his administration as Circuit Judge he brought to the discharge of his laborous and manifold duties a strong, vigorous intellect. A sincere love of justice and a patient, dignified and courteous demeanor to the bar, and combined in an eminent degree the qualities of a great and successful Judge.

As a lawyer he was faithful to the interests of his clients and fearless in the protection of their rights yet always affable, courteous and kind to the members of the bar.

As a neighbor and friend he was faithful and generous, an affectionate husband, and a kind, loving and devoted parent.

He was a patriot, loved his country, and labored to promote its welfare.

In his death we all suffer a personal bereavement, and hereby testify our profound respect for his character and services, and tender to his afflicted family and friends such consolation as the memory of his many noble qualities affords.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread at large upon the order book of the Grant Circuit Court, and a copy presented to the family of the deceased, and the various newspapers of his old District and the Louisville Courier-Journal be requested to publish them. Court adjourned in respect of deceased. All of which is respectfully submitted.

Date of Primary Election Changed to June 5, 1897.

Pursuant to the call of the Chairman of the county Democratic Executive committee, the committee met in D. E. Castleman's law office in Burlington, last Monday afternoon. The following members were present: D. E. Castleman, chairman; B. L. Rice, Secretary, P. E. Cason, proxy for Elijah Parker; Reuben Conner, Richard Stephens, Robt. McGlasson, Geo. Ossman, proxy for J. C. Hughes.

The chairman stated the object of the meeting to be for the purpose of considering the propriety of changing the date of the primary election as fixed at the last meeting. A motion to reconsider the action of the committee on the second Monday in December was made and carried, and the order made on that date is now held for naught.

It was agreed by the committee to hold a primary election to nominate candidates for the various county offices to be filled at the regular election in November, 1897. It was further agreed that said primary election be held on the first Saturday in June, 1897, and the Executive Committee will meet in the Court-house in Burlington, at 2 o'clock p. m., on Monday, June 7th, 1897, and count the votes cast for each candidate for the respective offices, and the candidate receiving the highest number of votes cast for any office will be declared the Democratic nominee for that office.

The committee adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That all persons who voted for Bryan and Sewall at the last November election, and all persons who did not vote but would have voted for Bryan and Sewall had they voted, and all young men who will be legal voters at the next November election, and will pledge themselves to support the Democratic party and the nominees of said primary election, shall be allowed to vote.

Resolved, That all persons who desire to be candidates before said primary election shall, on or before the 5th day of April, 1897, record their names with the chairman of the county committee, and pay their assessments to him.

Resolved, That only such candidates who pay their assessments to defray the expenses of said primary election, on or before the fifth day of April, 1897, shall be entitled to have their name placed upon the ballots to be voted for.

Resolved, That all candidates for precinct offices and for Coroner who wish their names to appear upon the ballots for said primary, shall pay to the chairman of the county committee one dollar, to help pay the expenses of said primary election.

The chairman and secretary were authorized to assess the candidates to defray the expenses of the primary election.

B. L. RICE, Secretary.

Walling, it is believed, will make a confession, soon.

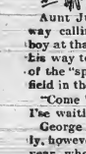
CROSSING THE DELAWARE

AND so, you'd have me tell the tale
My father oft told me!
A story of the days when pale
Hope fled, and misery
Stood stark and grim before that band
Of men beyond compare—
The tale of Washington the grand,
Who crossed the Delaware!

One Christmas night, long years ago,
When shrilly cold winds blew,
And through the darkened air the snow
On frozen pinions flew,
A little band of patriot souls
Stood brave and fearless where
In ickness and anger rolls
The fretful Delaware.

Nor ice, nor storm, nor cruel blast
Can hold these heroes back;
They have resolved; the die is cast
For freedom's cause! A track
Of blood upon the snow they've left
From shoeless feet and bare—
Of all life's comforts they're bereft,
Beside the Delaware.



But "Onward! Onward!" is the word
Their brave commander speaks.
When thro' the storm his voice is heard
Each son of freedom seeks
To do his bidding; put aside
Is every woe and care—
There's vict'ry o'er the icy tide,
Across the Delaware.

On through the gloomy, stormy night
With hardships dire they cope—
"For God, and native land, and right!"
Their watchword and their hope;
Until at last, all cold and dark,
They greet the morning clare;
Safe thro' the tide they've reached the bank
Across the Delaware.

And then, nine miles beyond they go,
With steady, solemn tread,
To where the hired Hessian foe
Sleep in their drunken bed.
Aroused from dissipation's doze
In wild surprise they stare,
And conquered, give their swords to those
Who crossed the Delaware.

This, children, is the story true
Of noble, fearless men;
And may its lesson be to you
A guide and solace when
Storms hover near, my brave grandson,
And you, granddaughter fair—
Press onward, till the victry's won
Across Life's Delaware.
—George V. Hobart, in N. Y. Herald.

George Washington's "BUFDAY."

"GEORGE WASHIN'-TON! You George Washin'ton, you! Ef you don' come 'long here when I call yer I'll take a bresh broom ter yer, sah, dat I will!"

Aunt June stood in the cabin doorway calling, shrilly and sharply, to a boy at that moment reluctantly making his way to the cabin from the direction of the "spring branch" that skirted the field in the low ground.

"Come 'long here, sah! Don' you see I'se waiting?"

George Washington obeyed reluctantly, however; for it was the season of the year when trout were biting. The small rod and bucket that he carried told, silently, the story of an interrupted minnow excursion, preparatory to a day's fishing in Duck river.

His mother wore her best dress, a bright magenta skirt and a brown worsted waist; a bonnet of curious shape and colors, and a pair of very white, home-knit gloves. A long, brown barege veil floated majestically from the bows and blossoms of her bonnet.

A large market-basket and a tin bucket covered with a clean white cloth stood on the doorstep; a crazy little cart with a white mule nodding between the shafts waited at the gate. In lieu of leather reins a white cotton rope passed from the bridle bit to the seat upon which Aunt June was preparing to mount.

"Is yer goin' ter town, mammy?" said George Washington, with a rueful glance in the direction of the waiting wagon. His black face expressed better than words his heart's disappointment at the unexpected disarranging of his plans.

"Co'se I'se gwine ter town! How's de butter gwine git dar ef I ain' fetch it? Hucome yer reckin hit's gwine walk dis day, stidder waiting fur me ter fetch it same's udder days? You'll ter stay right in here wid de baby till I git back. Does yer hear? Ef de baby cries gib her de biscuit on de she'f; and don' let her fall in de fiah. Does yer hear me? Why'n yer answer me, George Washin'ton?"

"Yessum," said the boy, "I hears yer;" and with a glance at the little black bundle squatted upon the floor "Wash," as he was called on ordinary occasions, began to whimper.

Since the baby was born he had been its nurse; not a willing one always, but always a faithful one. To-day, for the first time, the rebellion took a tearful turn.

"Shet up, I tell yer, and ten' ter dat chile. Po' little sister; ain' yer shame yerse'f?"

"Won't yer fetch me a stick of striped candy?" sobbed Wash, seeking to make the best of an unpleasant duty.

"I'll fetch a stick ter stripe yer back ef I hear anudder word fum yer; see ef I don't. Shet up, I tell yer."

If the rebellion was bitter, it was short-lived. Before the crazy little wagon had creaked out of sight Wash was squatted beside his sister, industriously stuffing her with the big biscuit that had been provided for her refreshment.

Aunt June, sailing into the county town in all the grandeur of her own turnout, soon forgot all about the children in the cabin at home. George Washington was to be relied upon, she knew, and so she gave herself no further uneasiness on the subject.

Aunt June always went to town in style. The big basket went along for style, too, for Aunt June was not neglectful of her reputation, which was large among her acquaintance. The curious old bonnet bobbed many a mild "good morning," as the old mule jogged along the lanes or the white turnpike. As she neared the town, however, the bows became less cordial and a trifle—just a trifle—condescending. The reason was soon made known to the white mule.

"Dese trifling town niggers!" she muttered, "Dey-all 'nd ruther lay about town in rags, and go ha'f-starved, ez ter go ter the country, whar dey's plenty ter eat and drink, too. De lazy lot ob 'em! Jest look at 'em—eight erclock in de mawning, and not a bressed thing ter do!"

Aunt June was a thrifty soul, as was Uncle Jake, her "ole man." There were seven pounds of fresh, yellow butter in the tin pail at her feet, in exchange for which she would bring many a comfort to the cabin that she and Jake had bought with their own savings; the deed of it was safely registered in the clerk's office in town.

Aunt June scowled, grunted, and then sighed for the less fortunate ones of her race; but as she said, the town negro had no love for the quiet country life that had been her prosperity.

The wagon had passed through the last tollgate when Aunt June spied an acquaintance among some workmen who were repairing a bridge over which her team must pass. She pulled up the mule and beckoned the man to her. He came promptly, and stood with his hand upon the mule's back while passing the compliments of the day.

"How you do, Mis' Pennin'ton?" said he. "I ain' see you in a long time."

"I'se toler'ble," was the reply. "You-alls well?"

"Toler'ble. Gwine ter town dis mawning, Mis' Pennin'ton?"

"Yes, sah. I hab some butter ter fetch in, and some groc'ries ter fetch out. 'Pears lack dey-alls at home keeps me toler'ble busy gwine in town fur groc'ries; but Jake and de chillen am hearty, and so am I; so we ought ter be thankful fur that. I tell 'em."

"Yessuh, dat you ought. Plenty hab got de health and de appetite what ain't got de groc'ries, I tell yer, Mis' Pennin'ton. Dat dey is."

"Dat am a fac'," said Aunt June, giving the big basket a turn. "'Pears lack you-all's toler'ble busy ter-day."

Aunt June straightened herself with a jerk:

"What dat you say? Hit's whose bufday?"

"What dat you saying?" demanded Aunt June, uncertain whether to take the man seriously and be angry, or whether to laugh at him for a joker.

The man grinned and patted the white mule's back. "Yessuh, hit am George Washin'ton's bufday. He 'wuz—'

"Shet up! You reckin I don't know what he wuz? Yer think I ain't got a scrap of sense. Telling me 'bout George Washin'ton's bufday? I say it!"

"I heerd it ober in town," said the negro.

"Des listen at dat, will somebody?" cried Aunt June. "What town got ter do wid George Washin'ton, I'd lack ter know? Talking 'bout de town saying hit 'uz George Washin'ton's bufday!"

The negro broke into a laugh. "Well," said he, "it am de sho' fac'. Dey say—"

"Shet yo' mouf. I don' want hear none yo' big talk. I wonder ef yer takes me fur a fool, or a what? Letting on I don' know when's George Washin'ton's bufday! Hit ain' ter-morrer, I tell yer. Ter-morrer ain' no mo' his bufday dan it's mine. I reckon I ought ter know when George Washin'ton wuz bawn. I reckin I wuz dar at de bawning."

The negro broke into a laugh so loud that his fellow-workmen looked from their work to smile encouragingly, and wonder what had tickled him so. He stumbled back to them bent almost double, and holding his sides with both hands, laughing until the tears chased each other down his dark, furrowed cheeks.

To him it was a great joke. He supposed Aunt June had merely disputed the question in order to prove herself not lacking in the general knowledge of the day. But when she stated, "as a clincher," he said afterward, that she "was there," the joke became so funny that he could not contain himself.

The mule started off rather briskly, but not too briskly to let Aunt June hear the parting shot from the bridge:

"Look out, folksea; look out. Dar goes de ol'est 'oman in de worl'. Look at her well. You ain' gwine nebber had no sech chance ter see sech a ole 'oman agin in dis worl'. De ol'est 'oman in de worl'—ef de troof wuz all told."

"SHET UP, I TELL YER, AN' TEN' TER DAT CHILE!"

Aunt June's anger had cooled somewhat when she reached the store at which she did her trading. The butter was weighed and she began selecting supplies in exchange for it. If she was slow the merchant was patient; for Aunt June's butter was of the best, and there was always a demand for it. There were 40 cents to be traded out when the town clock in the courthouse steeple struck 12.

"Lor, marster," she declared, "I'm 'bleeged ter g'long back home. Hit am twelbe erclock and de chillen ain' got a bite ter eat. I'll be 'bleeged ter come back and finish ter-morrer."

"You'll have to get through to-day, Aunt June," said the merchant. "The store will be closed to-morrow; it is George Washington's birthday."

Aunt June dropped the hank of yellow yarn she had been fingering for some minutes. "Marster," she exclaimed, "who tole you dat?"

"Who told me? Why, I don't know. Everybody knows that; it is in all the papers."

The black face wore a puzzled expression. "Yer don' sesso."

"Why, yes," said the merchant, smiling, "why shouldn't it be? We all love George Washington, Aunt June."

"Yes, sah; yes, sah; sholy; ter—be sho'."

She finished her trading and went out to arrange her packages in the cart; she was puzzled; she didn't at all understand what it all meant; yet there was a pleasant something about it, too.

"Dat chile sholy been and done something and not let on ter we-alls, his pappy and me," was her thought. Then in her honest old heart she felt a twinge of regret for her anger at the bridge; she wondered if the old negro could have been right after all.

"But naw," she mused, "hit couldn't 'a' been in de winter time he wuz bawn. I 'members hit wuz in de summer, bekase Jake wuz threshing wheat dat day. And dey wuz cabbage fur dinner, fur Lize Ann come ober and cooked it. Naw, sah, dey-all am sholy wrong."

At that instant a gentleman to whom the woman and her team were familiar, passing at the moment, called out pleasantly to her:

"Hello, Aunt June! Must be going to celebrate George Washington's birthday from the number of your packages. Been buying yourself rich?"

There it was again, George Washington's birthday; she heard it everywhere. The very banks would be closed, she heard somebody say; and the post office would be open but an hour all day. Clearly it was George Washington's birthday.

To be perfectly sure about it, however, she determined to step around to "Marse Tom's office," and ask about it. Marse Tom was one her husband's old master, and he would be pretty sure to tell her the truth.

"Marse Tom," said she, thrusting her head in a moment at the door, "what am de incasion ob all de ineitement in de town ter-morrer?"

"It is George Washington's birthday, Aunt June. Come in and get warm," said the master, without looking up from the paper he was busily preparing for the court that would convene the next week. But Aunt June was gone; she went straight back to the grocery.

"Ef dey's all detarmint ter hab it so, I reckon it am got ter be so," she declared; and she bought back a pound of the butter she had sold, two pounds of cheese, and a dozen sticks of striped peppermint candy.

"Ef ev'ybody else ain' gwine begrudge de chile de celebrating, I reckin 'holy his own mammy ain' gwine do dat," she said. "Tse gwine straight home and kill a hin."

She felt relieved in crossing the bridge to find the workman gone.

"I don' want hear no more of that nigger's mouf," said she. "Lack ez not he'll be thinking I don' know de bufday ob my own chillen."

She made several convenient stops on the way home, however, and at each stop explained why she was imposing so upon the mule.

"Dey's a lot of things in de cart, to be sho," said she. "But hit am George Washin'ton's bufday."

And for the life of her she couldn't help saying it just as the people in town had said it; as something that everybody ought to know. Whether these knew or not she was not able to divine, since the same reply met her at each repetition of the announcement: "Yessum."

She was planning a great feast; she meant to make a cake and stuff it with raisins. "He ain' no onery nigger, dat boy ain't," said she, as the white mule plodded patiently homeward.

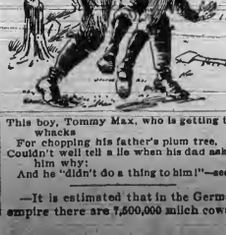
Little Wash couldn't understand his sudden rise to greatness, though he very cheerfully washed the potatoes, killed and picked the hen, and was told that he might beat the whites for a cake the next day.

"A cake fur yo' bufday dinner, son," his mother told him.

That night when his father came home Aunt June asked him if he couldn't get off from his work next day and eat dinner at home.

"Hit am George Washin'ton's bufday," she explained again in the town tone. "I done been gitting de chile up a bit of nice victuals."

Uncle Jake scratched his head and pondered. "Ole 'oman," said he, after a pause, "you's mistookin, honey, 'bout dat. Ter-morrer ain' Wash's bufday. Wash 'uz bawned in de summer time. Don' yer riekerliet de threshing?"



"Yes, sah, dat I does. But de town folks dey all say ter-morrer 'uz George Washin'ton's bufday. Dey all wouldn't hab it no udder way. De very niggers on de pike say it 'uz George Washin'ton's bufday. And seeing they wouldn't hab it no udder way I jest stepped round ter Marse Tom's office and ax him. Kase I know ef Marse Tom say it so, it am so. So I put my head in de do' and says I: 'Marse Tom, what's ter do ter-morrer?' or something mighty lack dat. And says he: 'Hit am George Washin'ton's bufday.' Den I come 'long and kilt a hin; kase I know it mus' be so den, alde I reckelick it ain' so."

Uncle Jake tilted his chair back and broke into a laugh. "Ole 'oman," said he, "you're all wrong 'bout dat. Dey wuz talking 'bout anudder George Washin'ton. I heered all 'bout dat long 'go. Dey wa'n' meaning we-alls' po' little Wash here."

Aunt June's eyes flashed for a minute; only a minute, however, and she ducked her head to laugh.

"I done kilt a hin," said she, "and it's got ter be eat. George Washin'ton am gwine hab dat bufday. He been mighty handy he'ping 'bout de baby and all, and he kin hab two bufdays dis year well ez not. Dey ain' no sech gre't differ'nce 'twix the twenty-secken o' Feb'rery an' de twenty-ninth of July, ez I kin see. Seed de reesuns, son, fur de cake; hit's fur yer bufday dinner ter-morrer."—Will Allen Dromgoole, in Youth's Companion.

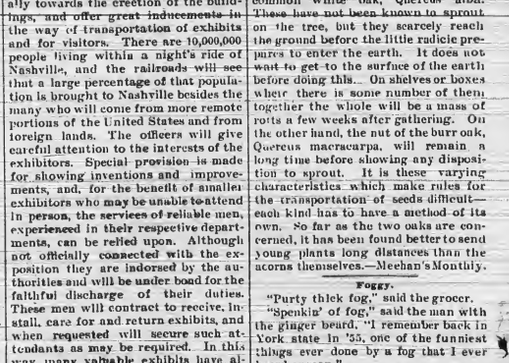
TENNESSEE CENTENNIAL



Exhibitors Will Not Be Charged for Space or Power.

The Nashville Exposition Will Compare Very Favorably with the Chicago World's Fair—The National Event of 1897.

The Tennessee Centennial and International exposition, which will open at Nashville on the 1st day of May and continue for six months, closing October 30, was originated purely from patriotic motives, and not for the purpose of making money for its projectors, and, therefore, exhibitors will not be charged for space or power. All of the principal buildings, magnificent in architecture and ample in dimensions, are now ready for occupancy, and more than three-fourths of the space originally allotted to exhibitors has already been taken, and in order to accommodate the growing demand for space, several of the large buildings have already been extended, and that others will now have to be extended or additional buildings erected is quite certain.

In almost every respect the Tennessee exposition will surpass the Philadelphia centennial and all other expositions that have been held in this country except the world's fair at Chicago. Over half a million dollars has been expended on the ground and buildings up to the 1st day of February, and the company does not owe a dollar. More than as much more will be required for buildings and promotion, and this amount will be furnished without calling for assistance outside of the city of Nashville and the state of Tennessee. The Atlanta exposition of 1895 had raised only $209,000 in money, and was in debt to the amount of $500,000 before the gates were opened. The managers of the Nashville exposition have not only kept clear of debt, but they have profited in many other respects by the experience of other expositions, and no enterprise has ever approached the opening day under more favorable circumstances.

The Tennessee exposition will compare favorably with the world's fair, but will not be too large to be thoroughly comprehended, while the grouping of the buildings and the general view of the grounds and buildings affords a view of charming beauty. It will be sufficiently attractive to bring millions of visitors, and will provide a means of advertising the business of exhibitors in a most effective manner.

THE TENNESSEE CENTENNIAL—CHILDREN'S BUILDING

The railroads have subscribed liberally towards the erection of the buildings, and offer great inducements in the way of transportation of exhibits and for visitors. There are 10,000,000 people living within a night's ride of Nashville, and the railroads will see that a large percentage of that population is brought to Nashville besides the many who will come from more remote portions of the United States and from foreign lands. The officers will give careful attention to the interests of the exhibitors. Special provision is made for showing inventions and improvements, and, for the benefit of smaller exhibitors who may be unable to attend in person, the services of reliable men, experienced in their respective departments, can be relied upon. Although not officially connected with the exposition they are indorsed by the authorities and will be under bond for the faithful discharge of their duties. These men will contract to receive, install, care for and return exhibits, and when requested will secure such attendants as may be required. In this way many valuable exhibits have already been entered, and this arrangement will secure hundreds of others that have not previously been seen in any exposition.

While space is free (if the exhibit shall be in place on opening day) the director general reserves the right to decline exhibits of any class which may be already fully represented. Other things being equal the first applicants will be given the preference. Those who are contemplating an exhibit should apply at once, especially if a large or prominent space is wanted.

The governors of more than 30 states and the mayors of nearly all the principal cities in the United States have appointed commissioners, and many of these have already arranged for public and private exhibits, and there is a spirit of rivalry in the greater cities of the west and south, each city striving to out-do its business rivals of other cities. The greatest enthusiasm has been aroused in Cincinnati, Chicago, Louisville and St. Louis, and these cities and their merchants will not only seek to advertise their goods, so that they may secure the trade of the south, but they will contribute in many ways to the success of the exposition.

This being the only national attraction of the year, and there being a prospect of a business revival everywhere there is every indication that the exposition at Nashville will be highly successful. Manufacturers should not neglect this opportunity of making their business known through this medium of advertising. For full particulars they may address Maj. E. C. Lewis, director general, or Herman Justl, chief of bureau of promotion and publicity, Nashville, Tenn.

The Nashville centennial will be a great factor in the restoration of confidence and in the revival of industry in the United States, and in fact it has already had a beneficial effect in some quarters, and as its scope and purpose become more and more widely known its influence will be very greatly felt. All that we need in this country is that we get out of the rut in which we have been languishing for several years, and a good running start, such as the Tennessee Centennial exposition will give us, should place us on higher and firmer ground. Then we shall move along steadily to ever increasing prosperity until we again forget the dearly-bought lessons of the last decade.

VARIATIONS IN ACORNS.

How the Great Oak Trees Take Root and Grow.

It is said that in individual trees scarcely two leaves can be found exactly alike. What is true of leaves is true of seeds—and indeed of every part of a tree. It is also true of the behavior of trees during their life career. In acorns especially one may note a remarkable difference in their behavior. Some species of acorn will preserve their vital power without much difficulty for a couple of years, while others can rarely be found with life after a few months. Some when put into the earth will remain months before sprouting, while others will sprout before they are fairly out of their cups on the trees. The acorns of the live oak of the south (Quercus vivens) often sprout before they fall. The process of germination is among the most remarkable of all American trees. The root pushes out from the acorn to a distance of many inches before it enters the ground—the root then goes into the earth while the bud or pulmule ascends to form the incipient tree trunk. The young tree of the live oak will frequently be a distance of six inches from the acorn. In this respect the behavior of this species of oak corresponds nearly with what is almost universal in monocotyledonous seeds. Another early sprouter is the common white oak, Quercus alba. These have not been known to sprout on the tree, but they scarcely reach the ground before the little radicle prepares to enter the earth. It does not wait to get to the surface of the earth before doing this. On shelves or boxes where there is some number of them together the whole will be a mass of roots a few weeks after gathering. On the other hand, the nut of the burr oak, Quercus macracarpa, will remain a long time before showing any disposition to sprout. It is these varying characteristics which make rules for the transportation of seeds difficult—each kind has to have a method of its own. So far as two oaks are concerned, it has been found better to send young plants long distances than the acorns themselves.—Meehan's Monthly.

Foggy.

"Purty thick fog," said the grocer.

"Spenkin' of fog," said the man with the ginger beard, "I remember back in York state in '55, one of the funniest things ever done by a fog that I ever heerd or seen."

"I suppose we got to listen," said the grocer, with a groan.

"Naw, ye ain't got to listen. Jist go over and set cloist to the butter. I guess it is loud enough to drowned out anything you don't want to hear. But as I was sayin', that there fog was so thick that folks couldn't git their doors open. An' what's more, a south wind come up an' struck the west end of it, while a north wind struck the east end of it, an' not on'y turned the dern fog around, but ole man Cohoffer's house along with it, the fog bein' so solid as the house right in the center of it, an' when it thinned down a little the ole man started to town an' went 18 miles in the wrong direction before he found whur he was at."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Pearls in Russia.

Thirty-three different kinds of pearls are found in various parts of Russia—seventeen being peculiar to the country. It would pay to fish for them systematically, but at present most of them are found by ignorant peasants, who sell them for a few rubles to merchants, to whom they are worth a hundred or more.—Chicago Times-Herald.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR.

Nails Like a Bird's Claws, Hair Like the Eagle's Feathers.

The King Was Driven From Among Men and Ate Grass With the Oxen—Men Who Descend Till They Seem as Beasts—Dr. Talmage's Sermon.

Dr. Talmage's subject Sunday was: "A King Eating Grass," and the text, Daniel iv., 33: "The same hour was the thing fulfilled upon Nebuchadnezzar; and he was driven from men, and did eat grass as oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven, till his hairs were grown like eagles' feathers, and his nails like birds' claws."

Better shade your eyes lest they be put out with the splendor of Babylon, as some morning you walk out with Nebuchadnezzar on the suspension bridges which hang from the housetops, and he shows you the vastness of his realm. As the sun kindles the domes with glistenings almost insufferable and the great streets thunder up their pomp into the ear of the monarch, and armed towers stand around, adorned with the spoils of conquered empires, Nebuchadnezzar waves his hand above the stupendious scene and exclaims: "Is not this Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honor of my majesty?" But in an instant all that splendor is gone from his vision, for a voice falls from Heaven, saying: "O, King Nebuchadnezzar, to thee it is spoken: The kingdom is departed from thee, and they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field; they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and seven years shall pass over thee, until thou know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will." One hour from the time that he made the boast he is on his way to the fields, a maniac, and rushing into the forests, he becomes one of the beasts, covered with eagles' feathers for protection from the cold, and his nails growing to birds' claws in order that he might dig the earth for roots and climb the trees for nuts.

You see there is a great variety in the Scriptural landscape. In several discourses we have looked at mountains of existence, but now we look down into a great, dark chasm of wickedness, as we come to speak of Nebuchadnezzar. God in His Word sets before us the beauty of self denial, of sobriety, of devotion, of courage, and then, lest we should not thoroughly understand him, he introduced Daniel and Paul, and Deborah, as illustrations of those virtues. God also speaks to us in His word as to the hatefulness of pride, of folly, of impiety, and, lest we should not thoroughly understand him, introduced Nebuchadnezzar as the impersonation of these forms of depravity. The former style of character is a lighthouse, showing us a way into a safe harbor, and the latter style of character is a black buoy, swinging on the rocks, to show where vessels wreck themselves. Thanks unto God for both the buoy and the lighthouse! The host of Nebuchadnezzar is thundering at the gates of Jerusalem. The crown of that sacred city is struck into the dust by the hand of Babylonish insolence. The vessels of the temple, which had never been desecrated by profane touch, were ruthlessly seized for sacrilege and transportation. Oh, what a sad hour when those Jews, at the command of the invading army, are obliged to leave the home of their nativity! How their hearts must have been wrung with anguish when, on the day they departed, they heard the trumpets from the top of the temple announcing the hour for morning sacrifice and saw the smoke of the altars ascending around the holy hill of Zion, for well they knew that in a far distant land they would never hear the trumpet call, nor behold the majestic ascent of the sacrefice. Behold those captives on the road from Jerusalem to Babylon! Worn and weary, they dare not halt, for roundabout are armed men, urging them on with hoot and shout and blasphemy. Aged men tottered along on their staves, weeping that they could not lay their bones in the sleeping place of their fathers, and children wondered at the length of the way and sobbed themselves to sleep when the night had fallen. It seemed as if at every step a heart broke.

But at a turn of the road Babylon suddenly springs upon the view of the captives, with its gardens and palaces. A shout goes up from the army as they behold their native city, but not one huzza is heard from the captives. These exiles saw no splendor there, for it was not home. The Euphrates did not have the water-gleam of the brook Kedron or the pool of Siloam. The willows of Babylon, on which they hung their untuned harps, were not as graceful as the trees which at the foot of Mount Moriah seemed to weep at the departed glory of Judah, and all the fragrance that descended from the hanging gardens upon that great city was not so sweet as one breath of the acacia and frankincense that the high priest kindled in the sanctuary at Jerusalem.

On a certain night, a little while after these captives had been brought to his city, Nebuchadnezzar is scared with a night vision. A bad man's pillow is apt to be stuffed with deeds and forebodings which keep talking in the night. He will find that the eagle's down in his pillow will stick him like porcupine quills. The ghosts of old transgressions are sure to wander about in the darkness and beckon and hiss. Yet when the morning came he found that the vision had entirely fled from him. Dreams drop no anchors, and therefore are apt to sail away before we can fasten them. Nebuchadnezzar calls all the wise men of the land into his presence, demanding that by their necromancy they explain his dream. They, of course, fail. Then their wrathful king issues an edict with as little sense as mercy, ordering the slaying of all the learned men of the country. But Daniel the Prophet comes in with the interpretation just in time to save the wise men and the Jewish captives.

My friends, do you not see that pride and ruin ride in the same saddle? See Nebuchadnezzar on the proudest throne of all the earth, and then see him graze with the sheep and cattle! Pride is commander, well plumbed and caparisoned, but it leads forth a dark and frowing host. The arrows from the Almighty's quiver are apt to strike a man when on the wing. Goliath shakes his great spear in defiance, but the smooth stones from the brook make him stagger and fall like an ox under a butcher's bludgeon. He who is down can not fall. Vessels scudding under bare poles do not feel the force of the storm, while those with all sails set capsize at the sudden descent of the tempest.

Remember that we can be as proud of our humility as of anything else. Antisthenes walked the streets of Athens with a ragged coat to demonstrate his humility, but Socrates declared he could see the hypocrisy through the holes in his cloak. We would all see ourselves smaller than we are if we were as philosophic as Severus, the Emperor of Rome who said at the close of his life: "I have been everything, and everything is nothing." And when the urn that was to contain his ashes was at his command, brought to him he said: "Little urn, thou shalt contain one for whom the world was too little."

Do you not also learn from the misfortune of this king of Babylon what a terrible thing is the loss of reason? There is no calamity that can possibly befall us in this world so great as derangement of intellect; to have the body of man and yet to fall below even the instinct of a brute. In this world of horrible sights the most horrible is the idiot's stare. In this world of horrible sounds the most horrible is the maniac's laugh. A vessel driven on the rocks, when hundreds go down never to rise and other hundreds drag their mangled and shivering bodies upon the winter's beach, is nothing compared to the foundering of intellects full of vast hopes and attainments and capacities. Christ's heart went out to those who were epileptic, falling into the fire or maniac's cutting themselves among the tombs; we are accustomed to be more grateful for physical health than for the proper working of our mind. We are apt to take it for granted that the intellect which has served us so well will always be faithful. We forget that an engine of such tremendous power, where the wheels have such vastness of circle and such swiftness of motion, and the least impediment might put it out of gear, can only be kept in proper balance by a Divine hand.

No human hand could engineer the train of immortal faculties. How strange it is that our memory, on whose shoulders all the misfortunes and successes and occurrences of a lifetime are placed, should not oftner break down, and that the scales of judgment, which have been weighing so much and so long, should not lose their adjustment, and memory, which holds a dangerous wand, should not sometimes maliciously wave it, bringing into the heart forebodings and hallucinations the most appalling! Is it not strange that this mind, which hopes so much in its mighty leaps for the attainment of its objects, should not be dashed to pieces on its disappointments? Though so delicately tuned, this instrument of untold harmony plays on, though fear has shaken it and vexation racks it and sorrow and joy and loss and gain in quick succession beat out of it their dirge or toss from it their anthem. At morning and at night, when in your prayer you rehearse the causes of your thanksgiving, next to the salvation by Jesus Christ, praise the Lord for the preservation of your reason.

See also in this story of Nebuchadnezzar the use that God makes of bad men. The actions of the wicked are used as instruments of punishment of wickedness in others or as the illustration of some principle in the Divine government. Nebuchadnezzar subserved both purposes. Even so I will go back with you to the history of every reprobate that the world has ever seen, and I will show you how to a great extent his wickedness was limited to its destructive power, and how God glorified Himself in the overthrow and disgrace of his enemy. Babylon is full of abomination, and wicked Cyrus destroys it. Persia fills the cup of its iniquity, and vile Alexander puts an end to it. Macedon must be chastised, and bloody Emilius does it. The bastile is to be destroyed, and corrupt Napoleon accomplishes it. Even so selfish and wicked men are often made to accomplish great and glorious purposes.

Joseph's brethren were guilty of superlative perfidy and meanness when they sold him into slavery for about $7, yet how they must have been overwhelmed with the truth that God never forsakes the righteous when they saw he had become the prime minister of Egypt! Pharaoh oppresses the Israelites with the most diabolic tyranny, yet stand still and see the salvation of God. The plague descend, the locusts, and the hail, and the destroying angel, showing that there is a God who will defend the cause of His people, and, finally, after the Israelites have passed through the parted sea, behold, in the wreck of the drowned army, that God's enemies are chaff in a whirlwind! In some financial panic the righteous suffered with the wicked. Houses and stores and shops in a night foundered on the rock of bankruptcy, and healthy credit without warning dropped dead in the street, and money ran up the long ladder of 25 per cent. to laugh down upon those who could not climb after it. Dealers with pockets full of securities stood shouting in the deaf ears of banks Men rushed down the streets with protested notes after them. Those who before found it hard to spend their money were left without money to spend. Laborers went home for want of work, to see hunger in their chair at the table and upon the hearth. Winter blew his breath of frost through fingers of icicles, and sheriffs with attachments dug among the cinders of fallen storehouses, and whole cities joined in the long funeral procession, marching to the grave of dead fortunes and of fallen commerce. Verily, the righteous suffered with the wicked, but generally the wicked had the worst of it. Splendid estates that had come together through schemes of wickedness were dashed to pieces like a potter's vessel, and God wrote with letters of fire, amid the ruin and destruction of reputations and estates that were thought impregnable, the old-fashioned truth, which centuries ago he wrote in His Bible: "The way of the wicked he turneth upside down." As the stars of heaven are reflected from the waters of the earth, even so God's great and magnificent purposes are reflected back from the boiling sea of human passion and turmoil.

As the voice of a sweet song uttered among the mountains may be uttered back from the cavernous home of wild beast and rocks split and thunder-scarred, so the great harmonies of God's providence are rung back from the darkest caverns of this sin-struck earth. Senacherib, and Abimelech, and Herod, and Judas, and Nero, and Nebuchadnezzar, though they struggled like beasts unbroken to the load, were put into a yoke, where they were compelled to help draw ahead God's great projects of mercy.

Again, let us learn the lesson that men can be guilty of polluting the sacred vessels of the temple and carrying them away to Babylon. The sacred vessels in the temple at Jernsalem were the cups and plates of gold and silver with which the rites and ceremonies were celebrated. The laying of heather hands upon them and the carrying them off as spoils was an unbounded offense to the Lord of the temple. Yet Nebuchadnezzar committed this very sacrilege. Though that wicked king is gone, the sins he inaugurate walk up and down the earth cursing it from century to century. The sin of desecrating sacred things is committed by those who on sacramental day take the communion cup, while their conversation and deeds all show that they live down in Babylon. How solemn is the sacrament? It is a time for vows, a time for repentance, a time for faith. Sinai stands near, with its fire-split clouds, and Calvary, with its victim. The Holy Spirit broods over the scene, and the glory of Heaven seems to gather in the sanctuary. Vile indeed must that man be who will come in from his idols and unrepented follies to take hold of the sacred vessels of the temple. Oh, thou Nebuchadnezzar! Back with you to Babylon!

Those also desecrate sacred things who use the Sabbath for any other than religious purposes. This holy day was let down from Heaven amid the intense secularities of the week to remind us that we are immortal, and to allow us preparation for an endless state of happiness. It is a green spot in the hot desert of this world that guides with fanning and waves with palm trees. This is the time to shake the dust from the robes of our piety and in the tents of Israel sharpen our swords for future conflict. Heaven, that seems so far off on other days, lights upon the earth, and the song of heavenly choirs and the hosannah of the white-robed seem to mingle with our earthly worship. We hear the wailing Infant of Bethlehem, and the hammer-stroke of the carpenter's weary son in Nazareth, and the prayer of Gethsemane, and the bitter cry of Golgotha. Glory be unto the Lord of the Sabbath! With that one day in seven God divides this great sea of business and gayety, so that dry-shod we may pass between the worldly business of the past and the worldly business of the future.

But to many the Sabbath comes only as a day for neighborhood visiting, field rambling, hotel lounging and political cnucusing. This glorious Sabbath which was intended only as a golden chalice from which the thirsty should drink, is this moment being carried down to Babylon. I do not exaggerate the truth when I say that to tens of thousands there is no distinction between the Sabbath and the week days, except that on the Lord's day they do not work, while they eat more largely and dissipate more thoroughly. Sabbath-breakers are like hunters who should compel their bounds to take rest while themselves continue on the weary chase, for men on the Sabbath allow their bodies, which need merely animal nurture, sufficient repose, while their immortal nature, which should be fed and refreshed, is compelled to chase up and down this world's highway.

How shameful to rob God of His day, when he allows men so much lawful acquisition, even of a worldly nature, on the Sabbath; for although men themselves are commanded to rest, the corn and the wheat and the grass grow just as rapidly on the Sabbath as on any other days, so that while they sit in the sanctuary they are actually becoming richer in worldly things. While you are doing nothing your bonds and mortgages are all accumulating interest for your estate just as fast as on other days. Men hired by the month or year are receiving just as much wages while quiet on the Sabbath as they are the hard-working week day. No, I say how unutterably mean it is, when God is adding to your worldly estate on the Sabbath as certainly as on other days, that any should not be satisfied with that, but attempt to seize additional secular advantage from the Lord's day. Have you never noticed the curious fact that our worldly occupation frequently seems to be divided into sections of six days each? Every week we have just enough work given us to do in six days. God makes just enough breaks in our continuous occupations to thrust in the Sabbath. If you have not before noticed, observe hereafter that when Saturday night comes there is almost always a good stopping place in your business.

FURIOUS FIGHT WITH A WILDCAT

Fatally Claws Two Dogs and Badly Injures a Man.

Alexander Jenkins and George Keith had an exciting fight with a wildcat in the woods at the head of Patapsco river, in Howard county, Md., and Mr. Jenkins was badly injured. The party was shooting coons. Concealed in the branches of a big tree the sportsmen mistook a wildcat for a coon. As one of tne men started to climb the tree to force the animal it leaped fearlessly in the midst of four hunting dogs, upon one of which it fastened its sharp teeth, at the same time furiously tearing the flesh of the dog with its claws. It was forced to abandon its victim by the attack of the other three dogs, and, springing upon another, soon had the second dog yelping and making frantic efforts to free itself. When released by the vicious cat the dog ran bleeding to its master's feet and could not be induced to renew the fight upon the cat. A third dog also received an ugly wound in the side from the cat's claws. By this time several of the party had provided themselves with clubs, with which the frenzied beast was dispatched.

Mr. Jenkins, in attempting to deal the animal a blow, received a stroke from its paw, which cut a gash through the flesh from the middle of his thigh to the knee and made a slit in his pantaloons and under garments as keenly as if done with a razor. Two of the dogs have died from the wounds inflicted.

GLASGOW CHURCH CENSUS.

A church census hardly ever fails to yield some instructive and surprising results. One was taken lately in Glasgow, which, with extended boundaries, contains in round numbers 827,000 inhabitants. Out of that large population only 143,355 persons were found to be at church on the Sunday when the census was taken. The established church, which, we are forever told, is always the church of the people, had 35,006 people attending its places of worship; the Free church had 35,760; the United [illegible]rian, 30,878; other Protestant denominations, 22,507, while there were 19,204 persons present in the Roman Catholic churches in the city. The first thing that strikes one about these figures is the extremely small proportion of the whole population that attends church in a city which has for its motto: "Let Glasgow flourish by the preaching of the word." Judged by Glasgow, Scotland seems decidedly on the down-grade as regards church-going. The next obvious point is the extraordinary weakness of the established church, which had only 35,006 worshipers, while the two principal Presbyterian churches that disown the establishment had 56,638 between them alone.

TO CALIFORNIA BY WAGON.

Long and Tiresome Journey Made by a Party from Oklahoma.

A family consisting of a father and mother, sister and seven children, in Santa Ana, Cal., has just arrived there from Oklahoma in a wagon. The head of the family is George H. McKenzie, a stout, robust Texan of about 45 years. Mrs. McKenzie said that the party, consisting of three brothers and their families, numbering 22 in all, sold out their ranches in Oklahoma and started west August 2. The trip across the desert was particularly difficult, in some sections the sand being so deep that they could not make more than ten miles in a long day's travel. In New Mexico several members of the brother's family were taken with typhoid fever, and they were consequently delayed for five weeks.

England's Scarlet Flowers.

There are only two scarlet flowers native in England, the poppy and the scarlet pimpernal, and both these flourish best on dry and sunny spots. Nearly all other scarlet flowers are imported.

Cremation in Italy.

Cremation is more extensively practiced in Italy than in any country. The first crematorium was established in Milan in 1876, and there are now 50 in operation in Italian territory.

A LETTER TO WOMEN

From Mrs. James Corrigan.

For seventeen years I have suffered. Periods were so very painful that I would have to go to the doctor every month.

He said that I had an enlargement of the womb, and told my husband that I must undergo an operation, as I had tumors in the womb, and it was a case of life or death.

I was operated upon twice, but it did not seem to do me any good, it made me very weak. I was troubled with the leucorrhea a great deal.

I also suffered with the sick headache, vomiting spells, backache all the time, terrible pain in my left side, chills, loss of appetite, and could not sleep nights. After taking several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, some Liver Pills, and using your Sanative Wash, I recovered.

I can eat well, and every one that sees me tells me I am a different person. I can do all my own work, sleep well and feel well. I am growing stronger every day, and am able to go out and enjoy a walk and not feel all tired out when I return, as I used to. I doctored for sixteen years, and in all those years I did not feel as well as I do at the present time. I wish that every woman that is troubled as I was, would try that medicine. Oh! it is so good to feel well, and it is all owing to Mrs. Pinkham's kind advice and medicine. —Mrs. James Corrigan, 284 Center St., Jamaica Plain, Mass.

The papers are full of deaths from Heart Failure

Of course the heart fails to act when a man dies, but "Heart Failure," so called, nine times out of ten is caused by Uric Acid in the blood which the Kidneys fail to remove, and which corrodes the heart until it becomes unable to perform its functions.

Health Officers in many cities very properly refuse to accept "Heart Failure," as a cause of death. It is frequently a sign of ignorance in the physician, or may be given to cover up the real cause.

Warner's Safe Cure

A Medicine with 20 Years of Success behind it will remove the poisonous Uric Acid by putting the Kidneys in a healthy condition so that they will naturally eliminate it.

The greatest event of the season in the Mudlick neighborhood was the pulling off of that fox chase near Humes store. The Houston boys and James Hume caught a fox the day before, and sent out word of the time when and place where reynard would be turned loose. When the time came there were at the appointed place 45 men and 26 dogs. David Houston was made master of ceremonies, and at 9 am. the fox was liberated, and was allowed four minutes the start of the hounds. The dogs were sent off in good order, and during the first hour they gained very little on the fox. At the end of two hours of the hardest running that has been witnessed in this country for many years, the fox was caught on the ground, and of the 29 dogs that started in the race the following five only were at the catching: Arthur Stephenson's Brady; Ben O'Neal's Bob; Rube Houston's Kate; David Houston's Dinah; Jim Humes' Flora. It seemed that every man within a radius of several miles of here was a foxhunter that day.

It is more than probable that the Phoenix Hotel will assume a new magnitude not before attained. A negotiation is pending with a Cincinnati firm which will change it to a summer boarding house with a large staple and fancy grocery attached, filling a want that has long been felt.

Mr. William Brittenhelm has devised a moveable corn crusher that is destined to be a benefit to all engaged in the dairy business. It has crushed 3,000 pounds of corn and cob in one hour. This crusher will be at Ben Stephens', on the Lexington pike, two miles south of Florence, and will run on Tuesday and Friday of every week.

Legrand Brooks, the well known Phoenix Hotel clerk, is in a very precarious condition. His feet and ankles are dead, and there are no hopes entertained for his recovery.

Mrs. Edward Holder has been quite sick for the past week. She is reported better at this writing.

The many friends of Mr. Geo. Casey will regret to hear of his departure. He left on Saturday morning for Columbiana, where he will remain for an indefinite period.

Mrs. Ella Rouse is visiting her stepson, W. O. Rouse, and wife, of Zion Station.

Prof. Virgil A. Pinkley, director of Elocution and Oratory at the College of Music, will render the famous drama, Hazel Kirk, at the Academy building next Saturday evening. Col. Geo. W. Barn, Francis E. Willard, Bishop Vincent, and other well known people, have spoken of Prof. Pinkley's Hazel Kirk in the highest terms.

Miss Gertrude Curley had a very narrow escape a few evenings ago. While descending the stairs from over her father's store, the heel of her shoe caught on the step and she was precipitated to the landing below. Though sustaining a few bruises about the head and face, she is in a fair way of recovery.

Erlanger.

Miss Eugenia Bracht, of Sherman, is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Wm. Sexton, of Home street.

The Improvement Association will hold its regular meeting this Thursday evening, at Konnerding's.

As the Masons are going to Burlington on Saturday night, Eastern Star Lodge will probably hold their meeting on Friday evening.

Fred Ficke, the hotel keeper, was given the Knight Rank in the LaFayette Lodge in true Pythian style at the last meeting, after which an elegant banquet was served at Ficke's hotel.

LaFayette Lodge K. of P. have tickets out for a grand hop on the 26th of February. As their entertainments are one of the features of the town, they will no doubt make this a success.

The trustees of Elsmer arrested Mr. John Verkamp for running a saloon without town license. He claims to have a license for which he paid $25, which does not expire until July 1st, 1897, but the trustees having repealed said $25 license about fourteen days ago and raised it to $150, now want him to take out another license. His trial will take place Wednesday the 17th before Judge Linfert.

The trustees of Elsmere, who are the guardians of the town, ought to get together and do some work improving their sidewalks. It looks very bad to see ladies and children that have to go to church on Sunday, wade through about six inches of mud without a dry spot within twenty feet. If something is not done soon some will drown in the mud and then they will have a law suit on their hands.

Union.

Miss Lutie Gaines is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. M J. Cronch.

Mr. Tom Wilson, of Shelby county, is visiting his sister, Mrs. C. T. Rice.

Mr. Joe Williams, of Cincinnati, is visiting his daughter, Miss Lula, here.

That ground hog knew what he was about, didn't he? He is not sausage meat yet.

John Thomas and sister-in-law, Miss Lutie Baker, of Walton, spent Sunday at this place.

Master Philip Tallaferro and sister, Ella, have returned to their home at Petersburg.

Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Rice and son, of Florence, were the guests of Mrs. J. A. Huey, Sunday.

Miss Lizzie Stephens, of Bullittsville, spent Sunday with her uncle, Mr. C. T. Rice, at this place.

Mrs. Asburry and little daughter, of Mason county, are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Norman.

Mrs. John Garrison and Mrs. Wallace Garrison have been attending their brother, Dr. Mac Violette, of Williamstown, who has been very ill.

Mrs. Jas A. Huey spent a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Crouch, at Warsaw. Her mother returned home with her and is visiting her son and daughters in Boone.

Mr. Editor, we are in favor of the pending primary election coming off before June, for if it does not, the army of candidates will literally ruin the dirt roads of the grand old Commonwealth of Boone county.

Our former most excellent correspondent, P. T. Fall, of Covington, has been with us a few days this week. He looks well and is as jovial as usual.

Rev. J. A. Kirtley passed through our village on his way to Big Bone. He usually passes the night with some of his many friends here, and is always a most welcome guest.

Bellevue.

Miss Permelia Corbin is very poorly.

Born, on the 2d inst to Kirb Ryle and wife, a boy.

Mrs. Sutton gave the young folks a party on the night of the 12th inst.

Billy Grimsley was in town the past week, looking after his interest, politically.

John Deck, of Woolper Heights, was the guest of Jake Cooper and family on the night of the 12th inst.

Mrs. James Conner, of Cincinnati, has been with her mother, Mrs. Clore, the past week, who is some better.

James Smith and family, who moved to Patriot, Ind., last spring, have returned to old Boone, the best of all places.

Our friend, J. T. Marshall, has rented the property vacated by Dr. Ryle, and will furnish it as soon as convenient. So our bachelor friend of your town would better hasten matters or he will have to ante up that forfeit.

Our friend Acra has absolutely declined to make the race for Sheriff. He will embark in the poultry business. He has a young cockerel of his breeding, claiming he weighs 11 lbs. From his appearance I would judge he is of the Shropshiredown variety (more down than flesh;) however, poultry fanciers would do well to correspond with the owner.

We are glad to know that the Fiscal Court changed the order in regard to the wages of the farmer on the road. While we are on the subject of retrenchment, we are reminded of the proposed reduction of the County Superintendent's salary. We are well pleased with our county officials, and believe they should be paid, but to be consistent, would it not be well to practice economy all along the line, and cut other salaries as well?

THE BOONE AND KENTON LINE

To Be Resurveyed and Marked With Stone Posts Every Half Mile.

On May 30th, 1846, M. S. Rice, of Boone, and Elijah Yates, deputy for John Armstrong, of Kenton, surveyors, and Lewis Webb, of Boone, and Leonard Stephens, of Kenton, commissioners, located the boundary line between Boone and Kenton counties, as follows: Beginning at a point on the Ohio river 26 poles above the present mouth of Dry Creek (where the mouth of said creek is represented to have been in the year 1796); thence s 9° 50' E 11 miles; thence s 12½° E 1 mile and 360 poles; thence S 5½° W 5 miles and 100 poles reputed to be the ground formerly occupied by Bullock Pen; thence S 20° 24' one mile and 133 poles to the corner of Boone, Kenton and Grant counties near the town of Crittenden. The commissions appointed by the two counties met in Florence, last Saturday, and decided that the Surveyors of Boone and Kenton counties should run the line of 1846 and mark it every half mile with good stones which will be provided by the two counties for the purpose.

A RUN AWAY

In Which Mrs. Earnest Grant Narrowly Escaped Being Killed.

Mrs. Earnest Grant and little five-year-old daughter had a very narrow escape from death last Sunday afternoon. They were visiting William Walton's, and when they started home the horse they were driving ran off down the long hill on the Bellevue pike. Mrs. Grant was thrown out of the buggy before the residence of John Henderson was reached. In the fall her clothing caught in one of the buggy wheels, and she was dragged some distance, when she struck a pile of broken stone on the road side, tearing loose from the buggy and cutting her head and face very badly on the sharp stones. Just after passing Mr. Henderson's the little girl was thrown out of the buggy, fortunately on the upper side of the road where she struck the bank after a short fall, and she was not hurt. Mr. Grant who was going to Mr. Walton's to accompany his wife home, met the horse near the foot of the hill, with a portion of the harness hanging to it. Mr. Grant was in a buggy with Mr. J. R. Clutterbuck and they hastened on till they met Mrs. Grant in a buggy in charge of friends who chanced to see the horse after it had started to run. She was taken to Miss Julia Dismore's and Drs. Smith, Grant and Williamson were summoned and were soon in attendance, and the wounds were dressed and the patient made as comfortable as possible.

MEAT WELL SMOKED.

Last Saturday morning about four o'clock Dr. Jacob Tanner discovered his meat house on fire, and despite the efforts of him and Lou Crutcher, the young man who lives with him, the meat house and its contents, four hogs killed this winter and the lard from them and the lard from four hogs killed last winter, were destroyed, and the residence which stood close by was considerably scorched, and how it was kept from burning is a mystery to Mr. Tanner. The loss is estimated at about $100 with $34 insurance in the Boone County Insurance Company. Mr. Tanner has lived at his present residence about 40 years, and the fire Saturday morning is the first accident of any consequence that has befallen him. The fire is supposed to have been caused by two hams droppug in a kettle in which there was fire for smoking the meat.

ANOTHER GOOD LADY GONE.

Mrs. Annie G. Cave, widow of the late John W. Cave, and the youngest daughter of the late Judge Benjamin Watts, died at her home near Francesville, last Thursday night aged 69 years. She had been in ill health for some time, her disease being stomach trouble. Her funeral was preached last Saturday at Sand Run church by Rev. R. E. Kirtley. She was a consistent member of the Bullittsville Christian Church. The deceased was a sister of W. B. Watts, of this county, and Mrs. John S. Bronaugh, of Nicholasville, Jessamine county. Besides a large circle of friends, the deceased leaves a son and daughter, Johnny Cave and Mrs. Charles Scothorn, to mourn her loss.

A CALL.

Burlington, Ky., Feby. 13, 1897.

In as much as the Democratic Executive Committee of the 15th Judicial District, when convened at Walton, adjourned without perfecting its call for a primary election for the nomination of candidates for the offices of Circuit Judge and Commonwealth's Attorn'y, I therefore, as chairman of said committee, hereby notify each member thereof to meet me in Burlington, Ky., on the 23d day of February, 1897, for the purpose of completing said call.

D. E. CASTLEMAN, Chairman
Dem. Ex. Com. 15th Judicial District.

Deputy Sheriff Elmer Beall's little two year-old daughter had a narrow escape from being seriously if not fatally burnt last Thursday morning. Her mother left her in bed asleep when she went out about breakfast, and had been out of the room but a short time when she heard the child scream. Mrs. Beall hastened back to the room, and when she opend the door she was horror stricken by the sight of her child standing in front of the grate and her night clothing in flames. Fortunately the mother succeeded in putting the fire out before the child was burnt any of consequence.

The last grand jury in session at Williamstown returned only nine indictments, the smallest number returned by any grand jury in the history of Grant county.

D. Beall, of Hebron, and Boone Roberts, of Verona, to revenue men who had been taking a layoff, were given assignments last week.

Dr. S. S. Scott, of Erlanger, went to Carrollton, last Thursday, to visit a sick relative. The Doctor is looking remarkably robust this winter.

A. W. Gaines, of Chattanooga, was the guest of his father and mother two or three days last week. He came up on business in the United States Court of Appeals in session in Cincinnati.

The RECORDER failed to mention, last week, the pleasant call of Mrs. E. H. Banker and husband, of Western Springs, Illinois. Mrs. Banker, nee Moore, was visiting her relatives in the northern part of the county.

Prof. John T. Marshall, of Bellevue, was in town, last Friday. The Professor announced that very important business required his presence in the capital that day, but there is no record at the County Clerk's office showing that he was in town last Friday.

Jas. N Pearson, candidate for assessor, and D B Allphin, jr, candidate for sheriff, were interviewing the voters here, last Monday. About the middle of the afternoon, J. W. Berkshire, also a candidate for Sheriff, hove in and began saying a few words in regard to the race for that office.

Dr. W. B. Grubbs, of Taylorsport, was summoned to the bedside of his brother, James T. Grubbs, at Greenwood, Indiana, on the 8th inst. His brother had been in feeble health for many years, and was not able to withstand an attack of the grippe, which resulted in his death on the 11th inst. The Doctor is the only survivor of his father's family of two daughters and three sons.

NOTICE.

The public is hereby notified that we have arranged our business matters and adjusted all of our claims with our creditors and raised the assignment. That Wallace Garrison is no longer a member of the firm and has nothing whatever to do with our business, he having sold his entire interest in the business to us. We will run the mill as heretofore and in addition will operate the mill three days in each week on the popular customs grinding plan—charging 1 toll. At present we will grind on customs plan on Tuesday, Friday and Saturday of each week. We are equipped with the best, latest and most improved machinery and our facilities for making Fancy, High Grade Patent and Family Flours are exceeded by none. We carry a large stock of Flour, Shipstuff, Brand, Feed, &c., and the very best Flint Corn Meal; also the finest Campbell's Creek and Kanawha River Coals.

For the last two years we have operated the mill, under great disadvantages, for the benefit of the farmers of Boone and Gallatin County. These difficulties are now removed, and we enter, as we believe, upon an era of prosperity. We thank our patrons for past favors soliciting their work and good will in the future.

Edison's latest discovery, by which he can illuminate the interior of man, will be apt to throw "that tired feeling" into a panic.

The best place for money, after all, is banks or investments. A New Hampshire farmer put $500 in a pigsty and the hogs ate it.

The hope of the nation is in education, more than in its wealth and numbers. During 1896 $16,000,000 was given to various American colleges.

You cannot scare smokers over a report of "a famine in Havana tobacco." They know too well where the bulk of it has been growing for the last few years.

Among the contributions for the poor recently received in an Ohio town were two pairs of skates, one pie, and 23 invisible hairpins, all from the same kindhearted individual.

The public printer at Washington states that he has the largest and most complete establishment of the kind in the world, and last year he used 5,457 tons of paper, against 2,718 tons in 1887.

Only six of the 45 states of the union indulge in the extravagance of annual sessions of the legislature, to wit: Georgia, Massachusetts, New York, Rhode Island and South Carolina, all belonging to the original 13.

A late estimate of the famine in India is that it will involve as large a population as that of the United States before running its course. The $5,000,000 raised in England will only make a beginning in the work of relief.

Residents of Edgefield county, S. C., have produced a man with a tail, a prolongation of the backbone 18 inches long and 15 inches in circumference. Scientists are much interested in this possible clew to the missing link.

In Belgium on May 1 next the 24-hour day system will be adopted by the railways, post offices and telegraph bureau. One trouble about it is that some people will feel a superstitious twinge when the hands stand at 13 minutes to 13.

Earthquakes continue to count their victims in various parts of the globe. The Persian disturbance has left thousands of dead. Science is unable to give Mother Earth a medicament that will prevent an occasional attack of the "shakes."

Rhode Island started out to erect a $1,500,000 capitol, and is now informed that $1,674,489 more is needed to complete the building. The exactness of the architects in asking for the second appropriation excuses them perhaps for the miscalculation they made in the first.

A Californian has invented a bed that turns the sleeper over without awakening him. If he can devise a bed that will turn a boy out of it hard enough to wake him thoroughly at a reasonable hour in the morning he will hear something to his advantage by communicating with almost any parent.

A person would scarcely believe it, until pains had been taken to count them, that there are 17,392,136,044,513 different sounds in the human voice, but it is true. These effects are produced by 14 direct muscles, which give about 16,000 different sounds, and 30 indirect, which produce the remainder.

The efficiency of the postal service, not only in the United States but of the whole world, was exemplified recently in a funny way. A gentleman living in New York addressed a letter to "Mark Twain, God Knows Where," and the epistle was in due time delivered to the famous humorist at his lodgings in London.

Among the questions discussed at the recent annual meeting of the National Game, Bird and Fish Protective association was: "What can be said or done to the ladies of America to prevent the inhuman practice of decorating their heads with the dead bodies of our song birds?" The best thing to do is to appeal to American women to abate the crime.

Remarkable reports are current about a new kind of steel invented by Samuel Maxim at his experimental laboratory at Wayne, Me. The inventor believes it to be identical with the ancient steel of India, which is alleged to have been far superior to any steel known to metallurgists in modern times. It is said that a small blade made from the Maxim steel possesses the power of cutting glass with as much ease as if it were chalk.

To pardon a prisoner in order to hang him may not be an altogether novel legal procedure, but it certainly sounds strange to the average person. Such a case occurred out in Oregon the other day, where the governor of the state granted a free pardon to one George Betz, who is serving a term in the penitentiary for burglary, and at the same time signed extradition papers permitting Betz's removal to Illinois, there to stand trial for the crime of murder. What adds interest to the case is that the prisoner refused to accept the pardon, and the courts sustained him in such refusal.

THE GREEKS

Alive to the Danger of an Invasion of Grecian Territory by the Turks—Troops Sent to the Frontier.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The Athens correspondent of the Daily News telegraphs that Turkey is forming the marauding bands of Albania into bodies that will be employed to invade Thessaly. The Greek government is fully alive to the danger in this direction and is hastening troops to the frontier to repel any attempted invasion of Grecian territory. It is reported that a collision has already occurred between the troops and Albanians on the frontier.

The Times has a dispatch from Canea stating that Prince George of Greece, with four torpedo boats and one transport has arrived there. The dispatch adds that reports from everywhere on the island indicate the increasing gravity of the situation.

An Italian officer of the gendarmes has been sent to Kisamo to inquire into the condition of affairs there. It was at this place where 22 Moslems were killed on February 7. The Christians then suddenly began firing in the streets and the Moslems stampeded making no resistance to their assailants. Seven persons were beheaded with swords, including three women and two children.

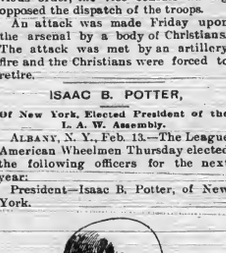
The insurgents are closing around Sitia. The inhabitants of that town begged the governor of Herkalion to send troops to their assistance, and the governor, in response to the appeal, ordered that 500 Bashi Bazouks and a detachment of regulars to proceed at once to Sitia.

The troops had embarked upon a vessel to carry them to their destination, when an order was received from the governor countermanding his previous order, the vice consuls having opposed the dispatch of the troops.



An attack was made Friday upon the arsenal by a body of Christians. The attack was met by an artillery fire and the Christians were forced to retire.

THE DOLPHIN

Successfully Runs the Blockade at Charleston Harbor.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Feb. 13.—The blockade runners at Charleston have scored the first blood, and in spite of all the preparations made by Adm. Bunce to detect any attempt to pass the long line of ships he had strung out across the entrance of the harbor, the Dolphin, not by any means a fast boat nor as invisible as a regular blockade runner, slipped quietly around one of the line on the 8th inst., and when the war department next heard of her she was at the bar off St. John's river Florida.

The officials of the department were puzzled when they were notified by Commander Clover by telegraph of his whereabouts, but private letters received here from persons on the squadron explain her movement as a successful running of the blockade.

A COLORED MAN

Robs a Bank in Daylight—The Thief Captured and the Money Recovered.

SALTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 13.—A bold daylight bank robbery occurred here Friday afternoon. A colored man entered the First national bank and covering Teller Klingensmith with a revolver, demanded the money lying on the counter. The teller handed over $300 and the man ran out of the bank and through the town. He was followed by a posse and captured near the county line. A few shots were fired before the man surrendered and he gave up the money. He was taken to the Indiana county jail. The Negro is unknown but is thought to be from Pittsburgh.

Lincoln's Anniversary in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—The memory of Abraham Lincoln was honored Friday by the Marquette club at its banquet in the Auditorium hotel. Over 500 guests sat down to the tables. The occasion was notable because of the presence of the governors of Michigan, Rhode Island, Iowa, West Virginia and Indiana. Gov. Tanner of Illinois, was unable to be present and was represented by Lieut. Gov. Northcott. Senator elect Mason was among the guests and received a cordial greeting. President DeWitt of the Marquette club presided.

A PORTION

Of the Canadian House of Parliament at Ottawa Destroyed.

Mackenzie Annex, Public Works Office Marine and Fisheries and Mounted Police Departments Gone—Loss Over $100,000—No Insurance.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 12.—At 5:45 o'clock Thursday evening a disastrous fire broke out in the packing room of the public works department in the upper story of the western block of the parliament buildings. Owing to the lack of water pressure the flames spread over almost the entire roof and at 10 o'clock were still in progress. The offices so far burned were for clerks. Some old records have been burned, but most of the valuable papers were removed. The stationery and photograph gallery of the public works are in the portion of the building burned. There is no insurance. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

1 a. m.—The fire burned until it could get no further, and at this hour is still smouldering. The Mackenzie annex, public works office, marine and fisheries and mounted police departments are all gone. Nothing but the charred walls and towers with a little of the iron work is left. At a late hour Thursday night the departments affected say they did not lose any valuable papers, although a batch of old records has disappeared.

The governor general was on the ground at a late hour Thursday night.

SQUADRON BLOCKADE.

Charleston Harbor Almost Impassable—Search Lights Locate Ships 4,000 Yards Away.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Feb. 12.—Adm. Bunce's fleet has established a blockade line across the entrance to Charleston harbor, which in a few days will be an almost impassable one for a blockade runner to pass. The day time is being used by the fleet in practicing the men with the small arms and with subcaliber practice, and in the night time subcaliber drill is the order, with practice in signaling and the use of the search lights.

Thursday night the fleet for the second time stretched out in line of blockade, and it was demonstrated for the first time that the search lights can do effective service in locating an object 4,000 yards away. The ships are separated, each from each, by this distance, and the line is one of flash lights, making the entrance to the harbor almost impossible without detection.

W. H. ELLIOTT,

Of New Castle, an Applicant for the Position of Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

CANTON, O., Feb. 12.—Maj. McKinley shook hands with four score or more office seekers Thursday, and found time to dictate a number of letters and to talk to an old friend or two.

W. H. Elliott, a newspaper man from New Castle, Ind., who was formerly in the navy and is a graduate of the United States naval academy, called to present his application for the position of assistant secretary of the navy. Mr. Elliott is endorsed by many prominent men of his own and other states. The president-elect gave him a careful hearing and asked him to confer with ex-Gov. John D. Long, of Massachusetts, about the matter, which seems to prove very conclusively that as these dispatches have announced Mr. Long has been definitely settled upon for the position of secretary of the navy.

AMBASSADOR BAYARD

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The Royal Societies club gave a dinner Thursday night in honor of Ambassador Bayard. Among those present were the archbishop of Canterbury, the marquis of Dufferin, Lord Russell of Killowen, lord chief justice of England.

Mr. Bayard delivered one of his characteristic speeches, dwelling upon the ties that bind Great Britain and the United States, and predicting that they would grow stronger with the course of time as the two peoples came to understand each other better.

Referring to the Anglo American arbitration treaty Bayard said that now that the principle of arbitration had been admitted he did not believe the treaty could be permanently obstructed, though there might be delay in bringing it into operation.

TELLS ALL.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Feb. 12.—John F. Holland was arrested Thursday and lodged in jail, charged with being an accomplice in the Central City robbery and the shooting of Officer Alex. McCloskey.

Later he made a full confession in his cell to a reporter, in which he said that Tillinghast, the man arrested Wednesday, shot McCloskey.

Holland said they were out to rob a number of stores that night in Central City and they concluded to hold up a few persons while en route.

He names Loman Bishop, of this city, as a third party. The country is being scoured for Bishop.

Broker Ervin Dead.

Wholesale Murder in a Hungarian Village.

VIENNA, Feb. 12.—A story of wholesale murder reached here from a small village in Hungary. It appears that there were a large number of unfaithful wives in the village who were desirous of ridding themselves of their husbands in order that they might the more easily carry on their liaisons with their lovers. Eighteen of them procured poison which they administered to their husbands with fatal results. The murders have caused great excitement among the peasants, to which class the women and their victims belonged.

WOOL GROWERS.

President Lawrence Dissents From the Statement Made by Secretary North, of the Wool Manufacturers' Association.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—The National Wool Growers' association took exception to the statement of their differences with the manufacturers about the wool schedule as voiced by Secretary North, of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers, in his interview with a reporter of the United Associated Presses. President William Lawrence, of the Wool Growers' association, voices this dissent as follows:

The committee of wool manufacturers proposed as the highest rates they would aid in securing duties as follows:

On class I, wools of the value of 16 cents per pound or less, a duty of 8 cents per pound; on wools over 16 cents per pound, 10 cents duty; double on washed, treble on scoured. The rate in the McKinley act of 1890 at 11 cents per pound, without any dividing line as to value, double on washed, treble on scoured.

II. On class 2, wools of the value of 16 cents per pound or less, 9 cents per pound; on wools over 16 cents in value, 11 cents per pound duty.

But these wools then come in at these rates washed, treble duty for scoured. The rate in the McKinley act was 12 cents in same way, treble if scoured.

III. On class 3 wools, the ad valorem rates of the act of 1890 on wools valued at 13 cents per pound or less, 32 per cent., and 50 per cent. over that value.

The committee on wool manufacturers required that all wools should be imported skirted wool any additional duty.

The committee of the National Wool Growers association declined to agree to these rates and they were rejected by a unanimous vote of the association. The National Wool Growers association proposed as the lowest rates of duty to which they would agree, duties as follows:

1. On wools of the first and second class a duty of 12 cents per pound, double on washed, treble on scoured.

2. On third class wools, sometimes called carpet wools but largely used in the manufacture of clothing goods, a duty of 8 cents per pound, unwashed, as they now compete with and supplant the use of merino and down wools. Double if washed, treble if scoured.

3. An additional duty of 3 cents per pound on all skirted wools.

The shirting adds to the value of the wool because:

1. It to a large extent saves the cost of sorting, an expense of at least three-fourths of a cent per pound.

2. By rejecting the skirts or inferior portions of the fleece, the skirted part to be imported into the United States is rendered more valuable.

This was indorsed by a vote of the National Wool Growers' association unanimously, excepting one dissenting vote. There was, with this exception, no division of opinion among wool growers so far as known. The committee of wool manufacturers declined to assent to the rates of duty proposed by the wool growers, and the conference of the committees adjourned sine die.

JINGTON, Feb. 13.—A number of small items in the iron and steel schedule occupied the attention Friday of the republican members of the ways and means committee. Nickel was left on the free list, where it was placed in the present law. Type metal, which is now three-fourths of a cent per pound for the lead contained therein and new types, which are rated at 15 per cent ad valorem, has been restored to the McKinley rate of 1½ cents a pound and 25 per cent. ad valorem respectively. The existing rate was left on zinc in pigs at 1 cent a pound; zinc in sheets, not polished, further advanced than rolled, 1¼ cents a pound; old zinc, fit only for manufacture, ¾ of a cent a pound.

The basket clause, which includes manufactured articles not specially provided for in the present law, composed wholly or part in metal, and whether partly or wholly manufactured, was changed from existing rate of 35 per cent. ad valorem to the McKinley rate of 45 cents ad valorem. This practically finishes the work on the iron and steel schedule, although certain items which were passed over this week will receive consideration later.

The paper schedule came up for consideration at Friday's meeting and the committee fixed the rates on mechanically ground, rolled and bleached wood pulp, which is now 10 per cent. ad valorem, at one-twelfth, one-sixth and one-fourth of a cent a pound respectively. Printing paper suitable only for books and newspapers, which is now 15 per cent. ad valorem, was retained at the present rate of duty.

In Prison for Another's Crime.

FT. SCOTT, Kas., Feb. 13.—A letter has been received by District Court Clerk Lardner, of this county, from R. S. Marsh, an attorney at Harrisburg, Ill., notifying him that a man who had died there recently had confessed to his wife an hour before death that he committed a murder near Garland 20 years ago. An innocent man was convicted of the crime, and he is now serving a 50-year sentence.

Count Trosberg Suicides.

A Malt House Burned.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 13.—The John Hauck Brewing Co.'s malt house, on Dayton street, was destroyed by fire Saturday morning, and the loss will reach about $100,000. For a time it seemed that the efforts of the firemen were to be futile, and the entire brewery plant was in imminent danger. The situation was alarming, but in time the enemy was conquered.

Randolph Tucker's Condition.

LEXINGTON, Va., Feb. 13.—There is no improvement in Hon. Randolph Tucker's condition. His death is expected at any moment.

FIFTY-FOURTH CONGRESS

Second Session.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—SENATE—Another installment of the speech of Senator Thurston, (rep. Neb.,) on his colleagues resolution designed to prevent the judicial sale of the Union Pacific railroad property, occupied the time of the senate up to 2 p.m., Saturday. The Nicaragua canal bill was allowed to go over informally in order to pass bills on the calendar that were unobjected to. Some 18 of them were passed.

HOUSE—The house Saturday, in committee of the whole concluded consideration of the bill making appropriations for the expenses of the District of Columbia for the year ending June 30, 1898, and then passed it, but few amendments, and those unimportant, were made to it. The bill to amend the Wilson tariff act so as to permit the treasury officials to sell forfeited opium to the highest bidder, and not require them to secure the amount of the duty, 10 a pound, was passed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—SENATE—Practically the whole of Monday's session of the senate took place behind closed doors, the question under consideration being the Anglo-American treaty. A concurrent resolution for the withdrawal of a bill from the President, owing to the discovery of a substantial error in it, led Mr. Hill to question the constitutionality of such proposition, and the matter went over for further consideration.

HOUSE—Monday's session of the house of representatives was taken up almost wholly in the consideration of business relating to the District of Columbia. None of them were of more than local interest or importance. The copy of the returns of the votes of the several states for presidential electors, which the law directs shall be sent to the speaker were laid before the house and will remain on the table until the official canvass of the vote is made Wednesday.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—SENATE—Tuesday, as on Monday, the senate spent nearly the whole time of its session in wrestling behind closed doors over the arbitration treaty. During the transaction of the routine morning business the concurrent resolution introduced Monday by Mr. Pettigrew (sil., S. D.) withdrawing from the president a bill passed by both houses, in relation to the timber culture law, was taken up and passed. A joint resolution was offered and referred looking to the payment of some $37,000 to employes of the government printing office for leave of absence which they did not have since 1887.

HOUSE—President Cleveland was overruled by the house Tuesday in the matter of vetoes of two pension bills. They were for the benefit of Rachel Patton and Caroline Mowatt, widows of soldiers who had re-married and lost their second husbands. After a brief debate the conference report on the immigration bill was agreed to—217 to 37.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—SENATE—Before the senate left its chamber Wednesday to participate with the house of representatives in the solemn formality of counting the electoral votes for president and vice president of the United States, the only matter which came up for consideration was Mr. Tillman's (dem., S. C.) bill "simplifying and classifying" the existing law as to the right of state authorities to seize intoxicating liquors brought into the state. It was strenuously opposed by Senators Sewell (rep. N. J.), Mills (dem., Tex.), and Vest (dem., Mo.). After the senate returned to its chamber the Nicaraguan canal bill came up as the unfinished business, and Mr. Morgan (dem., Ala.), recognizing the impossibility of its passage this session, withdrew it, giving notice, however, that he would introduce it at the extra session and would press it to a vote. The agricultural appropriation bill was then taken up and after some discussion was passed.

HOUSE—The house joined Wednesday with the senate in witnessing the count of the electoral vote for president and vice president of the United States for the term beginning March 4, 1897, and after the announcement of the result adjourned until Thursday. In the hour prior to the assembling of the joint convention and the formalities and the post office appropriation bills were reported and placed on the calendar. A senate bill was passed, authorizing the several courts of appeals to make tables of fees and charges which the supreme court of the United States shall make uniform as nearly as possible.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—SENATE—The diplomatic and consular appropriation bill, carrying an aggregate of $1,670,538 was passed after some caustic remarks by Mr. Morgan (dem., Ala.) on an item of $6,000 for a minister plenipotentiary to the states of Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Salvador. An agreement was reached to have the vote on the conference report to the immigration bill taken at 4 p.m. next Wednesday. At 1:30 the senate went into executive session on the arbitration treaty and continued to sit with closed doors till 4:43 when it adjourned.

HOUSE—A displaced semi-colon in the bill providing for the refunding of the bonded indebtedness of the several territories was the innocent cause of a wholly unexpected debate on the monetary question in the house Thursday lasting two or more hours. At Mr Knox's suggestion the semi-colon was replaced by a comma. On Mr. McMillin's suggestion the bonds, other than the Arizona gold bonds named, were made payable in the "lawful money of the United States," and the bill was then passed. The sundry civil appropriation bill for the year ending June 30, 1898, was reported by Mr. Sherman and is on the calendar. Mr. Bartlett (Dem. G.) presented the unanimous report of elections committee No. 1 upon the contest of Thomas E. Watson vs. C. F. Black from the Tenth district of Georgia, in favor of Black, and stated that he would call it up at the first opportunity.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—SENATE—A joint resolution was introduced Friday, declaring that the Clayton-Bulwer treaty of April 19, 1850, abrogated. The joint resolution went over till Saturday. Mr. Morgan announcing his purpose of then addressing the senate upon it. The consideration of the right of the congress to recall from the president sent to him for his approval (except to correct an error in engrossment or enrollment) came up again Friday, and was under a resolution offered by Mr. Hill (dem., N. Y.), referred to the judiciary committee for examination and report. Mr. Hill also offered a resolution, which was adopted, directing the secretary of state in the use of good offices with the Spanish government to have Sylvester Scovil, the American newspaper correspondent recently arrested in Cuba, removed to Havana in order that he may be under the more immediate care and protection of the United States consul general. The executive session of the senate lasted for only an hour. Then the galleries were cleared, the doors were closed and the consideration of the arbitration treaty was resumed in executive session. At 5 p.m. the senate adjourned until Saturday.

HOUSE—The day was devoted to the consideration of the post office appropriation bill. An effort to strike out the provision for special mail facilities between Boston and New Orleans was defeated, but an amendment to the section was agreed to making this service operative between New York and New Orleans. This allowed a reduction of about $25,000 in this appropriation, leaving it at $971,928. One or two amendments of minor importance were agreed to and the bill passed. The sundry civil appropriation bill was taken up and its first reading begun. The house adjourned until Saturday, doing away with the usual Friday night session.

Mary McCullom in Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 13.—Mary McCullom, a young woman whose disappearance from her home in Brookville, Ind., a week ago, caused a sensation, is probably in Cleveland. Her father, Thomas McCullom, had a long conference with Police Superintendent Corner Friday. Two trainmen were present and they told the police that the young woman came to this city. A depot employee also said that he had seen her and that she was accompanied by a man about 25 years old. Superintendent Corner ordered a special detail of police to scour the city for the missing girl.

JOHN MARRS,

He Slew His Four-Year-Old Son, Shot His Sister and Daughter,

And Then Took His Own Life—His Wife May Die of Prostration—He Had Previously Been an Inmate of the Kentucky Lunatic Asylum.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 15.—The bloodiest domestic tragedy that ever occurred in Lexington was enacted at 7:45 o'clock Saturday morning, when John Marrs killed his four-year-old son John, shot his 14-year-old daughter Helen, tried to kill his sister Ida and then killed himself.

Marrs was about 40 years old, and had been a member of the firm of M. Kaufman & Co., clothers, for years. He was prominent in building association circles, owning a great deal of real estate, and was considered one of the safest and most promising of Lexington's younger business men.

When the arising bell rang Saturday morning at his residence, 129 South Upper street, Mrs. Marrs, who slept with her daughter Helen in a room occupied by her husband, arose, put on her wrapper and went down into the kitchen to send a servant girl up with warm water for her husband.

He was sleeping in another bed with his son, John, and did not awake when the bell rang. When the girl went into the room Marrs started up with such a peculiar expression on his face that she hastily set the water down and left the room.

When she was half way down the steps she heard a pistol shot. She continued to the kitchen and told her mistress that something was the matter upstairs. Mrs. Marrs and her sister-in-law, Miss Ida Marrs, a teacher in the public schools, ran up to the room. They heard shots as they were going up. Mrs Marrs fainted at the head of the steps, just as Helen ran out of the room and fell.

He struck her over the right eye with the weapon, cutting a long gash and knocking her back into the hall. As she fell he fired at her, but the bullet flew wild. Marrs slammed the door to.

Neighbors rushed in and forced the door, when a horrible sight met their gaze. Lying on the floor, with his feet under the bed and his head toward the door that opened into an adjoining room, was Marrs in a sea of blood. His throat was cut from ear to ear, both jugular veins and the windpipe being severed.

On the floor was a large, old-fashioned revolver with four empty chambers. On the bed was the boy, saturated with blood. He had a bullet-hole in the center of his forehead, and his throat was cut from ear to ear. Three pieces of flesh were cut from his right cheek.

Miss Ida Marrs' wounds are not dangerous, but she was badly prostrated from the shock. Mrs. Marrs is in a precarious condition from nervous prostration. About 10 years ago John Marrs showed signs of insanity and was incarcerated in the Eastern Kentucky lunatic asylum. He was discharged as cured after six months, and returned to business in the best of health and spirits and made money rapidly for several years.

On account of depression in business his affairs of late have not been in a prosperous condition.

He was taken violently ill about a month ago with a peculiar headache and remained at home three weeks. His friend, Moses Kaufman, called to see him several times this week and saw evidences of mental trouble and had intended to take him to a doctor Saturday and have him treated.

Marrs comes from one of Kentucky's oldest and best families. His father, John Marrs, was for many years treasurer of the city of Lexington. The family has always stood high in business and social circles.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 15.—The funeral of John W. Marrs and his boy, John, jr., took place at the Central Christian church at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The church was packed with fully 1,500 people. As many more were on the outside of the building, blocking the streets for squares. Father and son were buried in the same grave.

CHAMPION CORBETT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 15.—After a thorough examination of Champion Corbett, made by Dr. A. P. Brian, the well-known physician, issued the certificate which follows:

For several days past Fitzsimmons has been insisting that Corbett should be subjected to a thorough examination as to his physical condition. This should be a complete answer.

James Corbett is the most perfect specimen of physical manhood, in my opinion, in the world to-day. I saw him in his fight with Sharkey and must say that his condition is absolutely different at the present time from what it was on that occasion.

After a thorough examination I have failed to find a single flaw in his anatomy. The chest is expansive to a remarkable degree, showing the elasticity and firmness of the muscles. The capacity of the lungs indicates great endurance and especially when fortified by the fact that he has a perfect heart, the sounds of which are heard clearly and distinctly over every portion of the praecordeal region.

CHAMPION JAMES J. CORBETT.

The firmness and pliability of the muscles throughout his body give unmistakable evidence that James J. Corbett has cared well for his physical health, and undoubtedly has recently passed through a hard and persistent course of training.

"My examinations of Mr. Corbett were made both before and after exercise, and I can say that he showed scarcely any signs of fatigue after his violent practice. His heart showed no undue increase in action and he exhibited no signs of distress, the respiratory movements being slow, regular and full. His long, sinuous muscles are flexible and firm, without undue development in any one group. This is particularly characterized in the muscles of the chest, arms, shoulders and thighs, as well as the lower region of the back, all of which give evidence of strength and vitality. And the evidence, to my mind, which suggests a radical improvement in his condition as compared to his last visit to this coast, is the healthy appearance of the skin and mucuous membrane. The latter particularly gives marked evidence of a perfectly normal and rich condition of the blood and good tone of the system, throughout. After the general examination I tested the various reflexes with the object of determining the condition of his nervous system. The result was that I found the nervous system equally as good as the muscular system. This is vitally important, as the general conditions of the body depend primarily on the healthy action of the nervous centers.

PITTSBURGH POST

Plant Destroyed by Fire—Loss About Ninety Thousand Dollars.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 15.—Fire Sunday morning burned the building occupied by the Pittsburgh Post, causing a loss of $90,000. The printing presses, one valued at $25,000 and the other at $10,000 were badly damaged. Ten typesetting machines valued at $30,000 were ruined. The Post loss will probably reach $70,000, covered by insurance. The building is owned by the J. N. McCullough estate, and the loss on it will reach $20,000, covered by insurance. The fire is supposed to have started from the crossing of electric light wires. The Post will issue its paper from the office of the Pittsburgh Leader until new quarters can be secured.

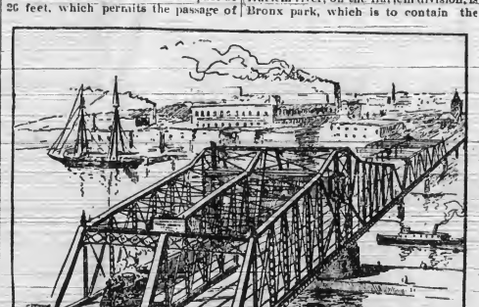
A GREAT STRUCTURE.



It Spans the Harlem River at New York City.

Completion of the New York Central's Four-Track Draw-Bridge and an Immense Steel Viaduct.

One of the most remarkable feats of engineering on record is just completed, and the passenger entering New York from the north now rides over one of the grandest examples of steel railway construction yet accomplished in this age of marvelous results in that direction.

This massive structure is remarkable in being the first four-track drawbridge ever constructed, and is the largest bridge of the kind in the world. It is 400 feet long and weighs 2,500 tons. The draw-bridge is 58 feet 6 inches wide, from center to center of outside trusses, and is carried on three very heavy trusses. Between the central and each of the two side trusses is a clear space of 26 feet, which permits the passage of two sets of double tracks. The floor is corrugated, and the rails are bolted to it on steel tie plates. The trusses of the draw-bridge span are 64 feet high in the center and 25 feet high at each end. At the highest part of these trusses is situated the engine house, which contains two oscillating double-cylinder engines, which turn the draw and can be worked together or separately, so that if one should break down at any time, the other can do the work.

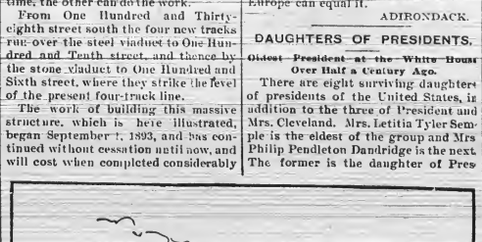
From One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street south the four new tracks run over the steel viaduct to One Hundred and Tenth street, and thence by the stone viaduct to One Hundred and Sixth street, where they strike the level of the present four-track line.

The work of building this massive structure, which is here illustrated, began September 1, 1893, and has continued without cessation until now, and will cost when completed considerably more than $3,000,000. The completion of the new work will permit the opening of all cross streets under the railway and so permit a perfectly free passage for street traffic.

One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street, which has become a great thoroughfare, will be entirely free, as the trains which heretofore crossed it at grade will pass over it at an elevation that will allow street cars and all traffic perfect freedom. At One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street the tracks will cross the street 14 feet above the level of the street, and at this point a magnificent passenger station is to be built, extending from One Hundred and Twenty-fifth to One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street, under the four-track viaduct.



This improvement will be of immense value to the entire state—in fact, to the whole country—as the bridge, being so high above the water, will never have to be opened except when large steamers or vessels with masts are to pass through; all tugs, canal boats, barges, etc., will have ample room to go under the bridge while it is closed.

The Harlem river, having been declared by congress a ship canal, the secretary of war has issued orders that all tugs and barges shall joint their smoke-stacks and tug-poles, to enable them to pass under the bridge while it is closed. He has also ordered that the bridge shall not be opened between the hours of seven and ten o'clock in the morning, and four and seven in the afternoon, except for police, fire or government vessels, the hours named covering the great business traffic in and out of the city, the important through trains as well as the principal suburban trains arriving and departing during those hours. This will avoid delays, which have been, at times, very annoying, and permit of much faster service than could have been maintained under the old arrangements; and, as speed is one of the principal factors in travel in this age, this feature will prove an important one.

Quite a number of the great improvements which have recently been made in the northern part of the city can be seen from the trains as they pass over the new viaduct. Among them are Grant's tomb, St. Luke's hospital and the buildings of Barnard college and Columbia college, on Morningside Heights, and very soon the grand structure of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine will be observed. Further north, and on the west side of the Harlem river, the now famous speedway is under construction and approaching completion; the magnificent High bridge, Washington bridge, McComb's dam bridge and the viaduct leading to it from the north are works of art, as well as of great utility, under which the trains pass, and on the right may be seen the buildings of the University of the City of New York, Webb's Sailors' home, and hundreds of other new buildings of less importance. North of the Harlem river, on the Harlem division, is Bronx park, which is to contain the great botanical gardens and zoological gardens of Greater New York, and with in a few years this portion of the city will offer attractions which will be unsurpassed in their character by any city in the world.

Greater New York, which is 10 miles wide by 35 miles long, certainly offers to the tourist and seeker after knowledge or pleasure more inducements than any other American city, and few cities in Europe can equal it.

DAUGHTERS OF PRESIDENTS.

There are eight surviving daughters of presidents of the United States, in addition to the three of President and Mrs. Cleveland. Mrs. Letitia Tyler Semple is the eldest of the group and Mrs Philip Pendleton Dandridge is the next. The former is the daughter of President Tyler, and is living in the Louisiana home, Washington, D. C. Mrs. Dandridge is the daugter of President Taylor, and presided at most of the white house functions during her father's brief occupancy—a little over a year; she lives in Winchester, Va. The only surviving daugter of President Johnson, Mrs. Martha Johnson Patterson, lives in the old Johnson homestead at Greenville, Tenn. Mrs. Ellen W. Grant Sartoris, the only daughter of President Grant, is now living in this country—since the death of her husband—in Washington, D. C. The only daughter of President Hayes, Miss Fanny Hayes, passes much of the winter in travel, and spends her summer at the Hayes homestead in Fremont, O. Mrs. Mary Garfield Stanley-Brown, the "little Mollie" of the Garfield family, lives in Washington during the winter and at the old family homestead in Ohio in the summer. The only daughter of President Arthur, Miss Helen Herndon Arthur, lives in Albany, N. Y., with an aunt, and spends much time in travel. Mrs. Mary Harrison McKee, the only daughter of President Harrison, lives at Saratoga, N. Y., and the Cleveland children, of course, are at their home in the white house.—Ladies' Home Journal.

TRUST TESTIMONY.

Partial Examination of Protection Beneficiaries.

The legislative committee of inquiry is not infrequently only a device for "saying undispirted things in such a solemn way." Certainly the first two sessions of Senator Lexow's committee on trusts have been of such a character. To the testimony there attaches only the value which belongs to a formal demonstration of facts which had been long of current notoriety.

The salient facts thus positively developed by this inquiry are these: The sugar trust controls 80 per cent. of the output of refined sugar in the United States and fixes the price of that staple. As a result of this domination of the market it is able to pay 12 per cent. dividends on preferred and 7 per cent. on its common stock.—Mr. Havemeyer amplifying his testimony at this point by remarking that he would not go into any business that would not net from 16 to 20 per cent. The capital stock of the company is $73,936,000, much of which was created for the purpose of buying up and suppressing rival refineries. The undivided surplus in 1895 exceeded $13,000,000. Mr. Havemeyer, in a burst of public spirit, went on to assert that another monopoly—that of the Arbuckle coffee concern—made a profit of three to four cents a pound on its entire output, and that he intended to enter that field, to the great profit of the public, and, incidentally, of course, to a profit of 15 to 20 per cent. for himself.

An immediate benefit might spring from this investigation if the gentlemen at Washington now engaged in formulating a new tariff would give heed to the figures showing the profits of the trust. It seems a safe proposition, one, indeed, that should be accepted by the most thorough-paced McKinleyite, that a monopoly making average profits of ten per cent. on what is believed to be heavily-watered stock is not in need of protection. But it is an equally safe proposition that the next official committee the Havemeyers will meet will be the ways and means committee of the house of representatives, with a plea for protection against German competition.

It cannot be said the examination of the beneficiaries of the trust system is being prosecuted with a degree of acumen which promises the best results. Nor does the fact that the committee will hold only six more sessions offer encouragement that its report will form a very valuable contribution to the literature of the subject.—N. Y. Journal.

BOSS HANNA'S POLITICS.

Boodle and Buncombe as Passports to Power.

Mark Hanna is at his best after a banquet. It is then that his genial soul expands, his massive brain begins to work and his tongue is loosened.

It was at a banquet that the genial Mark outlined the policy by which the people were to be induced to believe that Maj. McKinley was against the trusts and in favor of bimetallism. With unctuous fervor he described how, by carefully worded messages and speeches, the major would fasten his hooks on the confidence and affection of the dear people without hurting the interests that stood back of him.

Another banquet has loosened the great man's tongue and expanded his soul. The Cleveland Railway Men's Republican club, the name under which Mr. Hanna's employes masquerade in politics, gave him a dinner and when the good things had been eaten and the republican boss rolled out a chunk of wisdom embracing his whole political platform.

Mr. Hanna, who, by the way, was addressed as either a senator or a cabinet officer and who failed to deny the soft impeachment, congratulated the men upon what they had accomplished and urged them to strive for more. "If at any time I can do aught to assist you," said he, "draw on me at sight."

There is only one thing in politics, from Mr. Hanna's standpoint, and that is the draft. His belief in it is excusable, perhaps, because that seems to be the only thing in politics that he knows and it has carried him a long way towards power and glory. It nominated and elected his candidate for the presidency and has placed within his reach the dazzling choice between the senate and the cabinet.

His supreme faith in the power of boodle and sham in politics explains his preeminence among the leaders of up-to-date republicanism.—St. Louis Republic.

If It Had Been Bryan!

The 4th of March is almost here, and the voice of the receiver is still heard in the land. Notwithstanding the wish which is father to the thought that prosperity should come, banks crash, business enterprises are staggered, and the receiver stands preeminent as the advance guard of McKinleyism. We were told that the mere triumph of "sound money" would so compose matters that without further effort business would take care of itself. The triumph has come, the date of inauguration can be seen over the hilltops of time, and there is no improvement. Suppose Bryan had been elected, how all these things would have been charged up against free silverism! Since the reverse is the fact, are they not as fairly chargeable to McKinleyism? It may be like rubbing turpentine into a raw place to ask the question, but the people are asking it everywhere.—Atlanta Constitution.

——It is said that the major, in order to do a good turn for Mark Hanna, may be compelled to put him in the cabinet. The country will not be in grief, however, if Hanna's participation in government shall continue to be that of one of the ordinary everyday units.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

——Syndicate shareholders who are not satisfied with the dividends declared in the proposed tariff bill will send in their claims to Chairman Dingley.—St. Louis Republic.

FARMERS VICTIMIZED.

How the Protection Scheme Robs the Producer.

It is reported from Washington that the proposed tariff law will be full of protection for the farmers. The republican party has been trying for a good many years to properly protect the farmers, and still they have steadily been compelled to accept the assurance that the next tariff would do the fair thing by them. That is, the farmers have continued to live in hope, notwithstanding the fact that many of them died in despair. Now, for the seventeenth time, the farmers are assured by the republican party that the good thing they have been eagerly looking for is coming right along, and that the next tariff will embrace the quantity and quality of protection they need in their business. This means that, in the opinion of the republican leaders, "the same old gag" has not as yet outlived its usefulness; that the farmers' eyes may still be fitted with wool blinders.

It is not necessary at this late day to bring argument to bear on the fallacy that the farmer can be benefited by republican protection. The history of American tariffs is full of evidences of such fallacy. The farmer has always found protection working against him; never in his behalf. His agricultural implements and the clothing he and his family wear he has been compelled to buy at prices that prove how well the manufacturers are protected, but when he has gone to the market to sell, he has always found protection taking a day off. The republican party has found it much easier to fool the farmer than to make a tariff that was of the smallest advantage to him.

Of course the scheme of republican protectionmust embrace the good of all. Manufacturers, merchants, mechanics and farmers must come in for a share in its manifold blessings—on paper, and if the scheme fails here and there in operation, there is always plenty of "wool." The republicans will never be at a loss so long as the "wool" holds out. It is perhaps a good thing, for them, that the farmers are disposed to be credulous, for they can enjoy in anticipation the benefits that are quite certain to fail of materialization.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

HANNA IN TROUBLE.

Ohio Republican Bosses Beginning to Mix.

The news from Ohio indicates that a head-on collision is imminent between the Hanna humbug and the Forsker-Kurtz-Bushnell machine. Both are on the same track and coming at full speed from opposite directions towards the same point—the Ohio senatorship now held by John Sherman.

Out in Ohio they seem to look upon Hanna as a ridiculous sort of person, a political incubus and heavy deadweight, and they think the best place for him is at home with his private business of organizing iron and steel "combines" and freight monopolies.

The Forsker crowd is saying openly that Hanna came very near electing Bryan; that the reason Ohio gave McKinley only 47,000 majority instead of the 150,000 that was expected was because of Hanna's record as a monopolist and oppressor of workingmen and a suppressor of competition. They show that the cry of Cleveland was unique among the great cities of the north in that it gave McKinley but 5,000 majority where it should have given him at least 30,000. And Cleveland is Hanna's own city.

These anti-Hanna Ohio republicans insist that if Hanna should get the senatorship the public indignation would be so great that Ohio would go overwhelmingly democratic at the next election. They back up their statement by a very convincing analysis of the election returns.

If one did not know how Hanna hated public life and public office, one would say, from the way he is laying about him with McKinley and federal patronage as a club, that he really wished to go to Washington and save long-distance telephone charges between Cleveland and the white house.

Whichever side wins the country will gain nothing. But the pulverization of the Hanna humbug would be amusing. —N. Y. World.

——McKinley should be free to choose his own cabinet, but it is hardly fair to mesmerize business by selecting a lot of old fossils.—Philadelphia Item.

——No man in the cabinet will be more friendless and uneasy than Sherman. But he has the possibility of keeping everyone about him in hot water. —Utica Observer.

——The new tariff will produce plenty of revenue, but only for the trusts. The government will still have a deficit unless its expenses are enormously cut down.—Kansas City Times.

——The next excuse the McKinleyites will give for delaying the arrival of prosperity will be the failure of Mark Hanna to break into the United States senate.—Kansas City Times.

——Mr. Dingley's committee has not neglected to give the lumber kings the privilege of levying a heavy tax on the wood for the poor man's home and implements of labor.—St. Louis Republic.

——Mr. McKinley's campaign utterance about opening the mills instead of the mints sounded very nice, but about the only things opened since his election are soup houses and distributing depots for the poor.—N. Y. Journal.

——The McKinleyites are proposing an extra session of congress next spring to throw the country into a fever of uncertainty in regard to tariff laws. The country needs a rest from tariff tinkering; but what cares the republican machine? Did it not pledge the millionaire contributors to the campaign fund that their purses should be replenished by fixing the tariff rates so that they could levy tribute upon the people?—Illinois State Register.

Several of the wealthiest and most prominent citizens of Marion county have been indicted for giving to the Assessor incorrect lists of their property. The penalty is not exceeding $500 fine.

The boiler in the Frankfort jail exploded and killed two men and wounded several others, and suit for damages will follow, as the authorities had been warned of the boiler's unsafe condition.

Several star route mail contractors reside at London, and pay day, which comes quarterly, is a great event in that mountain town. Between $50,000 and $75,000 are paid out to sub-contractors every three months.

William Buck, colored, charged with attempted rape upon Mrs. Clark, of Marion county, was tried, convicted and sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary, one day last week, the time consumed by the whole proceedings exceeding not over twenty minutes.

The Ashland News tells of a young woman who is certainly persevering enough to make her way in the world: "Miss Maggie Welsh received the two dollars and a half in gold at the matinee yesterday afternoon, having made 1,390 words out of the word "Pathfinder."

Last August there was a big protracted meeting held in the northwest end of Caldwell county, says the Banner, and the preacher not only pleaded with sinners, but warned them of the certainty of death and the uncertainty of life. Since that meeting forty of those to whom he preached have died. His words seem most prophetic.

In Fulton county, Dave Browder, white, killed a negro. Harry Judge and Ernest Johnson, Deputy Sheriffs, patroled the road to intercept Browder. Thinking he was in a buggy that the occupants refused to halt at the command of the officers, the Deputies fired on the buggy, killing Chas. Williams, who, with his companion James Campbell, was returning from a neighborhood party.

Miss Florence, daughter of Major Henry Stanton, the poet, accidentally shot herself through the shoulder at the home of her parents near Louisville. She was engaged in her room arranging some clothing in her wardrobe where she had been in the habit of keeping a large 38-calibre pistol; trigger caught in dress sleeve and discharged; ball struck left shoulder, ranged upward, narrowly missing shoulder bone. Wound is not dangerous.

There is confined in the penitentiary at Eddyville, probably two of the youngest and smallest convicts in any penitentiary in the United States. Walter Barnett was sent from McCracken county for one and a half years on the charge of obstructing railroads. He weighed when received seventy-six pounds, height, four feet seven inches, age, eleven years. The other James Walden, was sent from Ballard county, charged with horse stealing, for a two years sentence. He is four feet six inches high, weighs ninety-two pounds, and is also eleven years of age.

The Warden of the Ohio penitentiary telegraphed County Attorney Robert Wood the first of the week asking if he would deliver the two Clark men, in jail here charged with stealing some hides from Louis Gutting's slaughter house, awaiting trial at the March term of the Circuit Court. The Clarks it is said are out of the Ohio penitentiary on parole, and having violated the provisions of their parole, the Ohio penitentiary authorities want them returned to that institution. There being some question about the legality of the surrender of the Clarks Attorney Wood has written to Attorney General Taylor at Frankfort and if he can surrender them to the Ohio authorities will do so to save Kentucky the expense of their trial and confinement in the State prison. —Warsaw Independent.

Hog cholera is doing great damage in Green county.

About one thousand cattle at Richmond on Court day and selling at 2½ to 4 cents.

Tom Turk has shipped about 45 carloads of hogs from Bardwell to the markets this season.

A car load of poultry containing 3,800 hens 200 geese, 125 ducks and 50 guineas was shipped from Lawrenceburg to Lindonville, N. Y.

W. F. Lillard of Anderson county, sold to C. F. Searcy a thoroughbred Berkshire gilt for $100, and one of the same kind to A. J. Rice at the same price.

At Cynthiana on Court day only a few bunches of cattle on the market and all sold, at low prices, according to quality; for yearling steers 3 to 2½ cents.

Agricultural Commissioner Moore has closed a contract with Landreth & Sons for $600 worth of garden seeds to be distributed by his department. He says that he has saved $250 on seeds this year.

Sam McDowell, of Jessamine owns a sow that beats the record. She is only 2½ years old, yet she has given birth to six litters of pigs, divided as follows: 11, 12, 15, 12, 11 and 10, making grand total of 71.

Sheep kept upon farms in small flocks are more profitable per capita than those kept in large numbers, for the reason that they are more easily handled, and are consequently better cared for. Large flocks are better suited to the range.

H. F. Hillenmeyer, the nurseryman, writes to the Lexington Gazette: "I know every fruit-grower in the State is much interested in the effect of the severe cold of the 25th, 26th and 27th. The thermometers here ranged from three to six degrees below, but not a thing is frozen. The warm weather of November had sharply advanced peach, cherry and plum buds, and while these can resist some twelve or fifteen degrees below zero, the cold of Wednesday morning was just about the measure of their endurance, and would likely have been fatal to them had the twigs not been very comfortably covered with hoar frost, which is always a protection to frozen tissues."

[News]

W. G. Claxon met with a narrow escape from total destruction last week by being thrown over the approach to the Sanders bridge across Eagle. He was driving some porkers to the railroad and they were just entering the span approach to the bridge. He has a fine Shepherd dog that was doing most of the driving; while he and a colored boy were following along behind in a buggy. The dog slipped up behind a hog that was lagging behind. Mr. Claxon had said to the boy. "Watch him nip him." The dog nipped him and the hog in his fright ran the wrong way. It struck the front leg of Mr. Claxon's horse—knocked him down—got mixed up in the wheel, and before one could think, horse, buggy, hog, dog, nigger, and Mr. Claxon went over the fill. After striking the bottom and a good deal of untangling it was found that nobody was hurt but the buggy, which was minus a top and a few spokes.

Last Sunday afternoon about 2 o'clock Robt. Marksberry shot and painfully wounded Jim Bruce near Hunt's store, on Twin creek. The facts so far as we are able to learn are that Bruce was riding along the road when Marksberry came out of his house and approached Bruce, telling him to dismount that he intended to whip him. Bruce started to get down when Marksberry pulled a pistol and fired four shots in rapid succession, two of which took effect; one ball passing through his hand and one penetrating the ear and glancing along the skull. The other two shots struck the horse.

A Washington special says: "The tobacco growers of Kentucky are very much interested in the framing of the new Tariff Bill. They want a reciprocity clause inserted in the bill that will be of some benefit to them by increasing their export trade. Representative Clardy, who is thoroughly familiar with the subject, says that if the tobacco growers of Kentucky could secure an open market in France, Spain, Italy, and the other countries, the same as they enjoy in England and Germany, it would greatly increase their trade, and at the same time produce a better price for tobacco. The tobacco interest he said, was not fully understood by Congress because it was confined to a few States, and yet it was a former article of export. In the opinion of Mr. Clardy the present law, if enforced, would bring France and the other countries that discriminate against our tobacco to terms. In other words, if we would treat France in the tobacco question as we treated Germany on the hog question, it would result in largely increasing our export tobacco trade, and the tobacco growers of Kentucky and the South would reap the benefit. Mr. Clardy is working up a sentiment for the tobacco men, and the opinion prevails today that the Ways and Means Committee will do something towards facilitating our export tobacco trade."

WHAT'S the matter with Hanna now.

FORAKER has been done up in the house of his friend.

THE Carroll county Republican Committee met, last week, and indorsed Lieberth for Collector in this district.

IT is believed by some that Scott Jackson is writing his confession. Walling's friends hope to save him from the gallows by means of it.

THE inhabitants of fourteen parishes in Louisiana, are in a starving condition, and their suffering appeals to the charity of the entire country.

GOV. BUSHNELL'S backbone weakened, and he has decided to appoint Hanna to the United States Senate. The pressure was too great for the Governor to withstand.

IT appears to be the policy of Major McKinley to dish out as little pie as possible until the tariff legislation he demands is adopted. He will use the pie as a persuader.

ONE week from to-day Grover becomes a private citizen, and there are those who believe the Democratic party would have been much better off had he always been such.

"TRUTH" was not supported in Louisville, but how could it expect to be in a city where nearly all the members of the local legislature are under indictment for accepting bribes.

IF Gov. Bradley does not head State Inspector Lester off he will soon satisfy the public that the Governor's appointees are utterly incompetent for the positions he assigned them.

THE McKinley administration comes into existence with a bitter fight on its hands, and it will require some very fine generalship on the part of the President to keep enough of his party in line in Congress to pass the economic measures so dear to him.

TWO brothers, Albert and William Hineman, Greenup county, fell out over a trace chain, the property of William, who struck his brother over the head with it, when Albert grabbed a butcher knife and slashed William across the neck. He then got a shot gun and shot William in the neck and shoulder, producing very ugly wounds.

HOW did it happen that Major McKinley selected an anarchist as his Secretary of the Treasury? Was he imposed upon by not being informed that Mr. Gage was instrumental in having Gov. Atgerld to pardon those Chicago anarchists? A mugwump anarchist is a dangerous combination notwithstanding its single-gold-standard prosperity safety valve.

THE Jefferson county grand jury struck pay dirt when the investigation of the Louisville council was begun. The Republicans persuaded the people of Louisville to turn the city government over to them for reform, but the grand jury has drawn the curtain back and exposed as corrupt a set of officials as ever ruled a city. One dose of Republican reform will satisfy Louisville.

ALTHOUGH the reported row between Speaker Reed and Representative Boutelle, of Me., has been repeatedly denied by others, neither of the principals have said a word. They do not speak to each other when they pass, and members of the House are wondering how Boutelle will fare when Reed makes up the committees of the next House. He is now Chairman of the Naval Committee.

THE receipts of the post offices of the country are regarded as an indisputable barometer of the condition of business. A statement given out last week by Postmaster General Wilson shows the gross receipts of thirty of the post-offices in the largest cities for January, 1896 and 1897. Twenty of the offices show a decrease, the greatest in years. Another proof of the delay in the arrival of promised prosperity, and another proof that those who declared business began to improve the day after the election were mistaken.

Dr. Hawkins was born in Spotsylvania county, Virginia, January 30th, 1805, and came to Kentucky in 1838, settled near Ghent, Carroll county, in what was then a new country. He turned his attention to medicine, and after completing a course of medical studies, became one of the leading practictioners of the State.

He came to Boone county about 1840, locating near Landing Springs, and remained in that neighborhood until 1851, when he moved to near Frankfort, where he has since resided.

In 1846, he was elected by the Whigs to represent his district in the State Senate, which place he filled with great credit to himself and with satisfaction to his people. After this he was elected Chief Clerk of the Senate, which place he held without interruption for more than 25 years.

Dr. Hawkins was converted and joined the Baptist church on the last Sunday in May, 1831, at Winn's school house near Richmond, Virginia.

He leaves eight children, four sons and four daughters, all living and grown, besides numerous grandchildren. Mrs. F. M. Stephens, of East Bend, is the only child in this county. C.

I desire, through the medium of your paper, to thank my Boone county friends for the many kindnesses extended to myself and wife during our recent visit to Boone. Though the skies are brighter and the water purer on "Paradise Ridge," in Tennessee, than they are in old Boone, yet the people are no more hospitable, and it gave us great pleasure to meet and greet our friends in Kentucky.

We anxiously watch the coming of the RECORDER each week, because it brings us news from those we knew and loved, and it is needless to add that we read it from beginning to end.

The Tennessee Centennial will be the means of bringing this garden spot of the South to the attention of the world, and inquiries are being made every day about farms; imigration is constantly increasing and none who come go away. This section is on a boom, and those who come now will have many advantages over those who invest later. No one who investigates the conditions of climate, soil and health here can fail to be impressed with the fact that this is the coming portion of our country, and I wish that more of the people of Boone county knew of its advantages.

Your Friend, L. J. SETTERS.

CAREFUL weighing shows that an ordinary bee, not loaded, weighs the five-thousandth part of a pound, so that it takes 5,000 bees to make a pound. But the loaded bee, when he comes in fresh from the fields and flowers, freighted with honey bee-bread, weighs nearly three times more.

BY its action in the past the Courier-Journal has so endeared itself to Gov. Bradley that he has promised that paper that it shall be the first to receive the tip when he decides the time of the special session of the legislature, and thus the Commercial will be left again.

THAT Arbitration Treaty which Senator Sherman was so very anxious to have the Senate pass at this session has been completely sidetracked. Some of the leading features of the treaty were decidedly objectionable to at least half the members.

IT is very plain that the next administration will have trouble with the money question, by the silver advocates delaying tariff legislation to force some legislation favorable to the white metal.

THE grand jury in Louisville is paying its respects to the street car company, having given the city lawmakers, one banking institution and a building association a shaking up.

IT is given out now that the Louisville Dispatch, the Democratic free silver journal, is an absolute certainty, and that it will make its bow at the appointed time.

THERE is a new baby girl at the home of Ex-President Harrison, and in it he is more interested than he is in the McKinley administration.

J. F. BLYTH.

Date of Primary Election Changed to June 5, 1897.

Pursuant to the call of the Chairman of the county Democratic Executive committee, the committee met in D. E. Castleman's law office in Burlington, last Monday afternoon. The following members were present: D. E. Castleman, chairman; B. L. Rice, Secretary, P. E. Cason, proxy for Elijah Parker; Reuben Conner, Richard Stephens, Robt. McGlasson, Geo. Ossman, proxy for J. C. Hughes.

The chairman stated the object of the meeting to be for the purpose of considering the propriety of changing the date of the primary election as fixed at the last meeting. A motion to reconsider the action of the committee on the second Monday in December was made and carried, and the order made on that date is now held for naught.

It was agreed by the committee to hold a primary election to nominate candidates for the various county offices to be filled at the regular election in November, 1897. It was further agreed that said primary election be held on the first Saturday in June, 1897, and the Executive Committee will meet in the Court-house in Burlington, at 2 o'clock p. m., on Monday, June 7th, 1897, and count the votes cast for each candidate for the respective offices, and the candidate receiving the highest number of votes cast for any office will be declared the Democratic nominee for that office.

The committee adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That all persons who voted for Bryan and Sewall at the last November election, and all persons who did not vote but would have voted for Bryan and Sewall had they voted, and all young men who will be legal voters at the next November election, and will pledge themselves to support the Democratic party and the nominees of said primary election, shall be allowed to vote.

Resolved, That all persons who desire to be candidates before said primary election shall, on or before the 5th day of April, 1897, record their names with the chairman of the county committee, and pay their assessments to him.

Resolved, That only such candidates who pay their assessments to defray the expenses of said primary election, on or before the fifth day of April, 1897, shall be entitled to have their name placed upon the ballots to be voted for.

Resolved, That all candidates for precinct offices and for Coroner who wish their names to appear upon the ballots for said primary, shall pay to the chairman of the county committee one dollar, to help pay the expenses of said primary election.

The chairman and secretary were authorized to assess the candidates to defray the expenses of the primary election.

D. E. CASTLEMAN Chairman,
B. L. RICE, Secretary.

JAMES A. GARY,

CANTON, O., Feb. 20.—James A. Gary, of Baltimore, who came to Canton Friday by the invitation of President-elect McKinley, left at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon. A few moments before his departure for the east he authorized the United Associated Presses to make this announcement:

Gov. McKinley has tendered me a portfolio in his cabinet. While it was not definitely settled which one, I am assured it will be the one which I can accept. The understanding is that Mr. Gary will be postmaster general. As he is not a lawyer he can not be attorney general, which is the only other portfolio unprovided for.

JAMES A. GARY.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 20.—A special from Canton, O., to the American says: Mr. James A. Gary, of Baltimore, has been selected for postmaster general in the cabinet of the next administration. This information, though not publicly announced, is authoritative.

CANTON, O., Feb. 20.—James A. Gary, of Baltimore, who will in all probability be the next postmaster general, arrived here at half-past ten Friday, and was driven to Maj. McKinley's house. They entered at once into consultation.

CANTON, O., Feb. 20.—It can be stated on the highest authority that J. J. McCook, of New York, has not been offered the position of attorney general. That place is still open as is the position of postmaster general. It is likely, however, that Mr. McCook, whose title is captain, not colonel, will be offered within a week the portfolio of the department of justice, and that James A. Gary, of Baltimore, may be chosen for the post office department. Maj. McKinley was a great deal better Friday morning and went out for a drive at 9 o'clock. The weather is superb.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Col. John J. McCook said Friday that all the news he has of his alleged selection for the attorney generalship is contained in the press dispatches from Canton. He asserted that he had received no intimation direct or indirect that Maj. McKinley intends making him a member of his cabinet.

THE CABINET.

It is Now Thought McKinley's Advisers Have Been Named.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—It is generally understood here among those who are close to President-elect McKinley that the statement published as to the two last selected members of the cabinet, Gary, of Maryland, and McCook, of New York, are accurate, and that the completed cabinet of the new president, as it will be submitted to the senate on the 5th of March next, will be as follows:

Secretary of State—John Sherman, of Ohio.

Secretary of the Treasury—Lyman J. Gage, of Illinois.

Secretary of War—Gen. Russell A. Alger, of Michigan.

Secretary of the Navy—J. D. Long, of Massachusetts.

Secretary of the Interior—Joseph McKenna, of California.

Postmaster General—James A. Gary, of Maryland.

Secretary of Agriculture—James Wilson, of Iowa.

CHIEF JUSTICE BEASLEY,

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 20.—Chief Justice Merce Beasley, of the Supreme court of New Jersey, died of bronchial pneumonia shortly after 7 o'clock Friday morning. All the members of his family, save his son, ex-Judge Chauncey Beasley, were at his bedside, when he expired. The latter is also ill of pneumonia.

Chief Justice Beasley was the oldest member of the bar in the state and esteemed as one of the most learned jurists in the country.

To Legalize Prize Fighting in Michigan.

LANSING, Mich., Feb. 20.—A bill was introduced into the lower house of the legislature Friday morning by Representative Peters, of Ishpeming, which, if it passes, will enable the pugilists to pull off their mills in Michigan. It legalizes fighting with five ounce gloves under the auspices of athletic clubs in buildings owned by the club, or which they have occupied for one year.

Miners' Wages Reduced.

IRON MOUNTAIN, Mich., Feb. 20.—A ten per cent. reduction in the wages of miners employed in the Chapin and Sunny Lake mines has been put in force. A similar reduction will probably take place at the Pewabik and Pennsylvania Iron Co.'s mines, in which event 1,200 men in all will be affected.

Wholesale Liquor House Burned.

GALVESTON, Tex., Feb. 20.—The wholesale liquor house of James Fadden, on West Strand, was burned. The loss on stock and building will be about $30,000.

TOGETHER.

Scott Jackson and Alonzo Walling Will Die at the Same Hour.

The Death Warrant Placed in the Hands of Sheriff Plummer—The Death Watch Appointed for the Condemned Men by Judge Helm, of Newport.

COVINGTON, Ky., Feb. 19.—Jackson and Walling are both to end their miserable existence at the same moment. Neither of them will have an opportunity to confess after the death of the other that he, the dead man, was solely to blame for the murder of poor Pearl Bryan. The murderers will have to tell all they know before the fatal 20th of March, so that each may affirm or deny the tale related by the other or forever hold his peace.

Sheriff Jule Plummer, of Campbell county, Ky., has returned from Lexington, Ky., where he inspected the scaffold lately used for the execution of Laughlin at Brookville, Ky., and which is known as the "Mud Dauber," from having been built for the execution of Smith, who was known as the "Mud Dauber." Mr. Plummer found that this scaffold had but a single drop, and that the two men could not, therefore, be executed upon it at the same time.

He will therefore have a second scaffold built on the same pattern and has announced his determination of having both men swung off at the same time. The death warrant, which was delivered to Mr. Plummer Thursday by Wolcott, a Frankfort newspaper man who acted as Gov. Bradley's agent, provides that both men shall die the same day, but does not specify that they shall die at the same hour. There has been much speculation as to which would be swung off first, and as to what the second man would have to say, but this is settled by Sheriff Plummer's decision.

NEWPORT, Ky., Feb. 18.—Judge Helm made the following order Thursday morning in the circuit court: "Newport Commonwealth vs. Scott Jackson. It is ordered that, for the safe keeping of the defendant until his execution upon the day fixed by the governor, the jailer of Kenton county summon and have under his control two guards, one of which shall always be with and guard the defendant to the end that he may not escape or be harmed by himself or others, and that a statutory allowance to said guards will be paid by the courtroom commissioners in the county." Same order was given by Judge Helm in the case of Walling. The four men to be placed on the death watch will be at the expense of Campbell county.

GEN. GOMEZ

KEY WEST, Feb. 19.—Private information has been received in this city of the whereabouts of Gen. Gomez. He has succeeded in sliding by Gen. Weyler, and is now between him and Havana. Gomez gave the command for an advance, with strict orders that any man that struck a match or smoked would be court-martialed. He then advanced on the Moron trocha, in the eastern end of the island, with 5,000 cavalry and 10,000 infantry.

He advanced on the fort at midnight, and when he saw he was discovered by the Spanish, who fired on him, he ordered the cavalry to charge.

They swooped down on the fort and captured it, and the whole army went through the trocha. All of the arms and ammunition of the fort were captured. The army then continued the march and was encamped at Veguite when the news was sent to this city by a courier. His order in taking the fort was to use the machete only and the calvary made a gallant fight.

GEN. ROBINSON,

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Feb. 19.—Gen. John Cleveland Robinson, after a week's illness, died at his home in this city at 4:20 p. m. Thursday. Gen. Robinson was born in this city April 10, 1817. He spent three years at West Point, afterward studying law. In 1839 he obtained a commission as second lieutenant and entered the Fifth infantry. From this period until 1869, when he retired from the army, Gen. Robinson served his country in the military service, rising through the various grades to brigadier general of volunteers. He served through the Mexican war and after that campaign went to Florida to associate with the forces against the Seminole Indians. In 1872 he was elected lieutenant governor of the state of New York. He was commander in chief of the G. A. R. in 1877 and in 1888 and in 1889 was elected president of the society of the Army of the Potomac. He has been blind for several years as the indirect result of an injury received in battle.

Six Workmen Killed.

CADIZ, Feb. 19.—While a force of workmen were engaged Thursday in lowering a boiler into the new Spanish cruiser Princess of the Asturias, which is being fitted out at the naval yards here, the tackling gave way and the boiler fell into a gathering of men below, killing six of them and seriously injuring ten others.

Gov. Bushnell Rents a Residence.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 19.—Gov. Bushnell Thursday rented a residence in the city and act at rest the report that he intends to call an extra session of the legislature with a view to electing himself to the senate. The lease as made, however, expires in October next.

Funeral of Wm. P. St. John.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—The funeral of Wm. P. St. John, the ex-bank president and well-known advocate of the free coinage of silver, who died Sunday night, took place Thursday morning.

KING OF GREECE

ATHENS, Feb. 20.—A dispatch from Canea states that three of the great powers are in favor of a union between Crete and Greece.

It is reported that King George will appeal to the Hellenic race for a new loan to meet the expenses of the military and naval preparations. A British ironclad has prevented the steamer Junon from embarking provisions intended for the use of the Greek troops in Crete. The military preparations on the part of Greece continue. Two more classes of the reserves have been called out. The king openly favors resistance to the demands of the powers.

CANEA, Feb. 20.—Moslems have abandoned Voucoulia and have retreated to Alikianos, where they are surrounded. Fighting is now going on there.

A crowd of Moslems marched Friday to the military headquarters here and demand that they be furnished with arms in order to relieve their comrades. Martini rifles and ammunition were given to them and they marched to the city. Later fighting occurred in the hills near the city, with no decisive results on either side.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 20.—The report that Lord Salisbury, the British prime minister, had sent a circular note to the powers favoring the granting of autonomy to Crete, with a prince of Greece to administer the affairs of the island, is confirmed.

PARIS, Feb. 20.—The Temps says that the powers are resolved to speak firmly to the government at Athens, solely from fidelity to the tradition that France and Great Britain wish to exhaust all means of constitution before consenting to the other measures so urgently demanded by the courts allied to the Greek dynasty.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 20.—Russia, it is said, is prepared to bring about the forcible expulsion of the Greek torpedo flotilla from Cretan waters, the disarmament of the Greek troops in Crete and a blockage of the Greek coasts if the Hellenic government persists in its imprudent attitude. If Greece goes to war with Turkey she will be left to fight her battles alone.

PRINCESS MARIE OF GREECE.

ATHENS, Feb. 20.—The proposals of some of the European powers to take coercive measures against Greece to enforce their prohibition of Greek action in Crete have aroused fierce public resentment throughout the kingdom, and popular demands that the government resist the action of the powers at any cost are being made in all quarters. The government, backed by the unanimous sentiment of the people, still insists that the Greek flotilla in Cretan waters, shall be allowed to act in accordance with the purpose for which the vessels were sent. If the European squadron should prevent Greece from acting against the Turks by sea, a revolution in Macedonia or Epirus is certain to follow. The attitude assumed by the liberals in the British parliament in regard to Crete is hailed with great enthusiasm here. Greece has rellied and still relies upon an upheaval of the free peoples everywhere in her behalf, and this feeling of confidence in the sympathy of Europe generally goes far towards explaining the defiant course she has taken.

ATHENS, Feb. 20.—The Greek steamer Pan Helenic, conveying munitions of war to the insurgents in Crete, has been stopped and turned back by a British cruiser. The action of the British vessel has created the fiercest indignation here.

CANEA, Feb. 20.—Col. Vassos, commander of the Greek troops in Crete, has mounted guns on the heights of Akrotiri and is making preparations to capture the Turkish fort at Volkolies. From present indications fighting is likely to take place very soon.

ROME, Feb. 20.—The Messagero asserts that the Turkish commander, Photiades Pasha, recently addressed a letter to Col. Vassos, commanding the Greek troops in Crete, threatening to imprison him and afterwards shoot him, and that Vassos contemptuously tore up the letter.

All Europe Defied.

ATHENS, Feb. 20.—The National league has addressed a memorandum to King George and Premier Delyannis, declaring that if Europe tries to cancel the fait accompli of the union of Crete with Greece, the league, through its powerful resources in Macedonia and elsewhere in the Balkans, will provoke a general uprising of Hellenists.

Destructive Fire at Gloucester, Mass.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Feb. 20.—Webster block, on Pleasant street, comprising stores, offices and opera house, was burned early Friday forenoon. The block was the second best in the city, and the loss will amount to $80,000 or $100,000. Insurance about $60,000.

Drainage Canal a Failure.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—Chicago's great drainage canal is one stupendous failure. Fully 50 people, who have investigated the matter, say this is so. They say that the $30,000,000 spent on it is lost.

A WOMAN'S BODY.

What Its Neglect Leads to. Mrs. Chas. King's Experience.

A woman's body is the repository of the most delicate mechanism in the whole realm of creation, and yet most women will let it get out of order and keep out of order, just as if it were of no consequence. Their backs ache and heads throb and burn; they have wandering pains, now here and now there. They experience extreme lassitude, that don't-care and want-to-be-left-alone feeling, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness and the blues, yet they will go about their work until they can scarcely stand on their poor swollen feet, and do nothing to help themselves. These are the positive fore-runners of serious womb complications, and unless given immediate attention will result in untold misery, if not death.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will, beyond the question of a doubt, relieve all this trouble before it becomes serious, and it has cured many after their troubles had become chronic.

The Compound should be taken immediately upon the appearance of any of these symptoms above enumerated. It is a vegetable tonic which invigorates and stimulates the entire female organism, and will produce the same beneficial results in the case of any sick woman as it did with MRS. CHAS. KING, 1815 Rosewood St., Philadelphia, Pa., whose letter we attach:

"I write these few lines, thanking you for restoring my health. For twelve years I suffered with pains impossible to describe. I had bearing-down feelings, backache, burning sensation in my stomach, chills, headache, and always had black specks before my eyes. I was afraid to stay alone, for I sometimes had four and five fainting spells a day. I had several doctors and tried many patent medicines. Two years ago I was so bad that I had to go to bed and have a trained nurse. Through her, I commenced to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I never had anything give me the relief that it has. I have taken eight bottles, and am now enjoying the best of health again. I can truthfully say it has cured me."

EXTRA SESSION.

Congress Will Be Reconvened Monday, March 15.

McKinley Decides That the Revenue Must Be Increased.

He Believes the Remedy Lies in an Immediate Adjustment of the Tariff—No Other Business Will Be Transacted at the Extra Session.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 22.—Before William McKinley shall have been president of the United States 24 hours he will call a special session of congress for Monday, March 15. His object is to provide without delay a sufficient income to pay the running expenses of the country. That will be his first aim, and everything else for the time being will be made of secondary importance, no matter what its nature may be.

The president-elect believes the present financial condition of the government will call for immediate action on the part of his administration, and he has decided that the remedy lies in an immediate adjustment of the tariff. In his proclamation calling congress in extra session he will so declare and will urge congress to enact a new tariff law.

Until this legislation shall have been enacted, to the satisfaction of the president, there will be no more appointments to office than are absolutely necessary to place the machinery of the new administration in motion. Callers of prominence—those who enjoy the confidence of the president—have been informed of the above intentions of Maj. McKinley. Chairman Hanna and John Sherman were consulted regarding this policy and they both agreed that it is the proper programme to carry out. The wishes and intentions of the president-elect will be conveyed to the republican senators and congressmen by Chairman Hanna, whether the latter shall succeed Senator Sherman or not.

Should Hanna be appointed by Gov. Bushnell he will at once assume and be accorded the leadership in the tariff work, and should he not be appointed he will be conveniently at hand to see that the views of Maj. McKinley on the tariff are framed into law. Senators and representatives who have business at the white house in connection with appointments to office will be prevailed upon to postpone such matters until congress shall have accomplished the work for which the president will call it in extraordinary session.

There are 97 St. Bernards entered from the best kennels in the country. Owners of coursing kennels met here Saturday and raised a fund of $500 to secure the Waterloo cup race for this city next October at the Fair grounds course.

Drank Three Ounces of Chloroform.

CAIRO, Ill., Feb. 22.—Fayette Stockton, inspector for the Southwestern Traffic association at this point, drank three ounces of chloroform Saturday with suicidal intent and died Saturday night. He left a note requesting that his brother, who is agent for the Traders' Dispatch Co. at St. Louis, be notified. Deceased was a nephew of Rr. Adm. Stockton, of the United States navy, and also a nephew of Oscar Pepper, of Kentucky whisky fame.

Work will be commenced from Guaymas northward in six weeks. English steel rails will be used, and before May 1 he thinks that construction work will inaugurated from Deming southward. The line is to run through Bolus Pass, in the Sierra Madre range, and will be 552 miles in length.

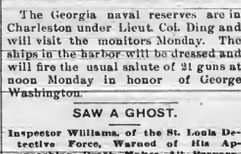
MARK HANNA

Will Succeed Senator Sherman—This Is Official.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 22.—Gov. Bushnell furnished the following statement to the United Associated Presses Sunday evening:

"It had not been my intention to make any announcement in relation to the action I would take in the matter of appointment to fill the prospective vacancy in the Ohio representation in the United States senate until the vacancy actually existed. But on account of the manifest interest of the people and their desire to know what will be done, I deem it best now to make the following statement: When Senator Sherman resigns to enter the cabinet of President McKinley, I will appoint to succeed him Hon. Marcus A. Hanna, of Cuyahoga county, to serve until his successor is chosen by the Seventy-third general assembly of the state. I trust this action will meet with the approval of the people. [Signed]



ASA S. BUSHNELL."

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 22.—Mark Hanna was shown the United Associated Presses dispatch from Columbus Sunday night announcing that Gov. Bushnell would appoint him U. S. senator to fill Senator Sherman's unexpired term. The national chairman refused absolutely to discuss the matter. "I don't doubt the authenticity of the telegram," said he, "but I have'nt received any official announcement from the governor or anyone else, so you will have to excuse me from discussing the matter, and I will say nothing until the official appointment does come."

THE WHITE SQUADRON.

Several of the Big War Vessels Leave Charleston Harbor.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Feb. 22.—Three monitors, the Puritan, Amphitrite and Terror, the dynamite cruiser Vesuvius and the dispatch boat Dolphin, lay at anchor in the stream Sunday just off the docks. The New York, Indiana, Columbia and Massachusetts left Sunday for Hampton Roads. The other ships will be in port for several days yet. The Puritan, although it has been off the bar since Friday, was first boarded Sunday when she came into the harbor. The captain reported a trip without incident, except a slight trouble with the engines, which he thinks can be easily overcome. The Puritan only made four or five knots on parts of her trip down as she expects to sail again in about a week

UNITED STATES WARSHIP "NEW YORK."

The Georgia naval reserves are in Charleston under Lieut. Col. Ding and will visit the monitors Monday. The ships in the harbor will be dressed and will fire the usual salute of 21 guns at noon Monday in honor of George Washington.

SAW A GHOST.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 22.—Inspector Wm. H. Williams, of the city detective department, is a gentleman above reproach and his word has never been doubted. Sunday evening he handed a note to Chief of Detectives Desmond which astonished him. The note stated that Saturday night while he (Williams) was asleep in his room on the third floor of the Four Courts he was visited by a ghost which awakened him and stated that he had but a short time to live. The spook advised him to prepare for death. The visitor vanished through a closed door. Williams spent Sunday in arranging his worldly affairs. He made his will, arranged for his pallbears and written farewell letters to relatives. Corroborative of Williams story is the testimony of John Stevens, janitor of the building, who says he encountered the ghostly visitor as it passed through the hall. There is no questioning the belief of the inspector in the reality of the visitor and the warning, and there is no disposition among his associates to ridicule him.

Six Hundred Thrown Out of Work.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 22.—The black diamond breaker operated by the Delaware & Hudson Coal Co., located at the east end of this city, was destroyed by fire Saturday. The loss will reach fully $80,000. Six hundred men and boys are thrown out of employment. This is the only breaker in this section that gave steady employment of late to many miners who were sadly in need.

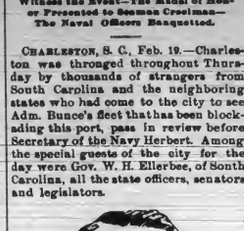
Found Dead in the Dining Room.

FALLS VILLAGE, Ct., Feb. 22.—Mrs. Hattie Chapin, aged 33 years, wife of W. H. Chapin, postmaster of this village, and Charles F. Mead, a traveling salesman, also of this village, were found dead in the dining room of the Chapin home Saturday morning. Both had been shot through the head with a 38-caliber revolver, which lay between them. Both bodies were warm when found. The discovery was made by Mrs. Chapin's ten-year-old son.

Strike Talk at Ishpeming, Mich.

ISHPEMING, Mich., Feb. 22.—The air is filled with strike talk and all sorts of ugly rumors are current. Rumors of a proposed reduction of ten per cent by the Lake Angeline and Cleveland Cliffs mines on March 1 have been officially denied, but with the present feeling a strike could easily be organized among the miners if a pretext for such action were given by the mining companies.

Free Library at Lexington.



LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 22.—A movement is on foot to establish a free library. An association has been formed, with Charles Kess, president, and George C. Morgan, secretary.

SECRETARY HERBERT

Reviews the War Vessels of Admiral Bunce's Squadron.

Thousands of Strangers in the City to Witness the Event—The Medal of Honor Presented to Seaman Creelman—The Naval Officers Banqueted.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Feb. 19.—Charleston was thronged throughout Thursday by thousands of strangers from South Carolina and the neighboring states who had come to the city to see Adm. Bunce's fleet that has been blockading this port, pass in review before Secretary of the Navy Herbert. Among the special guests of the city for the day were Gov. W. H. Ellerbee, of South Carolina, all the state officers, senators and legislators.

SECRETARY HERBERT.

Secretary Herbert and a party of friends arrived in the city from Washington in a special car at 6 o'clock Thursday morning. They were met at the depot by a committee consisting of Mayor Smith and other city officials. As the secretary stepped from his car a salute of 27 guns was fired by detachments from the first division South Carolina naval reserves under Capt. Dubos. The party was then escorted to the Charleston hotel, where breakfast was served. They were subsequently escorted to the custom house dock, where they boarded the revenue cutter Colfax. The secretary was saluted when he boarded the ships, all the sailors bring drawn up in man-of-war fashion. The day was ideal one. In the city it had been warm, but was where he was uncomfortable but on the water top-coats were not out of place. At the entrance to the jetties an unforseen trouble arose. The cutter and its train of pleasure craft ran full into a heavy fog, and when the flagship was picked up in the mist Adm. Bunce received a summons from the secretary and came alongside in his cutter. The moment he stepped aboard his peunant was run up and the little cutter became the flagship. The admiral was told by the secretary that he desired to board the battleship Maine to present Seaman W. J. Creelman with a medal awarded him for his distinguished conduct during the storm. So with both Secretary Herbert and Adm. Bunce aboard the cutter once more got under way. Capt. Crowninshields, of the Maine, was hailed and informed that the two officials would board his ship with their party.

The transfer was made without trouble, the jackies and officers receiving their superior officers with the customary salute and formality. With the ships crew drawn up on deck Capt. Crowninshields gave the orders for naval cadet Gherardi, his gunboat crew and seaman W. J. Creelman to step forward. Addressing them Secretary Herbert spoke of their gallant conduct during the storm.

They had, he said, made him proud of the navy; and then singling out Creelman the secretary presented him with the gold medal and an envelope containing $100, with a few words in commendation of his gallant deed.

The official ceremonies on board the ships having been concluded the officials attended a banquet at the Charleston hotel. Secretary Herbert responded to the toast 'Our Navy."

ATTORNEY GENERAL.

John J. McCook, of New York, Selected by President-Elect McKinley.

CANTON, O., Feb. 19.—President-elect McKinley has made another cabinet selection. It is his attorney general he has selected this time, and his choice is John J. McCook, of New York. This announcement is made on the highest authority.

Maj. McKinley made up his mind Thursday. The letter inviting Mr. McCook to enter the cabinet has not reached New York, but it is only a matter of mail schedules until Mr. McCook receives the official tender which his intimate friends have been saying he would receive for the past two weeks. Mr. McCook has in turn intimated to his friends that if the tender was received he would accept, so that the position in question is as good as filled.

A Family Massacred by Indians.

WINONA, N. D., Feb. 19.—The bodies of Rev. Thomas Spicer and wife, their daughter Mrs. Wm. Rouse, with her one-year-old twin boys, and Mrs. Waldron, mother of Postmaster Waldron, were found on the Spicer plantation near here Thursday. All were horribly mutilated and the tragedy is supposed to have been the work of Indians from the Standing Rock Indian reservation.

Torpedo Boat Ericsson Commissioned.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 19.—The torpedo boat Ericsson was put into commission at the navy yard Thursday afternoon. She has a speed of 22 knots and beside Lieut. Usher in command, her complement is an ensign, an engineer and about twenty sailors and firemen. As soon as she has taken on stores and coal she will sail to join Adm. Bunce's squadron.

The Austrian Squadron.

VIENNA, Feb. 19.—The Austrian squadron in Cretan waters has been reinforced and Adm. Hinko has assumed command.

AN UNFULFILLED PROMISE.

How the People Were "Sold" by the McKinley Crowd.

The general public has become somewhat accustomed to the great disappointment it began to experience shortly after the November election because of the failure of the promised prosperity to materialize, and, as a consequence, we don't hear so much about it now as we did a couple of months ago. It having been settled that the promise of prosperity was nothing more than a bunco game, the people have philosophically set themselves to the task of bearing the hard times and the growing stringency as best they can, satisfied, at least, that they were successfully "worked."

Occasionally, however, we still find expressions of dissatisfaction; sarcastic comments on the gullibility of the public, and caustic references to the grand republican rainbow of promise, in contemplation of which the American people were so easily "sold." Rev. J. C. Hogan, of Forest City, Pa., a Methodist clergyman, who is well known in this city, recently wrote a letter to the Carbondale Leader, bearing on the republican promise of prosperity, and the pith of his communication is found in the following excerpt:

"I am looking for the 'Advance Agent of Prosperity.' Evidently he is lost, stolen or strayed, and I want to send word to the public through your valuable paper.

"A few months ago we were told to vote for 'McKinley and Prosperity.' The undersigned then stated that the people could get McKinley by voting for him, but doubted if this would bring prosperity. To-day reports from the large cities relative to the number of unemployed show that there are over 4,500,000 men out of work. There are 200,000 in New York, 150,000 in Philadelphia, 50,000 in San Francisco, 30,000 in Detroit, 20,000 in Cleveland, 15,000 in Cincinnati, 75,000 in Boston, and so on. During the past few weeks widespread destitution has been reported by the papers.

"Where is the prosperity that was to follow?

"It will hardly satisfy us to say that McKinley & Co. have not yet gone into business. Why? Because they told us all that was needed to usher in a paradise of prosperity was 'sound money' and 'confidence. By 'sound money' was meant the 'existing gold standard' that we now have, and immediately after the election ignorant partisans and pulpit orators 'pointed with pride' to the 'great boom in business' as a proof that the announcement of republican success had brought us an overproduction of 'confidence.'

"But since the late lamented election many private banks, miscalled national, have gone republican, to the tune of twenty banks at the west failed during the month of December.

"Here in Forest City, preceding the election, many 'patriots' were especially desirous to save the 'honor' of the nation. They held a meeting in the opera house, at which a certain ancient 'statesman' discoursed on the beauties of sound money and confidence. The boys organized and sat up nights to sing for 'McKinley and Protection,' and they are now getting it at the rate of seven days per month. They were tramped in parades with the 'bosses' in command in carriages. And lo! even the 'bosses' have now been placed on half time. A thing which has never been known before the advent of the 'Advance Agent of Prosperity.'

"That 'confidence' game was a success in one way, but fails to work the other way.

"I notice that many of the preachers who so zealously spoke and voted in favor of plutocracy are now asking their pew renters to contribute food and clothes for the support of poverty. It is good to feed the poor, but it is better to work for conditions under which none need to be poor. A just social and industrial system would make this possible."

Mr. Hogan gives strong and graphic expression to his estimate of the situation, but his view of the case is not, in other respects, a whit different from the view entertained by the people, who are not saying much, of course, but who are perfectly satisfied that they were "roped in." It is hardly to be doubted that the promise of prosperity saved the major and his party last November.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

The Ohio republicans call the Zanesville meeting a "love feast." The emblem of love in Ohio is a knife up the sleeve.—St. Louis Republic.

——As far as can be ascertained at the present juncture, the new tariff scheme most favored by congress is constructed on the old-fashioned, crazy-quilt pattern.—Chicago Record (Ind.).

——In 1896 we imported more raw wool by $26,343,804 than in 1894. And we exported more manufactured wool by $765,274 in 1896 than in 1894. That's how the Wilson law blighted the woolen industry in this city.—Utica Observer.

——Those who are in a position to get in on the ground floor of republican protection are now eagerly looking forward to the 15th of March, when an extra session of congress will begin to rip up and tear up along tariff lines. Prosperity must take a back seat for the present.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

——In addition to a cabinet position the lumber trust is to be rewarded for its "campaign contribution" with a heavy duty on all the materials that are used in building the houses of farmers and artisans. To an old-fashioned moralist this seems a strange sort of compensation for the wasted forests, the denuded headwaters, the corrupted legislatures and the impudent purchase of public rights by bribery.—N. Y. World.

——One Mr. Marcus Hanna has been confiding to the benighted public just what sort of a new tariff we are to have. Now will this Mr. Hanna confide to that public what district he represents in the house of representatives, or what state he represents in the United States senate? There is a vague sort of impression that congress makes our tariff laws. Whonell's Hanna, anyhow?—Louisville Courier-Journal.

——The beauty of protective tariffs is being strikingly shown just now, when the price of American steel rails is five to six dollars a ton below the English minimum and yet we have a duty of $7.80 a ton to protect our infant industry from the terrible foreigner. In a few weeks the foreigner will be complaining that we are taking his own markets from him, but congress will continue the duty for the benefit of the trust when it reorganizes to mulct the home consumers.—Kansas City Times.

STICK TO THEIR LIE.

Republicans Adhere to Their Doctrine of Falsehood.

The republican party, as represented by Senator Platt and his organs, appears to be convinced of the correctness of the old proverb: "A lie well stuck to is as good as the truth." Ignoring the well-known fact that, as Senator Cannon says, the ballots counted for McKinley were ostensibly or really for the promotion of an international agreement to secure bimetallism, which the major's platform pledged him to secure if possible, the senator-elect in his maiden speech laid down these propositions:

1. The financial question can be indefinitely postponed.

2. The Wilson law "shut down the mills and reduced the opportunities of labor and the earnings of investment."

3. The deficit was caused by the Wilson law, and the way to wipe it out and to increase the revenues is to pass a higher tariff law.

4. The tariff law must be "based in every schedule" upon the principle of protecting the American manufacturer against foreign competition.

5. The people are clamoring for the new protective and revenue-raising tariff.

Every one of these propositions is false, as all intelligent men are aware. All persons who know anything about the situation of affairs know that (1) the financial question must be settled immediately, and that every month's delay in settling it will make settlement more difficult and costly; that (2) what "shut down the mills," etc., was the appreciating standard of values which has almost destroyed the home market; that (3) the revenues produced by the Wilson bill have been larger than the revenues under the McKinley bill, the difference in favor of 1896 as compared with 1894 being $36,672,910; that the deficit was caused by the McKinley bill, which was avowedly constructed in order to destroy the surplus, and that, as a general rule, it is true that the higher the duty the smaller the revenue obtained from it; that (4) if the new law, consequently, is to be based upon the principle of protection it will not yield revenue, and if designed to raise revenue it cannot be based on the protection principle, and that (5) the business interests of the country, omitting a few manufacturers and the unlawful combinations in restraint of trade, would do almost anything to avert the continuance of uncertainty which the threat of tariff tinkering has produced.

Doubtless Platt knows these things, too, for Platt is no fool. But the Canton clique is determined to pay no attention to them, and to go ahead discharging its debts to the trusts and manufacturers, and Platt thinks it wise just now to "stand in" with that clique as far as he can in order to get the federal patronage in this state. So he has adopted the clique's tactics and is yelling at the top of his voice for more revenue and protection, in the hope that the noise will daze the people and prevent them from recollecting the facts and seeing how preposterous and dishonest the programme is.—N. Y. Journal.

GENEROSITY THAT PAYS.

The Deal Between McKinley and Alger.

When the history of the McKinley campaign is written one of the most interesting chapters will contain the story of how Alger obtained the offer of a place in the cabinet.

No one familiar with the career of Michigan's great political plunger was satisfied with the explanation that he was asked to take a seat in the cabinet in order to reconcile Foraker to Hanna's ambition to go to the senate. The story lacked the essential ingredient of an Alger deal: there was no boodle in the bargain.

Far more convincing than the Hanna explanation is the information sent from Chicago that Alger's name occupies a conspicuous place in the list of the wealthy and generous friends of the president-elect who lifted him out of the financial bog into which he was plunged by the Foster failure. It is a fair presumption, also, that Alger's name is in the contribution book of the Hanna syndicate.

Gratitude is a good thing, but is not Maj. McKinley's gratitude for Gen. Alger's generosity too much of a good thing? A glance at the lumber schedule of the Dingley tariff bill shows that the lumber interests, in which the Alger fortune was made, are favored with rich plums. Gratitude slops over when the generous contributor is rewarded with both political honors and the gift of a great deal more money than he paid out. Generosity pays usurious interest when the bread cast on the political waters returns in the form of pie and cake.

Maj. McKinley is said to have all the men who dropped something into his contribution box slated for good things. His gratitude is creditable, but we must protest against his manner of showing it. If he pays all of them as he proposes to pay Gen. Alger, the American people will be bankrupt in honor and pocket. —St. Louis Republic.

——We look forward to a time, and that not many years in the future, when the people, restored to political sanity by stern necessity, will place the real democratic party in power, and thus, under the operations of a tariff which will yield sufficient revenue to pay the expenses of the government, and an expanding volume of currency, the country will be restored to prosperity, and the republic to its former glory and power.—Atlanta Constitution.

——Good times have not yet come back. The republican party is doing its best to defer their coming by entering upon a general revision of the tariff, the most upsetting and business-destroying occupation in which it could have engaged. The fall elections will give the people an opportunity to pass judgment upon this policy.—N. Y. City Times.

Second Session.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—SENATE—The discussion of the arbitration treaty in the executive session Saturday took the course of a constitutional debate. It was precipitated by the presentation of an amendment by Senator Turpie, of Indiana, to the first article of the treaty, providing that all questions to be submitted to arbitration must be considered and proposed by the treaty-making power, the president and the senate. After a long debate the amendment was voted down. Adjourned until Monday.

HOUSE—Representative Cummings, of New York, has introduced a resolution requesting the secretary of state to give the house of representatives any information he may have concerning the incident of the stripping of three lady passengers on board the United States mail steamer Olivette, in the harbor of Havana, by Spanish soldiers and detectives.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—SENATE—Monday the bankruptcy bill came up as the unfinished business and the senate decided that the bill was read in full and a substitute for the 16 sections was offered by Nelson (rep., Minn.). It was not read. The bill was then laid aside. A conference report on the senate bill to provide time and places for holding terms of the United States courts in Utah was presented and agreed to. The house amendments were concurred in. A conference report on the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill was presented and agreed to.

HOUSE—The sundry civil bill was passed Monday. Senate amendments to the agricultural appropriation bill were non-concurred in and sent to conference. Bills passed: To supply the national guards of the various states and territories with modern Springfield rifles of 45 caliber in exchange for their present rifles; extending the time for the completion of the St. Paul, Minnesota and Manitoba railway in Minnesota; senate resolution authorizing the secretary of the navy to furnish a naval or other ship to transport to India certain supplies donated by western states for the relief of the starving poor of that country.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—SENATE—Senator Chandler (rep., N. H.) spoke for three hours Tuesday in support of his resolution declaring it to be the sense of the senate that the United States should not permanently acquiesce in the single gold standard. The bankruptcy bill was taken up and Mr Hoar (rep., Mass.), chairman of the judiciary committee, pleaded for immediate action. No action was taken, and the senate at 5:20 p. m. adjourned.

HOUSE—A number of house bills granting pensions, which had been amended in the senate, were laid before the house and the amendments agreed to. A bill was passed upon recommendation of the committee on patents, regulating and making uniform the jurisdiction of circuit courts of the United States in cases of infringement of letter-patents. The rest of the day was spent in consideration of private pension bills, about 25 of them being passed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—SENATE—After a four hours' debate in executive session Wednesday the conference report on the bill to amend the immigration laws was agreed to by a vote of 34 to 31. As the report has been agreed to in the house, the bill is modified in conference now goes to the president. It adds to the classes of excluded aliens all persons over 16 years of age, who can not read the English language or some other language, except that admissible immigrants may bring with them, or send for, illiterate parents or grand parents (over 50 years of age), wives and minor children. It also prohibits from employment on public works aliens who come regularly or habitually into the United States for the purpose of engaging in any mechanical trade or other kind of labor, and who have not made declaration of intention to become American citizens. The secretary of the treasury, however, may permit the entrance of aliens for the purpose of developing arts or industries. And the act is not to apply to persons coming here from Cuba during the continuance of the present disorders there.

HOUSE—By a very decisive vote of 186 to 28 the house Wednesday affirmed its intention to abide by the policy of limiting pensions for widows of general officers to $30 a month and grading from that sum down for widows of officers of lower rank. The conference report on the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill presented by Mr. Bingham was agreed to. The principal changes made were in the provisions for the congressional library. As agreed upon, the bill authorizes the president to appoint a librarian and superintendent, who must be confirmed by the senate, shall receive $5,000 a year each and appoint the subordinates in their respective departments. In all cases the bill carries a total appropriation of $21,717,767.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—SENATE—The bill to extend the use of the mails was passed Thursday. The senate also passed without amendment house bill for the admission of needlework imported by the New York Association of Sewing Schools for exhibition purposes. The senate had spent only 20 minutes in executive session, when on motion of Senator Sherman (rep., O.) the galleries were cleared, the doors closed and the consideration of executive business entered upon. At 6:35 p. m. the senate adjourned until Friday.

HOUSE—In the contested case of Hopkins, rep., vs. Kendall, dem., from the Nineteenth Kentucky district, the house Thursday for the first time this session, on a direct issue of party politics, overruled the action of the committee on elections and seated a contestant whom the committee had declared not elected. In the contested election case of Rinaker and Downing from the first Illinois district Rinaker was seated. The rest of the session was given up to the passage of bills by consent which will be under consideration at a special adjournment and at 4:40 the house adjourned till Friday.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—SENATE—When the senate adjourned at 5 o'clock Friday night after a secret session of seven and a half hours, it was apparent to the most sanguine friends of the general treaty of arbitration with Great Britain that no vote could be reached at this session of the senate. The fact that a motion to postpone until March 5 had been defeated by a vote of 39 to 29 afforded no satisfaction. On the contrary it emphasized the fact that their fighting the treaty intended there should be affirmative action of no kind.

HOUSE—Another appropriation bill was taken up, but little progress made. The measure was that carrying appropriations to supply deficiencies for the current fiscal year and prior years, it encountered its first snag when Mr. Grow, (rep., Pa.) insisted that he had a right to speak as long as he wanted to on it. This proposition was discussed for some time, and resulted in a victory for the venerable Pennsylvania member who devoted some extended remarks, not to the appropriation bill, but to the Oklahoma free homestead measure. Then a long discussion was started by Mr. Richardson (dem., Tenn.) over an item to pay special attorneys for defending suits against the United States. Mr. Richardson wanted to know the use of paying attorneys to defend such cases when the justice department claims under the Bowman act were never paid. Many members spoke with regard to the propriety of paying the Bowman claims, but when the afternoon was merrily over the discussion was dropped. The bill was not passed at 5 o'clock when the house took a recess for three hours. Friday night it discussed private pension bills.

Mr. Editor—Will you please state if there is a fixed salary for the Jailer, if so, how much? [No; he is paid by fees. —Ed.]

Somethings queer to see:—A big, fat candidate fall over a fence; a candidate going through a farm, and the owner sending his boys after him closing the gates left open; a candidate electioneering among the boys, and saying nothing to the old man; a wife pulling the husband's tooth with a fishing line.

If he lives many days they will have to remove the toes from the remaining foot, and in all probability they will have to take off the entire foot. He seems to be dying by inches. The doctors are very much puzzled over the case and it is alleged they have never seen one of the kind before. Dr. Bagby performed the surgical work, assisted by Drs. Gaines and Mathews.

Geo. F. Piper and family, of Louisville, were guests of Mrs. Virginia Huey from Frsday to Monday.

Prof. J. E. Crouch, of Glencoe, Gallatin county, was the guest of D. E. Castlemau last Sunday and Monday.

D. H. Ryle, postmaster at Hathaway, and Lee Eddins, of Florence, were among those from a distance in town Monday.

Col. Geo. W Sandford will be at home to his friends after March 1st, at his country seat over-looking crawfish sound.

Thos. G. Wills passed through town Saturday afternoon, having spent the week with the voters in the lower end of the county.

Owen Watts, candidate for assessor, was in town Monday. Wet weather and muddy roads have no terrors for him when campaigning.

Reuben Akin, of the Petersburg neighborhood, was in town, last Saturday, being one of the parties to a land deal that was under way.

Mrs. Senator Conner and Dr. Louise Southgate, of Richwood, are spending a few weeks with George and Thomas Southgate in Oklahoma Territory.

C. C. Roberts and family attended the funeral of John A. Roberts, at Walton. The deceased was the last one of Mr. Roberts' uncles on his father's side.

Dr. Frank Sayer and Mr Manning, of Hebron, were in town, last Saturday, on business pertaining to the entertainment at that place to-morrow night.

Edson Riddell has purchased a new wheel, and is now patiently awaiting the return of good roads and pleasant weather, two essentials for the anticipated pleasure.

W. B. Kelly and Wade H. Ryle, of Waterloo, were in town Monday. They reported some of the culverts on the East Bend road as very badly damaged by the recent rains.

T. M. Rich, of Big Bone, who sold his personal property at public sale, yesterday, will move to Covington, where he and his son will engage in the grocery business.

Benj. C. Allen, son of G. M. Allen, and Miss B. E. Stephens, daughter of B. H. Stephens, of Big Bone, were married at the residence of the bride's father last Thursday.

Ex-Mayor T. J. McNeal, of Ludlow, was bitten by a mad dog, one day last week, but fortunately for Mr. McNeal the dog buried its fangs in his artificial limb, and he anticipates no serious results from the bite.

Our friend, J. M. Utz, of Limaburg, was in town yesterday, bedecked in his best Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes, which circumstance, taken in connection with some reports that came in recently, excites our suspicion somewhat.

C. W. Riley and O. W. Gaines, of Bullittsville, were in town last Saturday. The election of a Justice of the Peace was under discussion, and in that connection they mentioned two prospective candidates in their immediate neighborhood.

Dr. Corey tells us that Florence has a clinch on the next suburban electric car line built out from Covington; because the company has constructed roads on all the thoroughfares leading out from the city except the Lexington pike. He does not predict the time when the line will be built.

Orin Phipps was in the office, one afternoon last week, and exhibited a twist of leaf tobacco presented to him by Mr. Joel Tanner, of Gunpowder. The only difference between it and the every day twist was its great age, it being of a crop raised by Mr. Tanner in eighteen hundred and fifty-four.

Joseph L. Stephens, aged 25, son of Marion Stephens, and Miss Hey Kelly, aged 21, daughtor of Z. T. Kelly, all of the Rabbit Hash neighborhood, were married at the residence of the bride's parents on the 18th inst. The bride and groom have the best wishes of a host of friends in their new relations in life.

W. W. Grimsley, candidate for assessor, called at this office, last Saturday, to replenish supplies with which to conduct his canvass. A sack of garden seed had just arrived from Washington for distribution, and when he left every pocket in his three coats was bulging with garden seeds, we having concluded that he would prove an excellent medium for the distribution.

Col. George M. Casey, of Walton, is here to remain until Judge Phelp's condition improves. Col. Casey is a newspaper man of experience and ability and did good work for the democracy during the last campaign. He was a school-mate of Judge H. H. Haviland, of this city, Major Howard Gratz, of the Lexington Gazette, and other well-known citizens.—Cynthiana Democrat.

Notwithstanding the weather the meeting at Florence under the auspices of the bimetallic club, last Saturday, was well attended. Good speeches were made by Judge Tarvin, D. E. Castleman and Dr. B. A. Dulaney.

Julius C. Bristow and Miss Florence A Love; and Cumberland H. Bristow and Miss Ida May Love, marry at the Richwood Presbyterian church to-day. The grooms are sons of the venerable Anselm Bristow, of Union, and the brides are daughters of Joe C. Love, who resides near Big Bone church.

Speaking of the candidates for county offices, in Carroll county, the Sanders correspondent of the Carrollton Democrat says: "Judging from their own statements the voters of this county have the most poverty-stricken set of men to vote for that ever offered for office in the history of the county."

One of Scott Underhill's horses fell into the cistern at his barn one day last week, and had he and his wife not been there the animal would have drowned. The cistern was inclosed by a pen, and the horse got inside the pen and on the plank covering which broke through with it. Several of the neighbors were called in and the horse was dug out.

H. W. Harrison, dentist, of Rising Sun, Ind., will be in Burlington on the first and third Monday in each month, to do work for those who wish anything in his line. He will be here two days each visit. He is a son of the late R. F. Harrison, of Carrollton, and a graduate of the Pennsylvania College of Dentistry at Philadephia. He is highly recommended in his profession.

The team from the Erlanger masonic lodge came over last Saturday night and conferred the E. A. degree on three candidates. The work was done under grave disadvantages, as to the surroundings, but the brethren demonstrated their proficiency in the exemplication of the floor work. When the lodge closed a lunch was served at the Boone House, after which a few short speeches followed.

A new society fad is the game of "noses." To play "noses" hang a sheet of canvass from the ceiling to the floor, and cut small holes in the sheet. Then collect the girls present on one side of the canvass and the gentlemen on the other. Then the girls place their noses in the holes in the canvass, and each young man chooses a nose that appeals to his sense of beauty, and the young woman attached to the nose of his choice becomes his partner for the evening.

COUNTY COURT.

W. E. Vest, B. F. Hood and W. B. Grubbs appointed commissioners to divide the land of Jas. H. Wilson among his heirs. The land lies on the river below Constance.

C. C. Carpenter was appointed administrator of the estate of W. H. Carpenter, deceased. Mike Denady, John Fulton and Dave Brown were appointed appraisers.

Quite an attentive audience listened to Dr. Smith's lecture on the Florida Butcher Bird, and Hopper Grass, at the postoffice the other evening. The Butcher Bird had never been heard of by his audience, and its barbarous nature startled the hearers, while the mastodonic proportions of the Hopper Grass, as described by him, were marveled at by both young and old, and many doubted the accuracy of the doctor's measurements until he was fully corroborated by John Sandford, a western ornothologist, who had several exciting experiences with the Hopper Grass while he sojourned in Nebraska several years ago. The proceeds of the lecture are to be used for the benefit of the Cubans.

The sale of Daniel and Henry Bedinger, last Wednesday, was attended by a very large crowd—500 or 600. It was a day that permitted a person to remain out of doors without inconvenience, and between the twenty odd candidates present and the auctioneer, also a candidate, the crowd was well entertained. Some things sold low, while others brought good prices. Corn brought from $1.05 to $1.10 per barrel in the crib; young horses, $40 to $50; good work mules, $60 to $70; pair 12-year-old mules, $120; dry cows sold low. The ladies of the Presbyterian church served a dinner, the proceeds of which was to be used to rebuild a fence around the cemetery at the Richwood church. They fed a great many people.

On Wednesday night of last week a horse was stolen from the stable of Henry Clore, who lives about three miles south of Burlington, on the East Bend road. The fellow whom some supposed got the horses was seen by several of the neighbors that afternoon, and just before night he stopped at Mr. Clore's where he was given something to eat. While there he was rather talkative and asked about several persons with whom Mr. Clore was acquainted, and he seemed anxious to cross the river at McVille or Rabbit Hash. Leaving Mr. Clore's he went down the East Bend road a mile or more, and was seen to pass Henry Phipps' a short time before night, but some time that evening he was seen again going in the direction of Mr. Clore's, and it is supposed that he got the horse about nine o'clock. The horse was tracked from the stable to the public road, where it went south. Mr. Clore and a neighbor hunted all day Thursday but heard nothing of the horse, and Thursday afternoon Elmer Beall and Asa Cason went to Cincinnati but were unable to obtain any information in regard to the horse or the man. The horse is described as follows: Bay with heavy bodymedium height, toes on hind shoes. The saddle was flat seated with very wide woodden stirraps. Mr. Clore will give $10 for the return of the horse and $10 for the capture of the thief, which with the $50 the State gives for the capture and conviction of a horse thief makes $70 reward for horse and thief.

SHATTERED FAITH.

Ships of Gospel That Securely Ride the Waves.

Barque Tossed on the Billows, But a Steady Hand Holds the Helm—A Safe Pilot Steers for the Shore—Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage.

The subject of Dr. Talmage's sermon Sunday was "A Shattered Faith," and the text Acts xxvii, 44—"And some on broken pieces of the ship."

Never off Goodwin Sands, or the Skerries, or Cape Hatteras, was a ship in worse predicament than, in the Mediterranean hurricane, was the grain ship on which 276 passengers were driven on the coast of Malta, five miles from the metropolis of that island, called Citta Vecchia. After a two-weeks' tempest, when the ship was entirely disabled, and captain and crew had become completely demoralized, an old missionary took command of the vessel. He was small, crooked-backed and sore-eyed, according to tradition. It was Paul, the only unscared man aboard. He was no more afraid of a Euroclydon tossing the Mediterranean sea, now up to the gates of Heaven and now sinking it to the gates of hell, than he was afraid of a kitten playing with a string. He ordered them all down to take their stations, first asking for them a blessing. Then he insured all their lives, telling them they would be rescued, and, so far from losing their heads, they would not lose so much of their hair as you could cut off with one click of the scissors; nay, not a thread of it, whether it were gray with age or golden with youth. "There shall not a hair fall from the head of any of you."

Knowing that they never can get to the desired spot, they make the sea on the 14th night black with overboard cargo, so that when the ship strikes it will not strike so heavily. At daybreak they saw a creek, and in their exigency resolved to make for it. And so they cut the cables, took in the two paddles they had on those old boats and hoisted the mainsail, so that they might come with such force as to be driven high up on the beach by some fortunate billow. There she goes—tumbling toward the rocks, now prow foremost, now stern foremost, now pitching over to the starboard, now over to the larboard, now a wave dashes clear over the deck, and it seems as if the old craft has gone forever. But up she comes again. Paul's arm's around a mast, he cries: "All is well. God has given me all those that sail with me." Crash! went the prow with such force that it broke off the mast. Crash! went the timbers, till the seas rushed through from side to side of the vessel. She parts amidships and goes into a thousand fragments, and into the waves 276 immortals are precipitated. Some of them had been brought up on the seashore, and had learned to swim, and with their chins just above the waves and by the strokes of both arms and propulsion of both feet they put out for the beach and reach it. But alas for those others! They have never learned to swim, or they were wounded by the falling of the mast, or the nervous shock was too great for them. And others had been weakened by long sea sickness.

Oh, what will become of them? "Take that piece of a rudder," says Paul to one. "Take that fragment of a spar," says Paul to another. "Take that image of Castor and Pollux." "Take that plank from the lifeboat." "Take anything and head for the beach." What a struggle for life in the breakers! Oh, the merciless waters, how they sweep over the heads of men, women and children! Hold on, there! Almost ashore; keep up your courage. Remember what Paul told you. There, the receding wave on the beach leaves in the sand a whole family. There crawls up out of the surf the centurion. There, another plank comes in with a life clinging fast to it. There, another piece of the shattered vessel, with its freightage of an immortal soul. They must by this time all be saved. Yes; there comes in, last of all, for he had been overseeing the rest, the old missionary, who wrings the water from his gray beard and cries out: "Thank God, all are here!"

Gather around a fire and call the roll. Paul builds a fire, and when the bundle of sticks begin to crackle, all standing and sitting around the blaze, the passengers begin to recover from their chill, and the wet clothes begin to dry, and warmth begins to come into all the shivering passengers, let the purser of the vessel go round and see if any of the poor creatures are missing. Not one of the crowd that were plunged into the sea. How it relieves our anxiety as we read: "Some on broken pieces of the ship. And so it comes to pass that they escaped all safe to land."

Having on previous occasions looked at the other passengers, I confine myself to-day to an examination of those who came in on broken pieces of the ship. There is something about them that excites in me an intense interest. I am not so much interested in those that could swim. They got ashore as I expected. A mile of water is not a very great undertaking for a strong swimmer, or even two miles are not. But I can not stop thinking about those on broken pieces of the ship. The great Gospel ship is the finest of the universe, and can carry more passengers than any craft ever constructed, and you could no more wreck it than you could wreck the throne of God Almighty. I wish all the people would come aboard of her. I could not promise a smooth voyage, for ofttimes it will be tempestuous or a chopped sea, but I could promise safe arrival for all who took passage on that Great Eastern, so called by me because its Commander came out of the east, the star of the east a badge of His authority.

But a vast multitude do not take regular passage. There theology is broken in pieces, and their life is broken in pieces, and their habits are broken in pieces, and their worldly and spiritual prospects are broken in pieces, and yet I believe they are going to reach the shining shore, and I am encouraged by the experience of those people who are spoken of in the text: "Some on broken pieces of the ship."

One object of this sermon is to encourage all those who can not take the whole system of religion as we believe it, but who really believe something, to come ashore on that one plank.

I do not underrate the value of a great theological system, but where in all the Bible is there anything that says: Believe in John Calvin and thou shalt be saved? or, believe in Arminus and thou shalt be saved? or, believe in Synod of Dort and thou shalt be saved? or, believe in the Thirty-nine Articles and thou shalt be saved? A man may be orthodox and go to hell, or heterodox and go to Heaven. The man who in the deep affection of his heart accepts Christ is saved, and the man who does not accept him is lost.

I believe in the Heidelberg and Westminster Catechisms, and I wish you all did; but you may believe in nothing they contain except the one idea, that Christ came to save sinners, and that you are one of them, and you are instantly rescued. If you can come in on grand old ship I would rather have you get aboard, but if you can only find a piece of wood as long as the human body, or a piece as wide as the outspread human arms, and either of them is a piece of the cross, come in on that piece. Tens of thousands of people are to-day kept out of the Kingdom of God because they can not believe everything.

I am talking with a man thoughtful about his soul who has lately traveled through New England and passed the night at Andover. He says to me: "I can not believe that in this life the destiny is irrevocably fixed; I think there will be another opportunity of repentance after death." I say to him: "My brother, what has that to do with you? Don't you realize that the man who waits for another chance after death, when he has a good chance before death, is a stark fool? Had not you better take the plank that is thrown to you now and head for shore, rather than wait for a plank that may by invisible hands be thrown to you after you are dead? Do as you please, but as for myself, with pardon for all my sins offered me now, and all the joys of time and eternity offered me now, I instantly take them, rather than run the risk of such other chance as wise men think they can peel off or twist out of a Scripture passage that has for all the Christian centuries been interpreted another way." You say, "I do not like Princeton theology, or New Haven theology, or Andover theology." I do not ask you on board either of these great men-of-war, their portholes filled with the great siege-guns of ecclesiastical battle. But I do ask you to take the one plank of the Gospel that you do believe in, and strike out for the pearl-strung beach of Heaven.

Says some other man: "I would attend to religion if I was quite sure about the doctrine of election and free agency, but that mixes me all up." Those things used to bother me, but I have no more perplexity about them; for I say to myself: "If I love Christ and live a good, honest, useful life, I am elected to be saved; and if I do not love Christ, and live a bad life, I will be damned, and all the theological seminaries of the universe can not make it any different." I floundered along while in the sea of sin and doubt, and it was as rough as the Mediterranean on the fourteenth night when they threw the grain overboard, but I saw there was mercy for a sinner, and that plank I took, and I have been warming myself by the bright fire on the shore ever since.

While I am talking to another man about his soul he tells me: "I do not become a Christian because I do not believe there is any hell at all." Ah! don't you? Do all the people of all beliefs and no belief at all, of good morals and bad morals, go straight to a happy Heaven? Do the holy and the debauched have the same destination? At midnight, in a hallway, the owner of a house and burglar meet; they both fire, and both are wounded, but the burglar dies in five minutes and the owner of the house lives a week after; will the burglar be at the gate of Heaven, waiting, when the house owner comes in? Will the debauchee and libertine go right in among the families of Heaven? I wonder if Herod is playing on the banks of the river of life with the children he massacred? I wonder if Charles Guiteau and John Wilkes Booth are up there shooting at a mark? I do not now controvert it, although I must say that for such a miserable Heaven I have no admiration. But the Bible does not say: "Believe in perdition and be saved." Because all are saved, according to your theory, that ought not to keep you from loving and serving Christ. If not refuse to come ashore because all the others, according to your theory, are going to get ashore. You may have a different theory about chemistry, about astronomy, about the atmosphere, from that which others adopt, but you are not, therefore, hindered from action. Because your theory of light is different from others, do not refuse to open your eyes. Because your theory of air is different you do not refuse to breathe. Because your theory about the stellar system is different, you do not refuse to acknowledge the north star. Why should the fact that your theological theories are different hinder you from acting upon what you know? If you have not a whole ship fastened in the theological drydocks to bring you to wharfage, you have at least a plank. "Some on broken pieces of the ship."

"But I don't believe in revivals." Then go to your room, and all alone, with your door locked, give your heart to God, and join some church where the thermometer never gets higher than 50 in the shade.

"But I do not believe in baptism!" Come in without it and settle that matter afterward. "But there are so many inconsistent Christians!" Then come in and show them by a good example how professors should act.

"But I don't believe in the Old Testament!" Then come in on the New. "But I don't like the Book of Romans." Then come in on Matthew or Luke. Refusing to come to Christ whom you admit to be the Saviour of the lost, because you can not admit other things, you are like a man out there in that Mediterranean tempest, and tossed in the Mellta breakers, refusing to come ashore until he can mend the pieces of the broken ship. I hear him say: "I wont go in on any of these planks until I know in what part of the ship they belong. When can I get the windlass in the right place, and the sails set, and that keelpiece where it belongs, and that floor timber right, and these ropes untangled, I will go ashore. I am an old sailor, and I know all about ships for 40 years and as soon as I can get the vessel afloat in good shape I will come in." A man drifting by on a piece of wood overhears him and says: "You will drown before you get that ship reconstructed. Better do as I am doing. I know nothing about ships, and never saw one before I came on board this, and I can not swim a stroke, but I am going ashore on this shivered timber." The man in the offing, while trying to mend his ship, goes down. The man who trusted to the plank is saved. O, my brother, let your smashed-up system of theology go to the bottom, while you come in on a splintered spar! "Some on broken pieces of the ship."

You may get all your difficulties settled as Garibaldi, the magnetic Italian, got his gardens made. When the war between Austria and Sardinia broke out he was living at Caprera, a very rough and uncultured island home. But he went forth with his sword to achieve the liberation of Naples and Sicily, and gave 9,000,000 people free government, under Victor Emmanuel. Garibaldi, after being absent two years from Caprera, returned, and when he approached it he found that his home had, by Victor Emmanuel, as a surprise, been Edenized. Trimmed shrubbery had taken the place of thorny thickets, gardens the place of barrenness, and the old rookery in which he once lived had given way to a picturesque mansion. And I tell you if you will come and enlist under the banner of our Victor Emmanuel, and follow him through thick and thin, and fight his battles and endure his sacrifices, you will find after awhile that He has changed your heart from a jungle of thorny skepticism into a garden all abloom with luxuriant joy that you have never dreamt of. From a tangled Caprera of sadness into a paradise of God.

I do not know how your theological system went to pieces. It may be that your parents started you with only one plank, and you believe little or nothing. Or they may have been too rigid and severe in religious discipline, and cracked you over the head with a psalm book. It may be that some partner in business who was a member of an evangelical church played on you a trick that disgusted you with religion. It may be that you have associates who have talked against Christianity in your presence until you are "all at sea," and you dwell more on things that you do not believe than on things you do believe. You are in one respect like Lord Nelson, when a signal was lifted that he wished to disregard, and he put his sea-glass to his blind eye and said: "I really do not see the signal." Oh, my hearer, put this field-glass of the Gospel no longer to your blind eye, and say, "I can not see," but put it to your other eye of faith, and you will see Christ, and He is all you need to see.

If you can believe nothing else, you certainly believe in vicarious suffering, for you see it almost every day in some shape. The steamship Knickerbocker, of the Cromwell line, running between New Orleans and New York, was in great storms, and the captain and crew saw the schooner Mary D. Cranmer, of Philadelphia, in distress. The weather cold, the waves mountain high, the first officer of the steamship and four men put out in a life boat to save the crew of the schooner, and reached the vessel and towed it out of danger, the wind shifting so that the schooner was saved. But the five men of the steamship coming back, their boat capsized, yet righted again and came on, the sailors coated with ice. The boat capsized again, and three times upset and was righted and a line was thrown the poor fellows, but their hands were frozen so they could not grasp it, and a great wave rolled over them, and they went down, never to rise again till the sea gives up its dead.

Appreciate that heroism and self-sacrifice of the brave fellows all who can, and can not appreciate the Christ who put out into a more biting cold and into a more overwhelming surge, to bring us out of infinite peril into everlasting safety? The wave of human hate rolled over Him from one side and the wave of hellish fury rolled over Him on the other side. Oh, the thickness of the night and the thunder of the tempest into which Christ plunged for our rescue.

Come in on one narrow beam of the cross. Let all else go and cling to that; put that under you, and with the earnestness of a swimmer struggling for his life, put out for shore. There is a great warm fire of welcome already built, and already many, who were as far out as you are, are standing in its genial and heavenly glow. The angels of God's rescue are wading out into the surf to clutch your hand, and they know how exhausted you are, and all the redeemed prodigals of Heaven are on the beach with new white robes to clothe all those who come in on broken pieces of the ship.

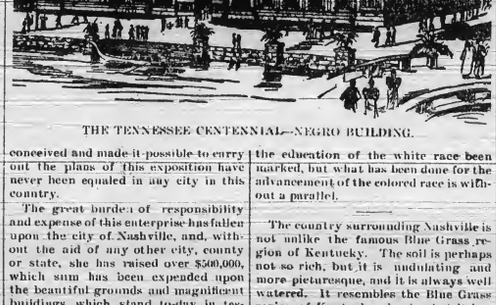
TENNESSEE CENTENNIAL.



Patriotic Celebration of the 100th Anniversary of the State.

A Great Object Lesson, Calling Attention to the Bountiful Resources of Tennessee—Not a Local or Sectional Enterprise.

The prime object of the Tennessee Centennial and International exposition to be held at Nashville from May 1 to October 30, 1897, is to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the state in a spirit of patriotism; to illustrate the progress that has been made in civilization, and at the same time to call attention to the bountiful resources of the field, the hills and the forests of Tennessee. The fact that the state produces, to some extent, every crop reported in the United States census, and contains iron, coal, marble, granite, hardwood timber and phosphate rock for fertilizers in unlimited quantities; that the agricultural crops never fail and seldom vary, and that the climate is perfect, with a mean temperature of 58 degrees, should induce immigration from other states and from foreign countries to such an extent that Tennessee will take the place in the list of states in which she properly belongs in point of population and commercial importance. It is to call attention to her natural advantages and resources and lead to their greater development of wealth as well as to show the progress that has been made in the arts and sciences, that this great object lesson is to be given.

It is a practical way of celebrating a great event, and will enable the people of the state to present at one and the same time their historical record of 100 years, and to give their reasons for believing that Tennessee is an inviting field for the investment of capital and a pleasant country in which all may live in the enjoyment of peace and plenty.

The state will no doubt derive great benefits from the exposition. It will at least bring her own people and her neighbors of the south, if not of the whole country, closer together, and show what can be done by concerted action. Whatever may be said of the conservatism or lethargy of the southern people, it must be acknowledged that the spirit of enterprise which conceived and made it possible to carry out the plans of this exposition have never been equaled in any city in this country.

The great burden of responsibility and expense of this enterprise has fallen upon the city of Nashville, and, without the aid of any other city, county or state, she has raised over $500,000, which sum has been expended upon the beautiful grounds and magnificent buildings which stand to-day in testimony of the faithful discharge of duty on the part of the exposition managers, to the state and to the whole country. Whatever more may be needed to complete the plant and to put everything in order for the opening day will be furnished by Nashville's patriotic citizens. The appropriation made by the United States government will be used exclusively for the erection of a building and for the exhibit of the government, and will be no part of the cost of the exposition proper. The same may be said of the appropriations made by several states and of some of the counties of Tennessee, whose buildings will be for their exclusive use and benefit.

The exposition is not a local or sectional enterprise. It has been handsomely recognized by the United States government; nearly every state in the union will be represented, and some of the finest buildings and most attractive displays will be those from foreign countries. It will probably not be equal in all respects to the world's fair at Chicago, but it is the opinion of men from all parts of the country who have seen the Nashville exposition in its present unfinished condition, and who have visited all the greater expositions, that it will be second only to that of Chicago, and that the architecture and the artistic grouping of the buildings is more pleasing to the eye, and on the whole more satisfactory to the visitor.

The scope of the exposition is comprehensive and the extent and variety of the exhibits will leave nothing to be desired.

No writer can convey to the reader who has not beheld the glory of this picture the least conception of its grandeur and magnificence. Whatever idea the reading public may gain from the descriptions or even from the pictures of the buildings and their harmonious grouping and pleasing surroundings, there will still be a pleasant surprise for all those who may see it for the first time in its completeness and in its spring and summer attire.

The exposition at Nashville will not be the only attraction for those who visit Tennessee during the present year. This great exposition of art and industry should of itself be sufficient to insure an attendance larger than that of any previous exposition, the world's fair, alone, excepted, but there are other attractions which will have a determining influence upon those who are in doubt whether they shall go to Nashville or not. Nashville, and in fact the whole state of Tennessee, is historical ground, and all northern soldiers who have not visited the south since the close of the war will want to avail themselves of the opportunity of doing so during the present year of national peace and political tranquillity. Within sight of the exposition grounds, almost, was fought the battle of Nashville, and upon the very ground now known as Exposition park the soldiers of the north pitched their tents. The present home of the vice president of the Tennessee centennial, Mr. Van Leer Kirkman, and his wife, the president of the woman's department of the centennial, situated about four and a half miles from Nashville, on the Franklin turnpike, was the scene of the battle of Nashville. In the southern suburbs of the city is Fort Negley. What is now known as the Hermitage club, in the center of the city, was used as the headquarters of Buell and Rousseau, of Grant and Thomas. The Maxwell house, then not quite finished, now one of the leading hotels of the south, was used by the federal soldiers as a barracks.

In every part of the city there are objects to remind the visitor and particularly the old soldier of the stirring times from 1861 to 1865. Although the scene of so much activity during the rebellion, Nashville was spared the ravages of war, and as a result the city and surrounding country presents today the best picture of southern life to be found anywhere south of Mason and Dixon's line. Of course Nashville has witnessed many changes, but they have been generally for the better. No city in the south has made more substantial progress or done more to improve the conditions of life. In the most trying times of general financial depression, Nashville suffered greatly, but the inherent wealth of the country surrounding it greatly mitigated the evils and disasters of the panic of 1893 and she is holding her own to-day with as firm a grasp as any of the northern cities.

As a great seat of learning Nashville has far outstripped all of her sister cities of the south, and by common consent is known as the "Athens of the South." Not only has the progress in the education of the white race been marked, but what has been done for the advancement of the colored race is without a parallel.

The country surrounding Nashville is not unlike the famous Blue Grass region of Kentucky. The soil is perhaps not so rich, but it is undulating and more picturesque, and it is always well watered. It resembles the Blue Grass region of Kentucky also in that it is a great stock raising country. The most famous stock farm in the world is the Belle Meade, which lies within a half hour's ride, through a beautiful country and over a well made road, from the exposition grounds. In fact this beautiful old-time place can be reached by rail in ten minutes.

Mr. George W. Chambers, of St. Louis, an artist of considerable distinction, recently visited Nashville, and, after returning to his home, wrote a letter to a friend in that city giving some of his impressions of the exposition, from which the following extract is taken:

"It is a pleasure to give you, however briefly, the impressions I received from a visit to the centennial grounds. I was surprised to find the buildings, and the grounds as well, so far advanced. Indeed, from the clean condition of the roadways and grass plats one might with reason conclude that all inside as well as outside was in readiness for public scrutiny. The grounds seemed to me to be admirably laid out both for convenience in getting about and for the best presentation of the architectural effects. The stretches of lawn which spring will dress in living green will be a feature which was much lacking at the world's fair, and will add a repose so much needed in a white city, whose architecture is more or less rigidly classic. There were not many places at Chicago for the eye to rest upon in detail, and none at all in the general effect. It was too literally a city.

"In your coming fair all this will be different, if one may judge from the present condition of affairs. Of course, as yet, one misses the color effect which will so much enhance the beauty of it all. The flower beds to break the green here and there, and perhaps a tone of color on the larger buildings and a little more audacity in the color of the smaller ones, with some gilt in midair, to give elevation and to give back an echo of the sun's radiance—all this will come in proper time and serve, like the last touches of a lady's toilet, in giving emphasis to the fundamental beauty. There will be the flags, banners, pennants and streamers, all bright and brilliant spots, whose waving and undulating folds will give those broken lines against the sky so valuable as foils for the straight architectural and structural lines necessary in the buildings.

"Of the buildings already completed it would be invidious to speak comparatively, and indeed unnecessary, where all is so admirably planned and designed. And yet I cannot omit a brief word concerning the Parthenon. Not in its praise, for it needs none; nor of its history, for that is trite; nor yet of the wisdom of choosing it as being adapted to the purposes, for that will be evident to all who enter it. The thought I had in looking at it was that strangely enough it would perhaps be less of a surprise to southern visitors than other buildings, commonplace enough in all respects. It will be perfectly familiar to them, and that, not because they have seen pictures of it, but because south of the Mason and Dixon line this is the type of architecture that was chosen for the stately homes as well as for state and public buildings. That choice of the classic Greek for all important work, domestic and national, is distinctly the choice of the south. It would seem that, approaching the parallel of Athens in this country, it was a wise one not to follow its architecture. But however that may be and whatever the cause, it will chance that the southern contingent will look with familiar eyes upon the grand repose of the Parthenon. Of course no one is going to bother himself about what it all means, because we will all be too busy looking at and enjoying the beauty provided for us by the splendid energy and self-sacrifice of your people. But it might furnish a half-hour's pleasant reflection in some shady corner to note first that this same Parthenon seems externally to be the most consistent building on the grounds; and to consider after, whether the large simplicity, the wide repose and the impressive stability of it did not somehow belong to that old life from Virginia downwards which can never come again. There is at all events, and there will not be a visitor from all the fair old southland that cannot recall it, the same expression of simplicity and repose, in a lesser degree, perhaps, in some structure in his own community."

A SAD ROMANCE.

Involving the Emotions of Two Young People in Three Worlds.

Once upon a time there lived a serious young man. He was serious all the way through. As in some streams his depth revealed itself at the very top. No light waves played upon the surface. He seemed to have no surface. He was all inner soul.

This young man loved seriously an idle young woman. He saw her first as Nanjok's St. Cecelia in a church tableau. He had loved the picture. He now loved the young woman more. He saw in her face much that he had not seen in the picture. She parted her hair in the middle and she had a St. Cecelia nose, so that the young man did not observe that there was also much in the picture that was not in her face. She could not even play the piano before which she had posed.

The idle young woman loved seriously nothing whatever. Least of all did she love the serious young man. If he had no surface, she was all surface, like a brook, all waves full of light and brightness. The young man was attracted by the waves and imagined a depth beneath them. She was repelled by the darkness of his depth and could imagine no waves upon its surface. So when he asked her to say "Yes," she answered "No." He suffered greatly and, after a time, he died, and he went to purgatory.

Some months later she caught pneumonia at a dance and she went to purgatory, too. She found him seated at a glistening dinner table paying compliments and telling funny stories to a woman in a decollete gown. The woman she recognized as the head of the missionary society in her former home. "Of all people!" she exclaimed. "How do they ever come to be doing that?" she asked the keeper. "They are doing penance for having been bores on earth and they are learning small talk so as to be agreeable in Heaven," was his answer. "How nice!" she thought. "Purgatory is quite agreeable after all! May I sit at the end of the table furthest from them?" she asked. "Your task is different," was the reply, "and her were seven books on sociology and seven on psychology and seven on philosophy, and she was made to manage seven missionary societies—"To teach you to think enough to be agreeable in Heaven."

In time her thoughts made her serious, and it chanced that as she sat among her books the talk of the diners floated to her ears, and after awhile she grew seriously to love the young man at the table, for the light and dash of his talk attracted her and she took for granted a depth beneath them. But he loved her not at all and thought how dull and unresponsive she has grown. She might take the trouble to be agreeable even if she does read big books." This caused her to suffer great sorrow.

At last the time of their preparation was ended and it became time for them to enter, perfect, into Heaven, and as they stood together, perfect, upon the threshold, they loved each the other, at last. "Mine!" he asked. "Forever!" she answered, and they entered the gate.

Awake for Ninety Hours.

Prof. Patrick and Dr. Gilbert, of the University of Iowa, have recently tried the experiment, which is described in the Psychological Review, of keeping three observers awake for 90 consecutive hours. The observers did not suffer, although dogs die if kept awake four or five days. The physical and mental condition of the observers were noted during and after the enforced insomnia, and the results are of great scientific and practical interest.—Chicago Times-Herald.

REFORM BADLY NEEDED.

Indiana's Governor Discusses the Enforcement of Road Laws.

Good roads are essential to our highest development socially, intellectually and financially. Many counties in our state, actuated by a commendable spirit of progress, are rapidly improving the highways. In the near future some of our counties will have a complete system of free gravel roads. The main thoroughfares in these counties, having been graveled and received by the county commissioners, are kept in repair at the county's expense. The supervisor, being thus relieved from care of the main thoroughfares, is enbled to concentrate the labor and tax at his disposal upon the lateral roads; hence all will soon be improved. The economy in road improvement will soon be demonstrated by the fact that the counties having the best roads will maintain them at less cost than the mud roads, with all their inconveniences, are maintained in their wretched condition. The work required by law of able-bodied men, together with the road tax, gives to the road supervisors of our state the expenditure, in money and labor, of a vast sum. Much of this is wasted by reason of incompetent management. The railroad tax for highway improvement, in some road districts of our state, is so manipulated by the road supervisor that the money inures more to his benefit than the improvement of the thoroughfares. In some instances in our state, a brokerage business is carried on, and money is made out of trafficing in this road tax.

While some of our road laws need reforming, the manner of their execution needs revolution. When competence is made the test in selecting supervisors, and tax-payers see that they discharge their duties, we will find some improvement in our highways without additional tax.—From the Inaugural Address of Gov. Mount, of Indiana.

ABOUT BITTER MILK.

Cleanliness Will Remove Most of the Causes Which Produce It.

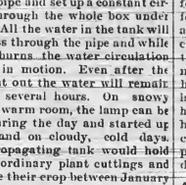
Bitter milk has three causes—something eaten by the cow, advanced period of gestation and pure cussedness. It is not a pleasant thing to contemplate, but there is a great deal of horse manure eaten by cows. The best way after regulating the ration is to fence off a part of the yard, and put the horse manure in it, or else fence off the cows. I have read that rag weed would cause bitter milk, but as my cows would never eat it I cannot say anything from my own experience on that score.

For the second cause there is no cure that I am aware of, and the third is almost as hard to prevent. Briefly stated in its natural state milk after a certain time gets sour because of the action of a certain kind of bacteria whose business it is to make milk sour. But if these bacteria are prevented from getting in their work owing to cold weather (they work only in warm weather or in a warm temperature) then nature, which abhorsevem a vacuum of bacteria, immediately sets another gang of bacteria to work whose job it is to make milk bitter. And if politicians attended to their job as well as bitter bacteria to theirs we would be much better off, for it takes much work to persuade them to quit work. The remedy is first to wash with boiling water every vessel with which the milk or cream comes in contact, or, better still, put the vessels in boiling water on the stove for 10 or 15 minutes. This kills off all the bitter bacteria. Then to get the sour bacteria to work for a few days keep all the milk at a temperature of 70 degrees and put a little sour buttermilk in the cream. This will give the sour bacteria a chance to get firmly established. Then do not let the milk get too cold or it will all have to be done over again. As two sets of bacteria cannot get along at the same time the bitter bacteria give up the job.—National Stockman.

ORCHARD PRUNING.

Don't Go at It as Though You Were Cutting Cord Wood.

Don't get a crazy fit and go into your orchard with an ax and cut and slash the branches off and think you are pruning, says H. E. Van Deman. Every stroke with a tool on a tree is a stroke at its life, unless very wisely made. There need be no elaborate or stylish method of pruning adopted. Common sense is a good guide, but if a person judges his knowledge of pruning by the amount of brush he makes, he is sadly lacking in common sense, and should never be allowed to prune.



All dead or sick branches should come off, all that cross or chafe each other should be relieved by the removal of the one which can best be spared. Do not cut great open spaces in the tree tops and so let in too much hot sunshine and injure the limbs that have been used to being shaded. It is dangerous to prune cherry trees at all; they are rarely benefited by so doing, but are often injured. Train old orchard trees to have low, broad heads, which will shade the trunks, lessen the purchase of the winds, and make more convenient the gathering of the fruit.

PROPAGATING TANK.

Or, Can Be Made at Home at a Really Trifling Expense.

Most farmers, particularly those raising early vegetables, sometimes wish they had a good propagating tank for starting cuttings. Many an odd dollar can be picked up in the spring with a few hundred flowering plants or early tomato and lettuce plants. A little sand table, with a gentle heat, would be very handy in the house. A hotbed may be inconvenient or troublesome and a small greenhouse out of the question. Such a propagating tank suitable for a window can be easily made by any tinsmith or gas fitter. Have the gas man join up with "elbows" three pieces of common inch gas pipe; two pieces, a a, three inches long and one piece, b, five feet long. Joined up, they would look like Fig. 1. Have a zinc box made five feet long, two feet wide and six inches deep and made water-tight. At one end, in the middle, cut two holes, so that the piece of gas pipe can be laid in the box, resting on the bottom and projecting two inches beyond the box. Fig. 2 shows how the pipe is placed on the box. The openings where the pipe enters the box are to be soldered up water-tight. The box is then placed on a table with the pipe end of the box projecting beyond the table as seen in Fig. 3. The box is then filled with water, covering the top of the pipe as shown by the dotted line, c. Place in the water pieces of brick and on the brick lay pieces of roofing slate to form a loose slate top two inches from the top of the box and half an inch above the top of the water, as shown at d. Leave a small hole in one corner of the slate to supply water to the tanks. Fill the whole top of the box over the slate with sand, e In this sand cuttings can be raised, as the tank, when in operation, will be full of warm water, giving a gentle bottom heat for the cuttings.

For heat use a small kerosene lamp, f, placed directly under that part of the pipe which projects beyond the box The engraving shows the position of the box on the table and the lamp The heat of the lamp will warm the water in the pipe and set up a constant circulation through the whole box under the slate. All the water in the tank will in turn pass through the pipe and while the lamp burns the water circulation will keep in motion. Even after the lamp is put out the water will remain warm for several hours. On snowy days, in a warm room, the lamp can be put out during the day and started up at night, and on cloudy, cold days. Such a propagating tank would hold about 500 ordinary plant cuttings and should give their crop between January 1 and May 1. A few days' trial would soon show how much the lamp would have to be used to maintain a regular heat in the sand.—Charles Barnard, in Orange Judd Farmer.

PRISON-LABOR PROBLEM.

How to Avoid Competition Between Convict and Free Labor.

The prison-labor problem presents difficulties at every turn. The abolition of the contract system of disposing of prison labor was undoubtedly a wise step, but it by no means effected a solution of the problem. The competition of prison-made goods with the product of free labor is a bad thing, yet it must be remembered that the convicts can scarcely be employed at all without competing more or less with outside labor. In the nature of things this must be so. If the convicts were not in prison they would be at work outside competing with other laborers. Seeing the demoralizing effect upon the market of prison-made goods, leaders of organized labor have asked that convicts be employed in making goods for use by the state and its political subdivisions. In accord with this suggestion, which has decided merits, Gov. Tanner has recommended that convicts be employed in making text books for use in the public schools. And, naturally enough, though certainly inconsistent, at a meeting at which the general policy of employing prisoners in the manufacture of goods for the state was commended, the particular proposition to employ them in making text books was condemned by the representatiou of the printers that was in attendance. This episode serves to illustrate the difficulty and complexity of the problem, and should inspire in all a spirit of toleration in considering the subject.

The only way prisoners can be employed without competing directly with free labor is to put them to work on public improvements that could not be constructed for years to come but for the utilization upon them of labor of this sort. In this way there may be secured improvements of inestimable value for all time that the public might not have felt warranted in constructing under other circumstances. There is no doubt that good roads would be worth almost any amount to a community, but it is practically impossible to get taxing bodies to take from the people the sums necessary for their construction. Making of good roads would be in many respects ideal employment for a portion of the state's convicts, and the proposition so to employ them has been revived in New York. The chief objection to the plan, peculiarly enough, is a sentimental one. It is argued that the popular sense would revolt at the sight of convicts under guard at work in the presence of the public. This objection has some weight, but it should not be made to appear insuperable.—Chicago Record.

THE GERMAN CARP.

Its Introduction in American Waters Was a Great Mistake.

A recent dispatch from Swedesboro, N. J., announced the poor success of carp fishing in the tide-water streams this winter. The few fish taken, it was reported, were small and not marketable. The scarcity of carp this season in the South New Jersey streams is attributed to the great catches of last year.

Those who have studied the habits of the carp and become convinced of its destructiveness with respect to other fishes will rejoice at the possibility of its extermination from American waters. There is an act of the New Jersey legislature which imposes a heavy fine on any person who introduces German carp into the waters of that state. The coming Pennsylvania legislature would do well to enact a similar law. More than a year ago the state board of fish commissioners, after a careful investigation, came to the conclusion that the presence of German carp in our waters is detrimental to the increase of much better food fishes, and decided to discontinue their distribution. The commissioners of game and fisheries of New York reached an identical decision about the same time.

For years the United States fish commission defended the introduction of the German carp, and advocated its wider distribution in the face of overwhelming evidence of its insatiable spawn-eating habits; this was, perhaps, since that body was first responsible for its general planting in American waters; but the present commissioner, Commander Brice, is actuate; by no such considerations, and when he was confronted with the proofs of the undesirability of the carp, immediately ordered further output to be stopped.

The carp may be a good food fish in Germany, but if so it has sadly deteriorated in this country. As a table food it is pronounced scarcely better than our American sucker; many, indeed, regard the latter as much better for eating purposes. Wherever it has gained a foothold far better food fishes rapidly decrease in number, though the former devouring the eggs of the latter. Its filth-loving habits foul clear water and impart a muddy, disagreeable taste to its flesh. Except for its rapid growth, there does not seem to be a single quality to recommend it; thus it is a matter for congratulation that there are signs of its becoming scarce in the Delaware river and tributaries.

Without exception, our American fresh water fishes are better than those which have been introduced from foreign countries, and it would be well for the United States fish commission and the different state bodies to discourage any further foreign introductions. Far from the New Jersey fishermen advocating their legislature to prohibit carp fishing for two years, as is reported to be the case, now that they have a prospect of getting rid of it they had better urge the legislature to increase the penalty in force against any person who may plant more.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A TERRAPIN'S LOVE OF HOME.

Caught, Marked and Released Three Times, It Returns to Its Abode.

The devotion of a land terrapin to its home is well illustrated by a story from Paoli, Ind. In 1840 Miss Davie Peele, of that city, was ten years old. While playing in the woods one day she came upon one of the creatures and took it home. Its curious ways pleased her and she put it in a box to keep as a pet. The little prisoner refused food and chafed at confinement. As the young lady was about to release the terrapin some one suggested that she carve her name in its shell. She did this, adding the date. The little animal was let go.

Ten years later Miss Peele married County Clerk Wible, of Orange county. One day she found herself in the vicinity where she had first discovered the terrapin. To her great surprise she again found the little fellow within a few feet of where she first saw it. Her name and the date were as plain as when she put them there. The terrapin was again made prisoner to show her friends the marvelous find. Again tracing her new name on the shell she released her captive. The date, 1850, was put on.

After many years Mrs. Wible became a widow and removed to Hutchinson, Kan. There she married Dr. McKinney and still resides there.

In the summer of 1872 Mrs. McKinney visited her old home at Paoli. A search again revealed the terrapin at its first abode. Again she carved her changed name on the shell. It was the talk of the little town. Returning to her western home Mrs. McKinney thought little of her terrapin until a friend in 1895 sent her a copy of a local paper containing the facts. The terrapin had been again found, and the date 1895 carved on its back. It was found right where it had been first discovered by Miss Peele. Each time it had been released near the center of the little town and found its way to its original home.—N. Y. World.

A school inspector, having a few minutes to spare after examining the school, put a few questions to the lower form boys on the common objects of the schoolroom.

"What is the use of that map?" he asked, pointing to one stretched across the corner of the room; and half a dozen shrill voices answered:

"Please, sir, it's to hide teacher's bicycle."—Pearson's Weekly.

Their Reflections.

Mrs. Gray—Mr. Soule is going to preach to-morrow. I wouldn't miss hearing him for anything.

Mrs. Greene—I'm awful sorry I shan't be able to go.

"Got a new bonnet or something, I suppose."—Boston Transcript.

LONG AT THE LEVER.

RIGORS OF THE ROAD

From the Gazette, Chillicothe, Ohio.

Mr. Elbridge Waterman is a well-known railroad engineer of the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern Railway, who has been a great sufferer from nervous debility of an aggravated kind for the past ten years. The strain was telling on his nerves terribly, and steady work was impossible. The following is his story:

"For the past ten years," he said, "I have suffered as few men have, with nervousness, heart trouble and rheumatism. I have lived on the footboard most of my life, and the constant jolting and nervous strain slowly but surely undermined my constitution. I was forced to quit work, and there seemed to be little prospect of my going back to the throttle again. I tried every remedy that I could find, but none of them did me any good. I consulted doctors all over the country, but to no avail. I would be better for a time, and then would come on an attack more severe than ever, and I would have to quit work. The money I have spent during that time for doctors and medicine, none of which did me any permanent good, would place me now out of want, and in comparative affluence. If I had it. An idea of how much time and money I lost may be gained when I tell you that during last summer alone, I was totally unable to work four months on a stretch, and was much of the time confined to the house, and to the bed, sometimes unable to move. It makes me cold all over when I look back on what I have gone through.

"But rheumatism was not the only thing I suffered from. My heart troubled me very much, and I was totally unable to sleep for days and weeks at a time. When I would drop off into a doze, my heart would beat itself almost out of my bosom, and would wake me up as usual. I had been struck by a trip hammer. I had twitchings in my arms and legs, and was altogether in such a condition that my wife and friends began to consider me beyond reach of medical assistance.

"I was almost of the same opinion myself, when I happened to see in the paper last June a letter from an old soldier in the west who had been cured of rheumatism by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The testimonial was written in such a way that I knew it was not a faked up one, and I determined to give this medicine a fair trial. I was unable to work at the time, and almost in despair. So I went to the drug store and bought six boxes of them, in order to give them a thorough test, and in a few days I began to feel the improvement they were working in my system. In two weeks I was able to go to work, and I have worked ever since without a lay off, which is something I have not done for years.

"The first improvement I noticed was in my heart, which grew more and more normal in its action, until at last it did not trouble me at all, and I was able to sleep as I had not been able for ten years. The heart trouble has never returned, and my sleep for the past two months has been healthy and deep. Last night I went to bed early and slept soundly until eight o'clock this morning. And now, when I wake up, I feel invigorated and ready for the day's work, just as I used to feel when I was a boy.

"The nervous twitchings were also cured in a short time, and have never returned or bothered me in the least since. This has also been a great relief to me, as the twitchings were very annoying, as well as an indication to everyone of the terrible condition in which my state of health was. And the greatest wonder of all is that the rheumatism seems to be cured also, and does not bother me in the least any more, except when I expose myself unduly, and even then only for a short time. I consider myself a well man now, and hope to continue so. I am still taking Pink Pills, for I want the cure to be a complete and permanent one. I only wish I had known them years ago, for I would have saved myself large sums of money as well as suffering for which no money could repay."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box; or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

But a little cough has taken many a man away from his coffers. The "slight cough" is somewhat like the small pebble that lies on the mountain side, and appears utterly insignificant. A fluttering bird, perhaps, starts the pebble rolling, and the rolling pebble begets an avalanche that buries a town. Many fatal diseases begin with a slight cough. STATE NEWS.

Two dogs killed $150 worth of sheep for Mock brothers, of Boyle county.

Grip and whooping cough continue to keep the doctors on the jump in Hopkins county.

Mrs. Mary Ratcliff, of McKinney, Lincoln county, is said to be 110 years old. She is well preserved.

Charles Doggett, of Brooksville, wrote a note saying he was tired of life and blew out his brains with a shotgun.

The four-year old daughter of Justin Noe fell into a kettle of boiling soap in Bell county, and died a few hours later.

Hog cholera still prevails in the northern part of Shelby county, and the losses in some instances have been very heavy.

Walter Collins, aged 20, had a fit and fell into a branch only ten inches deep and was drowned, in Washington county.

A suit has been brought by Floyd county against its Sheriff, F. F. Martin, to force the payment of uncollected taxes, amounting to $12,000.

A number of indictments have been returned against prominent citizens of Nicholas county for betting and holding stakes on the last election.

At Danville court there was considerable demand for good cattle, the best selling at $4 10. Those sold privately, but some sold publicly at 4 cents.

A three handed shooting scrap occurred in Fayette county, last Thursday. Sixteen shots were fired but no body was hurt. The trouble was over a cow.

Mrs. John Ison and her daughter, of Garrard county, died last week at the same hour. The mother died of dropsy, and the daughter of a complication of diseases.

Smithville has become the greatest fishing resort in Central Kentucky. Many club-houses will be erected by Louisville fishers along the banks of the Salt river.

Some of the enterprising citizens of Williamstown are endeavoring to secure sufficient capital to establish a plug tobacco factory, with a very fair prospect of succeeding.

It is rumored that parties in Rockport, Ind., contemplate leasing land opposite Owensboro and will open a clubhouse and run a free ferry should local option carry in Daviess county.

The directors of the Lexington and Danville turnpike, in which the State owns an interest, have offered to sell to Garrard county at $2000 a mile that part of the road lying in Garrard county.

The Judges of the Court Appeals were written to by New York authorities for an opinion regarding the arbitration treaty. It is said that a majority answered against the treaty as it now stands.

One of the candidates for jailer in Calloway county publishes a card in the Times offering as an inducement to the voters to buy two bloodhounds at an expense of $125, and keep them in Murray ready for business as long as he is jailer.

Marshall county, according to the Murray Times, has four Cumberland Presbyterian churches, with a membership of 225. The Primitive Baptists have six churches with a membership of 260; Methodists, eighteen churches, 1,200 members; Baptists, thirteen churches, 1,000 members; Christian, seven churches, 1,000 members.

The stockholders who are asking Garrard county to pay $2,000 a mile for a part of the Lexington and Danville turnpike are asked to explain why the officers of the company made a sworn statement last fall, when the road was assessed for taxation, to show that the stock of the company was worth only one-twentieth of its par value.

In the Circuit Court in Georgetown Judge Cantrill gave his decision in the local option cases. In August last the county voted for local option. On the same day a separate election was held in town which voted for license. Since that time four saloons whose license expired have had them renewed by the City Council. They were indicted by the grand jury. The court decided the town election was illegal and the saloons were violating the law.

The Conrad-Sanders $25,000 damage suit was disposed of by the Grant Circuit Court last week. William Conrad, the plaintiff in the action, is one of the wealthiest men in this part of the State. In 1875 he wedded the daughter of J. B. Renaker, the only child and the heir of $250,000. For nearly 20 years they lived together, and six children were born to them. John B. Sanders, the defendant, is a rich merchant, and Conrad charged him with alienating the affections of his wife, who had left him in 1893 and sued for and obtained a divorce. The case was on trial for 12 days. More than 100 witnesses testified as to the conduct of the parties. The jury gave a majority verdict for the defendant on the first ballot, nine being for the defendant and three for the plaintiff.

In 1880 Messrs. C. P. Damon & Co., of St. Louis, purchased a number of barrels of the famous Van-Hook whisky, manufactured by the F. S. Ashbrook Co., of this city, and stored it on the upper floors of the J. W. Peck building on Main street. Very little of it had been sold until last week, and consequently it had attained the rare old age of 17 years. Last week Cincinnati parties bought five barrels of it. Mr. R. H. Conway, one of the most expert gaugers, gauged it. Each barrel when put into storage contained 44 wine gallons. The five when taken out footed up a total of but 42 gallons, an average of a little over 8 gallons. One barrel contained but 2½ gallons, and its proof was 163 per cent. Wednesday 10 more barrels were sold Cincinnati men. These ten contained a total of 109 gallons, nearly 11 to the barrel. The average proof was 140 per cent. This is probably the most remarkable whiskey Kentucky has ever produced. It was as thick as syrup, and its proof is proof enough of its strength. A teaspoonful would keep a man drunk a week.—Cynthiana Democrat.

CROP AND STOCK.

The prospect for a good wheat crop in Knox county is very bad.

The Glasgow Times claims that the poultry business alone is worth from $50,000 to $200,000 a year to Barren county.

At Stanford on court day, about 100 cattle changed hands, at from 2 cents for butcher stuff, to 3¾ cents for a bunch of best steers and feeders.

M. B. King, of Christian county, on December 11 put up a lot of shoats averaging 80 pounds, and fed them on skimmed milk from his creamery. He fed them milk twice a day and corn once a day and when they were weighed 46 days later, they averaged 156½ pounds or a gain of nearly 1¾ pounds a day.

Corn which at gathering time sold for 75 cents a barrel in the field, has advanced to $1.50, and is likely to reach $2.00 before the new crop comes in. While many farmers have disposed of their corn there are others who anticipated the rise and have now a surplus in their crib. Thos. Gibson has 500 barrels in his crib, Jno. Caperton has about 600 barrels and there are others.—Richmond Register.

The highest price ever paid for a hogshead of white burley tobacco was obtained by Mr. Carr from P. H. Mayo & Bro., of Richmond, Va., at the time of the Richmond Tobacco Exposition in 1888. This hogshead of tobacco was packed by a well-known firm of Shelbyville, Ky., shippers, noted for fine goods and he obtained the remarkable price of $4,555 99 for the hogshead or at the rate of $3.10 per pound.—Western Tobacco Journal.

Our young friend, Hubert Gaines, thought, until last Monday, that he could ride any piece of horse flesh that came along, but a little experience with a young nag on that day convinced him of his error, and had the ground not been in a condition so very favorable to a long fall and a hard fall, he is certain that he'd now be wearing a plaster suit. As it was his hand is somewhat stove up. His staying qualities as a rider are not as good as he thought, and you need not bring in another "hoss."

Each candidate for Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney shall deposit with the chairman of the district committee on or before the first day of May 1897 the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars each for the purpose of paying the expenses of said election, and he shall distribute the same among the different County Chairmen of the county committees according to the number of voting precincts in such counties.

The fire engine ran off with the boys Sunday night. They pulled it out of the house and directed it toward the cistern, but no one grabbed the brake and it went on down the hill with them. Before it got to the bottom it was going at a merry pace, but the boys held on and saved the day.

C. B. Bruner & Son bought of Jas. Brightwell & Son, of Ghent, one pair mare mules, 16 hands high at $140; also 1 pair of Albert Green, 16 hands high at $140; 1 pair of Thos. Toon, 16 hands high at $165; 1 extra mule of Jas. Vanarsdal at $90; 1 15½ hand horse mule of Joe Whitton at $45; one 16 hand extra mare mule of George Smither at $90. Mr. Bruner reports the mule market very dull.

An alarm of fire Sunday night just as the church services began caused quite a stampede at the churches and brought out the town. The cause was a blaze at the home of Mona Smith, col., in the southwest part of town. The department got out on time and did effective work under the circumstances. The house was a solid blaze when the first stream got to playing on it and the adjoining house well under way. The blaze on the last house was soon knocked down and in a few moments the other was under control although too late to save the building.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 3, 1897. NO. 19.

To the Voters of Boone Co.

While we are discussing the merits and demerits of the candidates for the various county offices, would it not be well for us not to lose sight of the fact that our Justices, who, with the County Judge and County Attorney, compose the Fiscal Court, are also to be elected at the coming November election? As it is the duty of said court to fix salaries of some of the county officials, allow claims, agree with physicians as to pauper practice, levy tax to meet expenses, etc., ought we not, owing to the financial oppression that we are undergoing and must undergo for some time to come, raise some important issues for discussion and the honest consideration of those gentlemen, who are members, and those who wish to become members of our Fiscal Court through the elective franchise? It seems to the unprejudiced mind the most important issue, and the one in which all are directly interested, is the question of retrenchment all along the line. We believe the people have the sovereign right, and it is their duty under existing circumstances, to demand a reduction of the salaries of our county officers, of 25 per cent. at least.

Our present officials, according to the purchasing power of a dollar at this time compared to its value in the days of Phelps, Riddell, etc., as officials, would receive as much if not more than the above named officials. As these salaries are fixed annually, if prosperity should overtake us, and the people be relieved, the salaries can easily be increased.

The physician can afford to do the pauper practice in the same proportion as the proposed reduction in salaries, still I see no change in prices, same running back "to where the mind of man runneth not."

The farmer, who works the road with his team can well afford a cut in wages, and according to the action of the present courts his wages were reduced 16⅔ per cent., and his time lengthened 25 per cent. After reconsidering his wages were put at the old price. The extension of time lowers the wages of the farmer at least 15 or 20 per cent.

Brother farmers, have we not a right to ask, and I might say demand, a more equitable ruling in this matter? Why is your income not equalling or exceeding your outgo? Simply because your taxes are being increased yearly, salaries the same, you are (paying) the physician, the mechanic, the lawyer the common carrier, etc., etc., with but few exceptions, the same old prices, and your farm products have decreased in the last decade 50 or more per cent. It is now taking five or six bushels of your corn to have your horse shod. The corn rated at the cost of production cost $1 50 to $1 80. Who can wonder at your giving up your farm for the benefit of your creditors.

If gentlemen offer for membership in the Fiscal Court let them be required to meet these issues and let the people know where they stand, and our relief, in part, is in the ballot box.

SPERO-MELIORA.

THE officeseeker's are making life miserable for Gov. Mount, of Indiana. They are upon his heels at every step. They line up in front of his residence and surround him as soon as he appears on the street. They take possession of the street car when he enters one, and when he gets off the procession follows him. The Governor's daily prayer is for deliverance from the officeseekers.

SOME of the Republican politicians in the East are amused by Mr. Hanna's declarations as to what he intends to do when he takes his seat in the Senate. They say that he will find that the Senate is not as easily controlled as were Gov. Bushnell and Goe. B. Cox, of Ohio; and his presidential aspirations provoke them to remark that his head is getting too large for his hat.

IT is rumored on the streets that Grant county is to have two candidates for the office of Commonwealth's Attorney in the June primary election. If that be the case the fur will fly and we will have merry times from now until the fifth of the month of flowers and sunshine. —Williamstown Courier.

THE Louisville council seems to have been doing all its business by "compacts," but in every instance the compact was expected to increase their individual bank accounts, but on the contrary, it is about to add to the occupants of a certain State institution.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, February 27th, 1897

Senator Hill's resolution calling upon Secretary Olney for copies of all communications to and from Consul General Lee, which was adopted by the Senate without a dissenting voice, is intended to solve the mystery as to the truth of the sensational statements saying that Gen. Lee had either actually tendered his resignation as Consul General to Cuba, or threatened to do so, unless the administration gave him better backing than it has been giving him in his fight to secure justice for Americans arrested in Cuba. It is also believed that it was intended as an affront to President Cleveland. It is customary in such resolutions to request the President to furnish the desired information, if in his opinion it is compatible with public interests. Senator Hill ignored the President entirely, and his resolution asks Secretary Olney for the information. Congress feels very ugly towards the administration on account of its Cuban policy, but there is no time left to do anything now except to pass the appropriation bills.

Mr. Bryan was in Washington two days this week, and was the recipient of much attention. He was also the central figure in several important political conferences.

Representative Bailey, of Texas, gave the Republicans a good-natured raking over in a speech which did not overlook the assistant Republicans, about their embarrassment in distributing 60,000 offices among 350,000 applicants, and made the prediction that every one of the fifty Congressional districts which the Republicans carried last November by majorities of less than 1,000 would go Democratic at the next election. "Four years ago," said Mr. Bailey, "you laughed at our embarrassment; now we laugh at yours. You have no more chance of escaping the wrath of the office-seekers at the next Congressional elections than we had of escaping the disapproval of the people for the maladministration of the administration about to retire from power."

That a majority of the Republicans in the House would like to see the civil service law thrown overboard was shown by the hearty applause with which they received the assertion of delegate Flynn, of Oklahoma, that if he had his way he would wipe out the civil service law and fill every office with a Republican within twenty four hours after McKinley's inauguration. Representative Grosvenor, of Ohio, also jumped all over the civil service law and declared his belief that it would be appealed. Representative Bailey in reply to a direct question as to what he thought of the law promptly said: "I think it is a humbug," and when asked why the Democratic party didn't repeal it when they had the power he said: "we didn't have sense enough then, but we shall know better hereafter." Representative Brosius, of Pa. chairman of the House Committee on Civil Service Reform, defended the law, and accused Grosvenor of having by his talk against it "fleshed a sword in the heart of the President-elect," whatever that may mean. Whatever Mr. KcKinley may do there is little doubt that Grosvenor will have a numerous support if he wishes to lead a fight against the law in the next House, and it will not be surprising if he does it.

Notwithstanding the protest of fruit importers, who claim that foreign fruits do not compete to any material extent with American products, inasmuch as they are mostly put on sale at a different season of the year, the Republicans of the Ways and Means Committee have decided to place a duty upon tropical fruits which importers declare will be practically prohibitory.

There is trouble and a heap of it, ahead of Mark Hanna. The publication of interviews, in which he states that his first work upon entering the Senate will be to undertake the job of bossing the passage of the tariff bill, has aroused the ire of a number of Republican Senators and Mr. Hanna may start his Senatorial career by getting himself mercilessly snubbed. It is very safe to say that he will not be a Senator long before he will regret announcing his intentions to boss the body. Bossing the Senate is a very different job, as Mr. Hanna may learn if he will inquire of Benjamin Harrison and Grover Cleveland, both of whom made a failure in their several attempt to assume the role which he seems to think is as easy as buying impecunious delegates to a convention.

GROVER will take his supper tomorrow as a private citizen.

Mr. Hanna does not express much gratitude to Governor Bushnell for the Senatorship. He talks as though the Governor was compelled to give it to him.—Springfield (Ohio) Democrat.

There is fortunately no longer any need of Bushnell's worrying over the publication of news concerning the next Senator from Ohio. They merely continue the story of how Bushnell and Foraker were bluffed by Mark Hanna.—Kansas City Times.

Evidently the power of the coming Administration was great enough to compel Governor Bushnell to select Mark Hanna as John Sherman's successor in the United States Senate. It was a bitter dose for the Foraker faction, but it had to be taken.—Denver Republican.

Those Ohio labor unions that took the pains to request Governor Bushnell to refrain from appointing Mark Hanna to the United States Senate doubtless realize by this time that Hanna and his political colleagues don't mind a little thing like a resolution by a labor union.—N. Y. Journal.

Charley Kurtz is sore. This is not particularly to be wondered at, as he was until two days before the announcement of Mr. Hanna's name slated for the Senatorship himself. He was the chosen man up till the very last moment. The office had been offered him and had been accepted. He had ordered a supply of cuts with which to celebrate in the country newspapers of the state his entre into the senatorial dignity. To be thrown down at the last moment is enough to make him feel bad. That he is out of temper he does not seek to conceal. He will not talk, and thus betray vexation. But the manner in which he repeats his stereotyped phrase. "I have nothing to say," is enough to betray him to one who knows the equable manner in which Hon. Charles L. Kurtz usually bears off political defeat.—Columbus Spe. Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Date of Primary Election Changed to June 5, 1897.

Pursuant to the call of the Chairman of the county Democratic Executive committee, the committee met in D. E. Castleman's law office in Burlington, last Monday afternoon. The following members were present: D. E. Castleman, chairman; B. L. Rice, Secretary, P. E. Cason, proxy for Elijah Parker; Reuben Conner, Richard Stephens, Robt. McGlasson, Geo. Ossman, proxy for J. C. Hughes.

The chairman stated the object of the meeting to be for the purpose of considering the propriety of changing the date of the primary election as fixed at the last meeting. A motion to reconsider the action of the committee on the second Monday in December was made and carried, and the order made on that date is now held for naught.

It was agreed by the committee to hold a primary election to nominate candidates for the various county offices to be filled at the regular election in November, 1897. It was further agreed that said primary election be held on the first Saturday in June, 1897, and the Executive Committee will meet in the Court-house in Burlington, at 2 o'clock p. m., on Monday, June 7th, 1897, and count the votes cast for each candidate for the respective offices, and the candidate receiving the highest number of votes cast for any office will be declared the Democratic nominee for that office.

The committee adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That all persons who voted for Bryan and Sewall at the last November election, and all persons who did not vote but would have voted for Bryan and Sewall had they voted, and all young men who will be legal voters at the next November election, and will pledge themselves to support the Democratic party and the nominees of said primary election, shall be allowed to vote.

Resolved, That all persons who desire to be candidates before said primary election shall, on or before the 5th day of April, 1897, record their names with the chairman of the county committee, and pay their assessments to him.

Resolved, That only such candidates who pay their assessments to defray the expenses of said primary election, on or before the fifth day of April, 1897, shall be entitled to have their name placed upon the ballots to be voted for.

Resolved, That all candidates for precinct offices and for Coroner who wish their names to appear upon the ballots for said primary, shall pay to the chairman of the county committee one dollar, to help pay the expenses of said primary election.

The chairman and secretary were authorized to assess the candidates to defray the expenses of the primary election.

A ripple of amusement ran over the country in noting the fact that several eloquent spinisters took an active part in "the congress of mothers" recently in session at Washington. A novel wedding took place in Missouri the other day. Before Mr. and Mrs. William Irving were pronounced man and wife the latter was made to promise at the altar that she would not wear bloomers and ride a bicycle. The couple explained the peculiar ceremony by saying they expected to live a long while and wanted to guard against the tendency of the times.

One of the lions of a little New Jersey town is an old man who has recently completed his ninetieth year. He remembers when the woods were burned and is a perfect storehouse of meteorological information, the exact dates of all the big snowstorms and the cold spells being at his finger ends, ready for use at a moment's notice. Contrary to the custom of most nonogenarians, this old man has used tobacco for three-quarters of a century and has drank strong coffee since he was six years old.

The Herresdorf torpedo boat No. 6 is entitled to the distinction of being the naval water flyer of the world. In its trial of speed last week, five runs over a 12-mile course, the little wonder made an averge of 28¾ knots, which would have been increased to 29 but for a slight derangement of its machinery. Fast as it is, the two torpedo boats now building by the Bath iron works and Union iron works are guaranteed to make 30 knots. Evidently the fast sailers in American waters are not to be confined to the yachts.

The tongue is a little member, but is full of deadly poison. If that is true of the plain, everyday tongue, how much more of pickled tongue? The young women students at Chicago university revolted against the pickled tongue. The girls say that after eating the tongue they have been ill with symptoms of poisoning. The housekeeper says that the girls have been eating too much molasses candy. Certainly the girls' tongues are not yet in pickle. But candy or pickles, it should not require a university course to teach that the average girl does not need much additional sweetness or—tongue.

KING GEORGE

And His Cabinet Proclaim That They Will Maintain Their Present Policy.

The Blockade of Crete is Now Strictly Maintained, and a Scarcity of Provisions is Beginning to Be Felt—Indignation Over the Powers' Action.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—1 a. m.—A dispatch from Athens to the Central News says King George and his cabinet proclaim their resolution to maintain their present policy. They declare that it is impossible for them to recall the Greek troops from Crete.

The Athens correspondent of the London Standard telegraphs that it is reported that Col. Smolentz, minister of war, has renewed his offer to resign. There are signs that the remainder of the cabinet are inclined to take a similar step, but any indication of retreating from the king's policy would involve the greatest danger to the three. It is therefore unlikely there will be any faltering in the highest quarters. There is doubtless a grim popular determination to follow the sacrifices already made to the bitter end. An expression of the exaggeration felt at the attitude of the powers was given Thursday when 300 volunteers who had been prevented by the warships from landing in Crete, marched through the streets, accompanied by military bands.

It is understood that the note of the powers arrived Thursday and that it will be presented to the government Friday. The reply will probably be dictated by the resolution of the Cretans to yield to superior force.

The proposal of the powers is regarded as precarious makeshift which will not end the crisis. The Roman Catholic archbishop of Athens has sent details of the sufferings of the Cretans to the pope praying that he use his best offices to procure an equitable solution of the trouble.

The blockade of Crete is now strictly maintained. The scarcity of provisions is beginning to be felt. The foreign consuls have stopped all communications between the Greek warships and Col. Vassos, the commander of the Greek army of occupation. A Greek gunboat has undertaken to convey communication from Col. Vassos to Athens.

PARIS, Feb. 26.—A special dispatch received here from Larissa, Greece, says that 20,000 Greek troops are concentrated there and that the greatest activity prevails. The dispatch further states that it is believed at Larissa that general hostilities will immediately begin on the frontier in the event of Greece not being allowed to annex the Island of Crete.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—A special to the Herald from St. Petersburg says: The Novoe Vremya claims that the Greek policy is good for England. If she goes on in it, it will be impossible to forbid the Turks defending their territory.

The Mirovye Olgoloski says the trouble is purely local and does not threaten the peace of Europe.

The Glasnost says the Greeks counted on discord and found it. Greece must capitulate or Europe must.

ATHENS, Feb. 26.—It is announced here that the foreign consuls in the island of Crete have placed the plains of Suda Valley, between Akrotiri and Canea under the protection of the united fleets. The Christians at Selino are permitting the departure of Moslems and their families and the foreign warships are taking the fugitives on board. Three foreign warships have taken positions off Platania and are watching the movements of the Greek troops under Col. Vassos.

ENCOURAGING.

Reports From the Headwaters of the Ohio Indicate That the End of the Flood is in Sight.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 26.—Experienced rivermen say that the highest stage will be reached some time Thursday night or Friday morning when the Kanawha rise passes, and this will be closely followed by the Pittsburgh rise. Unless this should be followed by a sudden thaw, it will be followed by a rapid fall. The river may fall slightly soon, until the first up-river rise comes, when it will again go upward. Hundreds of families along the entire river front on both sides of the river are now homeless and active measures for their relief will be adopted. The police by their efforts have already accomplished great good and relieved much distress. The situation in the east end and Riverside is very bad. Nearly the whole of the little hamlet of Tell Cottage is submerged, and the same condition prevails at Trautman's station.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 26.—At 2 o'clock Friday morning the marks showed the stage of the river to be 61 feet and rising at the rate of one-half inch an hour.

Reports from river towns along the Ohio, which can be reached by telegraph, show that the river is falling above Portsmouth. At that point it is stationary and below it is slowly rising.

The indications are that the river here will become stationary some time Friday, and will not rise much over 61 feet. All calculations would be swept aside in the event of rain, which would swell the head waters and send the Ohio up with a jump. Observations, however, indicate clearer and colder weather.

Ohio's Paupers.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 26.—Statistics as to pauperism in Ohio, for the year ended September 1, 1896, given out by Secretary of State Kinney Thursday, show that the total number of paupers cared for in the Ohio poorhouses was 9,524 males and 5,503 females. Outside of the poorhouses 41,205 paupers were cared for in part or wholly, making a total of paupers in the state for the year, 56,232.

The cost of keeping these infirmaries was $726,757.87. The cost of outside relief was $566,427.67, so that the total cost of pauperism in Ohio for last year was $1,353,165.54.

THE GREEKS

Will Protect the Christians in Crete—Greece Will Not Declare War Unless Forced to Do So.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The Athens correspondent of the Times telegraphs that Prime Minister Delyannis has informed him that Greece's decision to maintain her army in Crete is irrevocable but that the troops will abstain from the offensive. They will only protect the Christians. Greece will not declare war against Turkey unless the Turks invade Thessaly or the powers render the position of the Greek troops in Crete unbearable.

The correspondent adds that the Roman Catholic archbishop of Athens has telegraphed to the pope asking his holiness to mediate between Greece and the powers.

CANEA, Feb. 27.—Most of the foreign warships that were lying in the harbor here have left and gone to Suda bay, where there is a better anchorage than here. It is likely, however, that their presence here will again be required, as the situation has become more critical than ever before, and that it would not be surprising if a conflict should occur. In one respect the interposition of the powers has had a bad effect in that it has led the Moslems to believe that Europe is back of them in their combat with the Christians. As a result there are Friday afternoon 8,000 Moslems fighting men, besides the Turkish soldiers, all heavily armed, parading the streets of the city and demanding the blood of Christian dogs who have dared to question the rights of the Turks to rule them. The combined forces that have been landed by the several powers number only 800 men, and it is believed that without the aid of the warships they would prove of no avail in preserving order in the city.

The popular passion has been added to by Ishmael Pasha, the acting governor, who has circulated false stories to the effect that the Greek troops are mutilating Moslem children. The governor knows these stories to be untrue, and apparently his object is to create among the Moslems deeper hatred of the Christians and to further excite the desire for revenge. He is carrying matttters with a high hand, and it is likely that the powers will have to intervene to check his ardor in behalf of the Turks. Accompanied by an armed body of Turks he left Candia Friday and occupied strategic positions, from which he attacked the Christians, causing serious losses to them. The commanders of the warships remaining in the harbor protested to the governor against his breaking the armistice, but the protest was unheeded. The admirals commanding the foreign fleets have been notified of Ismael's action and there is much speculation as to the course they will pursue.

TO A TREE.

A Tennessee Negro Hanged by a Mob Near Roddy, Tenn.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Feb. 27.—As Miss Lillie Walker, the pretty 18-year-old stepdaughter of H. D. Varner, a highly respected farmer, living near Roddy, was going home from a neighbor's house, she was grabbed at a lonely spot by Chas. Brown, a Negro.

The Negro told her not to scream and drew a pistol. The girl, after a fearful struggle, freed herself from his grasp and ran screaming down the road. The Negro fled and hid in a barn. It was soon surrounded by a posse of officers.

Deputy John Sadler went up in the loft, and when his head protruded above the ladder he was fatally shot by Brown. The Negro was finally arrested.

A mob quickly formed and took the trembling wretch from the officers' hands and in a few minutes had swung him to a tree near by.

THE DAUNTLESS

Has a Little Tilt With the Cruiser Vesuvius at Jacksonville.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 27.—The tug Dauntless had a little tilt with the cruiser Vesuvius Friday. She tried to leave the river when four blasts from the Vesuvius' big whistle were heard. The tug did not obey and the second and third were blown. Seeing other preparations made to stop her by force, the tug yielded and came into dock again. It is believed it was done to make a case against the government for damages stronger, alleging illegal detention.

It is reported Friday night that the cruiser Indiana is at the bar and will go south Saturday morning. Her destination is unknown but her presence here has aroused much comment on account of the Cuban situation.

Violated the Labor Contract Law.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 27.—Immigration Inspector McGlogan turned back to Windsor three Canadian girls who were on their way from Montreal to Chicago, on the ground that they were violating the labor contract law. The girls were on board a Grand Trunk train. A rigid examination disclosed the fact that the girls were under contract before they left Montreal and the inspector shipped them back to Windsor.

Gas Explosion on a Vessel.

SWANSEA, Feb. 27.—An explosion occurred Friday on the British bark Kilment, Capt. Jones, which was loaded with coal for San Francisco. The fore and main hatchways were blown off, and three persons injured. The explosion was due to gas that had been generated by the cargo.

Only One Mine Running.

NELSONVILLE, O., Feb. 27.—There is only one mine in the whole Hocking valley that is running. Scores of idle men are anxious for work. Calls for help are beginning to come in. The situation in the mining districts is critical. There has been scarcely any work for months, and it is growing still less. The wonder to many is how the less fortunate manage to live.

Negro Rapist Executed.

LOUISVILLE, Ga., Feb. 27.—The Negro rapist, Will Dean, was Friday executed in the jail yard in this city. He made a confession

TO DECLARE WAR

Between the Kindom of Spain and the United States Government.

A Resolution Introduced in the House to That Effect by Representative Snifer—Has Gen. Lee Resigned?—Pardon for Sanguilly Signed by the Queen.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Mr. Sulzer (dem., N. Y.) offered in the house Thursday a bill declaring war between the kingdom of Spain and her colonies and the United States of America and their territories.

The measure reads as follows: "That war be declared to exist between the kingdom of Spain and her colonies and the United States of America and their territories; and that the president is authorized to use the whole land and naval force of the United States to carry the same into effect, and to issue to private armed vessels of the United States commissions or letters of marque and general reprisal, in such form as he may think proper and under the seal of the United States, against the vessels, goods and effects of the government of the said kingdom of Spain and the subjects thereof." The measure was referred to the committee on foreign affairs.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Senor de Lome, the Spanish minister residing here, states Thursday night that he has received an official cablegram from Madrid, Spain, that the crown regent has signed the pardon of Jose Sanguilly. The further statement is made that this action was taken by the Spanish cabinet last week and will be published in the Madrid newspapers Friday morning. The telegram conveying this information to Senor de Lome is signed by Tetuan, the Spanish minister of foreign affairs.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—From distinct sources statements were received here early Thursday morning that Consul General Lee at Havana "had received his passports." This rumor naturally caused excitement, and a general desire was expressed to know definitely whether Gen. Lee's contemplated withdrawal from Havana was his own act, resulting from the acceptance of his resignation, said to have been cabled last Sunday, or whether it had been brought about by the action of the Spanish authorities in Cuba, in which latter case its significance would be much more marked.

The well-known fact was pointed out that passports were not given to consuls, but only to ministers and ambassadors; that in the case of an offending or retiring consul the document sent him on his departure was his "exequatur," or official document, recognizing his right to exercise the functions of his office, and it was said that not even the semi-diplomatic position accorded to our consul general at Havana by consent of the Spanish government would render his case where "passports" would be required. The return of his "exequatur" to the consul would of course be equivalent to the sending of "passports" to a minister. But at the Spanish legation, as well as at the state department, it was emphatically stated this courses had not been taken. The denials were quite as emphatic as those previously put out in regard to Gen. Lee's request for war ships, and the conditional tender of his resignation if this request should not be granted. It was stated on the direct authority of a member of the cabinet that Secretary Olney stated to his associates at the cabinet meeting on Tuesday last that it was not true that Lee had resigned or that he had asked for warships. Mr. Olney, on this occasion added that exciting statements put out were simply an attempt to "run the state department through the newspapers."

It was again said Thursday morning as coming from Secretary Olney that there was no change in the Cuban situation. Thus the matter rests.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The senate committee on foreign relations snubbed Secretary Olney Thursday morning and refused to listen to his request not to press in the senate the resolution demanding the immediate release of Sanguilly. The committee discussed Mr. Olney's letter for some time, but by a decisive vote decided to bring the resolution up and subsequent events in the senate showed that Secretary Olney's advice was little heeded.

The senate committee on foreign relations held a special meeting Thursday morning for the purpose of again considering the resolution reported Wednesday instructing the president to demand the immediate release of Julio Sanguilly, an American citizen now confined in prison in Cuba.

The case was carefully discussed and the committee reached the unanimous conclusion that the senate could afford to wait no longer for Spain to keep her promise made to Secretary Olney to release Sanguilly, and the decision was reached to insist upon the passage of the resolution to the opposition of appropriation measures and everything else.

The relations between the administion and the senate have been further strained by the refusal of Secretary Olney to transmit to the government of Greece the resolution adopted by the senate last Friday extending sympathy to that government for its intervention for the purpose of freeing the people of Crete from Turkish rule.

Ambassador McVeagh.

ROME, Feb. 26.—Hon. Wayne McVeagh, United States ambassador to Italy, and his family, have left the palace of Piobito, where they have been residing, and are staying at the Grand hotel. Mr. and Mrs. McVeagh will dine at the Quirinal with King Humbert and Queen Marguherita on Saturday, and will leave Rome on Monday of next week.

The Report Was Erroneous.

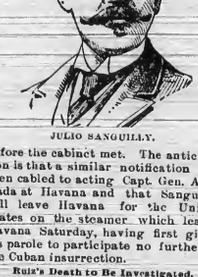
LONDON, Feb. 26.—It is now well established that the recent report of the death of Steniitz, the chess master was erroneous.

THE HOUSE

Passes the Bill Providing for the Adjustment of Certain Labor Troubles—Julio Sanguilly Released From Custody.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—In the house Friday the house bill was passed providing for the adjustment of labor troubles between carriers of inter-state commerce and their employes. It requires the commissioner of labor and chairman of the inter-state commerce commission, in case of trouble between a railroad company and its employes to make an effort to settle it by conciliation. Failing in this, a board of arbitration is to take hold of the matter, both parties to be bound by its award. Senate bill prohibiting the importation of impure and unwholesome tea was also passed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—The subcommittee of the senate committee on appropriations had the naval bill under consideration Friday night and will meet to make a final report to the full committee Saturday. The senate committee will not add any battleships to the bill, though three of the 30-knot torpedo boat destroyers will probably be added to the bill.



WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—The committee on elections of both president and vice president and members Friday heard further argument in the alleged South Carolina election frauds.

Dr. Sampson Pope, independent candidate for governor, characterized as a great fraud the constitutional convention and reviewed the circumstances attending it.

Mr. Corliss said that the memorials presented by Mr. Murray and which were the subject of the hearing were addressed "to the congress of the United States," and asked Mr. Pope if he thought, under these circumstances if it should not be joint, the senate participating. Mr. Pope replied that the house committee, he thought, could act independently, but individually he favored a joint investigation. After further hearing the committee went into executive session and decided to submit the facts gathered by them to the house with the recommendation that the whole matter be referred to the next congress. In view of its importance it was deemed unwise at this late day of the session to undertake the inquiry.

Notified of Sanguilly's Pardon.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Secretary Olney, with the official notification of Sanguilly's pardon by the queen of Spain in his hands, visited President Cleveland at the white house an hour before the cabinet met. The anticipation is that a similar notification has been cabled to acting Capt. Gen. Ahumada at Havana and that Sanguilly will leave Havana for the United States on the steamer which leaves Havana Saturday, having first given his parole to participate no further in the Cuban insurrection.

Ruiz's Death to Be Investigated.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Official cablegrams from Madrid received at the Spanish legation regarding the death of Ruiz, show that the government is aroused to most energetic action and that orders have gone forward to Cuba to have a most thorough investigation into the affair. This is regardless of the question of Ruiz's nationality, for whether he is an American or not, the government has determined that if a crime has been committed those guilty shall be punished. If Gen. Lee's charges are correct that the doctor was killed or driven to suicide by his jailers, the severest punishment of military law will be executed on those responsible.

Cabinet Meeting.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—The last meeting but one of the Cleveland cabinet was held Friday. It is said that personal affairs incident to the close of the administration formed much of the subject.

GEN. LEE,

American Consul General to Cuba, Openly and Shamefully Insulted by a High Spanish Official.

HAVANA, Feb. 27.—The Marquis de Palmerola made a scandalous personal attack on Gen. Lee Wednesday night in the palace, in the presence of several American newspaper correspondents. The incident arose because the censor refused to pass a dispatch for the correspondents which said that the release of Scott had been demanded, because he was both arrested and kept in prison in defiance of the law.

"Who told you that?" shouted Gen. Palmerola, the secretary of state for the island.

"Gen. Lee," replied a correspondent, calmly.

"Gen. Lee is a liar, imposter and rebel," shouted the little marquis, with an oath.

Gen. Lee is, of course, too busily engaged in endeavoring to induce our government to protect the lives and property of our fellow-citizens to pay any attention to Palmerolo's outbreak.

Wm. J. Bryan in New York.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Wm. J. Bryan did not have a large audience in Carnegie hall Friday night to hear his lecture on "Money," but the audience was in a moderate degree enthusiastic and it applauded whenever it got a chance. A number of ladies were present and energetically applauded Mr. Bryan's sentiments.

LAST SUNDAY

The President-Elect Goes to the Church of Which He is a Member.

The Pastor Asks the Divine Blessing on the Outgoing and Incoming President —All Preparations for Leaving Canton Made at McKinley's Home.

CANTON, O., March 1.—Maj. McKinley's last Sunday at his home in Canton before starting out for Washington to be inaugurated president of the United States, was marked by no unusual happenings. He went to the Methodist church of which he has been a members since he was 17 years old. The church has a seating capacity exceeding 1,000 and it was crowded. Maj. McKinley drove to the church and was accompanied by Capt. H. O. Heistand and George E. Morse, of San Francisco, who married one of the president-elect's nieces. Snow was falling rapidly and almost obscured Maj. McKinley's figure as he walked from the carriage to the church. Maj. McKinley joined with evident relish in the singing of the opening hymn: "Jesus reigns." Dr. C. E. Manchester, the pastor, who was a member of Maj McKinley's regiment during the war said the prayer: "Great Lord, bless our nation, grant that peace and righteousness may prevail. We pray Thee that Thy blessing may be on the president of the United States in the closing days of his administration and nothing may be done displeasing to Thee. Let Thy blessing rest upon Thy servant who has been chosen to be the chief executive of this nation. We pray Thee to go with him, give him great faith in Thee; may he be sustained by the prayers of Thy people that he may carry out Thy will. We pray Thee to manifest Thyself to him and to all of us."

Dr. Manchester found his text in the third verse of the 21st chapter of Matthew: "The Lord hath need." His theme was the higher life. In speaking of his home training he paid, in a delicate indirect way, a beautiful tribute to Mother McKinley. In conclusion, Dr. Manchester said: "How shall we preserve the peace of nations? What are we to do for this great land of ours? There is one thought in all of our minds this morning as our dear brother and friend goes out to take up the duties that lie before him. Our prayers that he do aright the great work set before him."

B. F. McKinley, of San Francisco, an uncle of the president-elect, arrived in Canton Sunday. He will accompany the presidential party to Washington.

All preparations for leaving Canton have been made at the McKinley home. Mr. and Mrs. Lafayette Williams, who are to share the private car occupied by Maj. and Mrs. McKinley, will arrive here Monday. The presidential train will consist of seven cars, a combination baggage and smoking car, a handsome new Pullman for the newspaper correspondents, a dining car, two Pullmans, a private car for Mother McKinley and her party, and a second private car, which will be the last car on the train, and will be occupied by the president-elect. The train will be preceded by one bearing the Cleveland troop which is going to do escort duty. There will be about 65 persons on Maj. McKinley's special train, most of them being relatives or close personal friends of the president-elect.

The train conveying the president-elect will leave here at 7 o'clock Monday night and is scheduled to arrive in Washington at 11 o'clock on Tuesday. It will not be run at a high rate of speed on account of Maj McKinley's venerable mother and other ladies who will be passengers on it. Safety and comfort will be the end sought rather than swiftness. Maj. McKinley will probably say a few words of farewell to his friends and neighbors before the train leaves Canton. He is to be escorted to the train by several thousand Canton people and the streets along the line of march will be brilliantly illuminated.

Maj. and Mrs. McKinley took a drive Sunday afternoon. They are both in possession of their usual health.

No Lack of Union Among the Fowers.

LONDON, March 1.—The Athens correspondent of the Times denies that there is any lack of union among the powers, although he says it is impossible to dissuade the populace from believing that there is no union among them. THE FLOOD

Has Entailed a Loss of About Two Million Dollars—Twenty-Three Lives Reported Lost.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 25.—"The Ohio will continue rising Wednesday and Thursday," said Observer Bassler, Wednesday morning.

"It will reach the 60-foot stage Thursday, but will not go much beyond." The tributaries of the Ohio are all falling except at their mouths. The Ohio will keep rising at Cincinnati until the water brought down by them shall have passed this point.

The lower portion of Newport is being gradually submerged by the waters from the Ohio and Licking rivers. Travel over the lower Covington and Newport bridge has been suspended, owing to the water being over Hubbard street from Fourth to Fifth street.

The loss of life in the flood in the Ohio valley has reached a score and three. The loss of property is tremendous. Thus far only the most imperfect attempts have been made to estimate the damage done to business interests by the torrent. West Virginia reports at Wheeling indicate a loss of $600,000 in that state. Lumber and oil interests suffered there, as well as the railways. It seems safe to estimate the loss in Ohio as half that in West Virginia; in Portsmouth and the surrounding country alone the damage is $75,000. A tabulated statement of the estimate is as follows:

Pittsburgh, Pa	$ 500,000
Other Pennsylvania points	75,000
West Virginia	600,000
Ohio	300,000
Louisville, Ky	25,000
Other Kentucky points	200,000
Indiana	175,000
Total	$1,925,000

Late Wednesday night the river was rising at the rate of one and one-half inch an hour, and it is expected to reach, but not pass, the 60-foot stage by Thursday night.

The limit of the flood is placed at 60 feet by river men, and they believe that the rise from Pittsburgh will not have much effect when it reaches here on account of the vast expanse over which the river now extends.

The stage of the water at 3 o'clock Thursday morning was 59.1.

LAWRENCEBURG, Ind., Feb. 25.—Tuesday night was one of anxiety in Lawrenceburg. Of all towns along the Ohio a big flood causes the greatest apprehension in this place. In the famous flood of 1884 the city and its 5,000 people were submerged. The current of the river ran through high street, the principal business thoroughfare, where boats anchored at second-story windows. Sixty or 70 houses were completely submerged. Many of these were swept away. They were found near Aurora after the waters had receded.

The fearful loss in 1884 caused the government to build a levee here, running back to the foothills, and completely protecting the town from the joint floods of the Miami river and the Ohio.

A fierce wind lashed the waves against this levee Tuesday night, and many people did not sleep. Every foot of the big embankment was carefully watched by perhaps 15 or 20 men, most of them employed about the wharfboat. No leak formed and it is believed that the danger is passed, although the river is 55 feet 10 inches, and rising steadily at two inches an hour.

The levee will stand a stage of 65 to 68 feet. After that the floodgates must be opened and the town left to the river's mercy. Experienced men here say that the river will reach only 61 feet.

A break in the levee would mean that the waters would rush into the houses of at least 3,000 people out of the city's 5,500. The water is now in the second stories of houses which stand outside the levee.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 25.—The Ohio is rising two inches an hour. At 2 o'clock it had registered 26 feet 8 inches, two and a half feet above the danger line. The water is already in Fourth street. It has flooded many cellars, but no serious damage has resulted. Rivermen say that they look for two feet more. Damage is being done to farming property nearby.

At 12 o'clock there was 26 feet of water on the falls, two feet over the danger line. The river has reached the opera house and Falls View hotel on Fourth street and the lower portion of Shippinport is under water. It is thought the rise will go to 29 feet. This will flood 150 business houses on lower Second, Third and Fourth streets.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 25.—The worst is over. The great flood tide has begun to recede. The river at 8 o'clock stood 27 feet 10 inches and is falling. The weather is clear and cold and there is not the slightest prospect of an increased stage of water.

Both the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers are falling. The former now is showing a depth of about twenty-nine feet. The absence of heavy ice and driftwood makes the loss to shipping less than it might have been.

Old-Time Minstrel Dead.

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—Charley Callendar, the famous old-time minstrel, died at a lodging house here Wednesday night. He was more than 70 years of age. His "Callendar's Georgia Minstrels" was one of the first troupes put on the stage. About $150 was found in Callendar's possession. He is said to have a wife living somewhere in Connecticut.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 25.—Wm. H. Williams, inspector of police, to whom a ghost appeared Sunday night and warned him of his approaching death, is confined to his bed with a severe case of grip. Pneumonia is threatened. Great alarm is felt by his family.

OPEN SESSION

Of the United States Senate Sunday Afternoon.

The Unusual Occurrence Attracted Large Crowds to the Chamber.

It Was Strictly a Business Session, and Consideration of the Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill Was Resumed—The Last Days of the Session.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—An open session of the United States senate on a Sunday afternoon is such a remarkable and unusual occurrence and so much at variance with the religious sentiment of the country that crowds were attracted to the north wing of the capitol an hour before 3 o'clock in the afternoon, the time to which the senate at half-past 2 in the morning had taken a recess. All classes and conditions of people were in the crowd. Some were on hand early enough to obtain seats in that section of the galleries that is open to the general public. Others who were the holders of tickets to reserved sections presented them and were admitted, so long as any space was left. Those who could get inside stationed themselves near the gallery doors waiting their chances of admission or wandering listlessly up and down the marble staircases and the spacious halls. As to the senators themselves, the day seemed to make no difference to them. They were present in about the usual number, a vote taken soon after the proceedings began showed that there were nearly seventy senators in the hall—some of them being paired. Nor was there any noticeable distinction as to the men representing the New England states and the men representing sections of the country where Sabbath observance is not so general or strict, and business went on just as it does on week days, except that there was a noticeable absence of Cuban agitation.

It was strictly a business session, and consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill was immediately resumed, the question being on those committee amendments which were passed over without action Saturday night. The first of these appropriated $1,085,156 to pay the producers of sugar the balance of their claims for bounty under the McKinley law. On this Mr. Vest (dem., Mo.) demanded the yeas and nays and it was agreed to—37 to 12.

The next amendments were those making appropriations for the great river and harbor improvements under contracts authorized by former river and harbor bills, the various amounts being generally reduced by the committee about 25 per cent from the figures fixed by the house. Eight or nine pages of those amendments were disposed of with little debate but the item appropriating $100,000 to prevent the Mississippi river from breaking into the Cache river near Cairo, Ill., provoked an extended discussion, during which the whole subject of the improvement of the Mississippi river was gone over.

An item in relation to electric lighting in the District of Columbia to which Mr. Hill (dem., N. Y.) was opposed gave that senator an opportunity of expressing his views in relation to a Sunday session of the senate. He had decried the propriety of the senate meeting on Sunday to enact legislation for the people of the United States. His attention had been called to various petitions presented by honorable senators asking for "a rest day" for the District of Columbia, and he had been disposed to acquiesce in the sentiment expressed in these petitions. He also remembered that the senator from Michigan (Mr. McMillan), who had suggested this senate amendment, had introduced a bill to "Protect the first day of the week commonly called Sunday, as a day of rest and worship in the District of Columbia." That bill, if it had passed, was broad enough to prevent any legislation on this day. For those reasons he hesitated to engage in a general debate. "But now, to be serious," he continued.

"Have you not been serious all the time?" a senator asked in low tones.

"That is a reflection on the remarks which I have made," Mr. Hill replied; and then he went on with his statement.

The amendment was adopted.

The last week of the Fifty-fourth congress finds the senate with the great appropriation bills in a more backward state than for several years. Six of the annual appropriation budgets have become laws with the approval of the president. The Indian bill and the post office bill, the latter of which was passed at an early hour Sunday morning, are in conference, three are now before the senate the fortifications, District of Columbia, the sundry civil and naval bills. The sundry civil bill was under discussion Sunday afternoon. This and the naval and district bills promise to be prolific in debate, so that the senate will be compelled to give closer attention to its work during the few remaining days than it has up to this time. The general deficiency bill will be reported from committee Monday. If the debate is prolonged, as some senators appear to be content to have it, there will be good grounds for the belief that at least two of the bills may fail altogether.

Marines in the Inaugural Parade.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Col. Haywood, commanding the marine corps, has ordered a battalion from Brooklyn, another from Norfolk, and is making up another from League Island and Annapolis to take part in the inaugural parade. With the 500 sailors ordered here from Adm. Bunce's squadron the naval contingent will consist of 1,000, headed by the Marine band, which had been chosen to lead the entire parade, but has now been brought back to its proper position through Col. Haywood's protest. The Governor's Island band was ordered to Washington and it will lead the procession.

ALTGELD'S CHARGES.

Insists That McKinley Was Elected by Fraud.

In a Letter to Judge Orin N. Carter the ex-Governor of Illinois Gives Some Significant Facts and Figures.

John P. Altgeld has written a reply to Judge Orrin N. Carter, who questioned the truth of the former governor's statements and allegations of fraud in the November election. When the democrats gave a reception to Mr. Altgeld at the Tremont house after his retirement from the gubernatorial chair the former governor made a speech in which he charged that employes had been coerced and that frauds had been perpetrated to swell the list of voters for the republican party.

Judge Carter replied to this speech and showed errors in the former governor's computation of the votes in different states, particularly in Illinois. The judge asked Mr. Altgeld for facts to support the charges of fraud. In response to the open letter of Judge Carter Mr. Altgeld has written an open letter giving details in support of his speech at the Tremont house.

The former governor begins his letter by acknowledging the receipt of Judge Carter's letter, written January 28. He writes to the judge: "You take exception to some remarks I recently made at the Tremont house in reference to the late election. Especially do you object to the charge of fraud and you ask for facts."

In order to have a clear understanding of the subject the former governor recites the points raised in his speech.

Charges Again Summed Up.

He says he charged that the republican convention at St. Louis was controlled by trusts and professional lobbyists; that the republican party had in nearly all its prior platforms insisted on the restoration of silver; that the campaign was the most stupendous exhibition of pharisceism ever witnessed; that during the campaign there was a perfect combination between the money power, the trusts and the corporations; that these controlled the press; that they practiced varied forms of deception, corruption and terrorism for the purpose of carrying the election, and did it in the name of patriotism; that a confidence game had been practiced on the American people, and that the promises of prosperity under a gold standard were utterly illogical and impossible of performance.

Regarding the votes cast Mr. Altgeld maintained that the election returns showed the negroes, purchasable votes, the very ignorant foreign-born voters, the repeating fraudulent and illegal voters had supported Maj. McKinley; that the majority of American-born white voters supported William J. Bryan; that, even on the face of the returns, Mr. Bryan was so nearly elected that about 36,000 more votes, properly distributed, would have made him president; that after the election there had been developed evidence of gigantic and wholesale frauds to carry elections, and that in numerous states the fraud had been many more votes returned than there were male inhabitants over 21 years old in those states; that if the election returns were right then Illinois must have gained nearly 1,100,000 population in four years.

Illinois' Increased Vote.

"You ask me to be specific," writes Mr. Altgeld. In being specific the former governor tells of the growth of the republican machine in Cook county, and tells how it began to get in its own men in the primaries, conventions and offices. Mr. Altgeld says he does not accuse anyone, but points out to Judge Carter that there was plenty of opportunity to commit fraud if necessary for victory. Then he delves into figures regarding the increase of the vote in Illinois.

Continuing, Mr. Altgeld says:

"I have pointed out that if the average of increase in republican votes for state from 1892 to 1896 had been the same as in some former years when it was large, then the total increase for the state would have been 238,322 for the four years, and the increase in the vote would have been about 60,000. In view of what the school census shows for Chicago, this is clearly too large a number. However, in order to be more than safe, we will take this sum. But the vote returned in Illinois in 1896, according to latest figures, is 607,223 greater than in 1892—that is, after making an excessive allowance for increase of population and admitting an increase of 60,000, there are still 157,223 votes which do not seem to belong to Illinois. If they do belong here, then Illinois increased her population 1,086,115 in four years.

"You practically admit that this is preposterous, but you attempt to explain this startling phenomenon by claiming that owing to the excitement in the last campaign many men voted who had failed to vote at prior elections. In other words, that in 1892 there were over 157,223 legal voters in this state who did not vote that year, but who did vote in 1896. That would make an average of 22½ men for every precinct in the state.

The Voters of 1892.

"Let us examine this point a moment. For a number of years prior to 1896 each great political party during a campaign made not only one, but two or three polling lists, giving the name and address of every male inhabitant over 21 years of age in every precinct in the state, and giving full information in regard to him. In this way every man was looked after carefully by one or the other of the political parties, and sometimes by both. This was especially the case in 1892 at the presidential election, when both parties were reasonably well supplied with money with which to hire men to look after these matters. So thorough was this work that in many precincts over the state every legal vote was cast. Taking the state as a whole it is doubtful whether there were, on an average, five legal voters in a precinct who did not vote.

"As there are nearly 9,000 precincts in the state this would make less than 15,000 votes, and nearly all of these were cases in which the voter was either sick or necessarily absent from home. And you must bear in mind that the number of sick or necessarily absent would be greater in 1896 than in 1892, because the population is assumed to have been greater.

"A careful consideration of all the facts leaves it doubtful whether there were, in the whole state, 5,000 legal voters who were not sick and not necessarily absent, who in spite of all the solicitation of their neighbors and friends refused to vote in 1892, and did vote in 1896."

Bets on the Polls Set Forth.

In explaining these 157,223 votes the former governor claims votes were bought, illegal voters were imported and money used brazenly. In Clay county, he says, prominent republicans offered money to induce democrats to stay away from the polls. Two of the ringleaders were arrested. In Lawrence county, he says, an effort was made to buy up the judges of election, and in the township of Lukin arrangements had been made to pay them $500. Arrests followed and two prominent republicans were held to the grand jury.

In Springfield, the former governor says, 182 men were allowed to vote although they were not registered. He says votes were counted in Springfield for one man when they were cast for another. He explains that the men concerned in these frauds were not prosecuted because all the officials were republicans. He says that in some precincts in the state the "endless chain method" of fraud was practiced by the republicans.

"You ask whether I mean to insinuate there was fraud committed in Chicago," continues the governor, who adds:

"I answer I do not care to make insinuations. I say positively that I am satisfied there were frauds committed in Chicago. We have already seen there was a reported increase of 108,000 votes in Chicago between 1892 and 1896, during which time there were no material additions made to the city. We have also seen that, according to the school census of Chicago and to other data bearing upon this question, the natural and normal increase of voters in Chicago during these four years would hardly have reached 36,000. Deducting this 36,000 from the 108,000, it leaves 72,000 votes returned in Chicago last fall which cannot be explained."

Accusations Summed Up.

In concluding his long letter Mr. Altgeld says:

"1. That in those precincts where the greatest republican gains were made and in those precincts where there was an astonishing increase in the vote, the republicans absolutely controlled the whole machinery—not only the election machinery, but the prosecuting machinery.

"2. That there appears to have been a system in the method of perpetrating frauds, as there were at least five distinct methods practiced in different sections of the state.

"3. That out of 217,000 increased vote in our state in 1896 over that of 1892, only about 60,000 were legitimate and legal, and that over 154,000 have not been explained, and can neither be explained nor located. As this letter is already much too long, I will only glance at a few of the other states.

"In Ohio the vote returned in 1896 was nearly 250,000 more than that returned in 1892, indicating an increase in the population of about 1,000,000 people in four years; whereas, prior to that time it had taken the state three-quarters of a century to gain 4,000,000. Manifestly there is something wrong here. Several things at once become apparent on examination.

Claims Concerning Ohio.

"1. That in the agricultural sections of the state and in those cities where there is not a large ignorant vote the increase in population was only the normal increase, and the democrats made great gains.

"2. That the republican gains and abnormal increase in vote was reported from those precincts and counties in which the republicans had the entire machinery in their hands.

"3. That the great republican gains and abnormal increase in the vote were along the Ohio river and in those manufacturing and other centers where there was a large colored and ignorant foreign population. Examination of the facts forces the conclusion that Bryan carried Ohio by over 40,000 votes.

"A similar state of affairs exists in Indiana, Kentucky and in California—in fact, in every state that Mr. Hanna made a strong effort to carry. Wherever you find a state overwhelmed with wealth, where there is an enormous increase in the vote, you will find that Mr. Hanna's agents were operating there. In all of the remainder of the states of the union the legitimate increase in the vote of that state went to Mr. Bryan.

"Mr. Cleveland carried Indiana by 7,000, Mr. Bryan received 43,000 more votes than Mr. Cleveland did. In Kentucky Mr. Cleveland received a plurality of 40,000. Mr. Bryan received 42,000 more votes than Mr. Cleveland did, and yet it is claimed he lost the state. The more the matter is examined the more glaring the frauds appear. I am informed by people living in the south that it has recently developed that during the campaign thousands of negroes were taken from different places of the south and distributed in Kentucky, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

"Corruption and vulgar pomp go together, and the barbaric display to take place March 4 will be a fitting finale to this whole business.

"I know Mr. McKinley will be seated, and so great is the suffering of our people and so pressing the cry for relief that I not only hope that his administration will be a success, but I most fervently hope that he may be able to deliver the good times and the prosperity that were promised. No matter how I might otherwise feel about it, when a great nation is in distress and crying for relief no political jealousy can be tolerated for a moment. On the other hand, if our institutions are to endure, then steps must be taken to make it impossible to repeat the work of last fall. If corruption and control of the electoral vote of America, then the flag has been robbed of its glory, the doom of the toiler is sealed and the future generations will simply be born into sorrow."

FIFTY-FOURTH CONGRESS

Second Session.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—SENATE—Saturday Mr. Quay sought to bring forward the bill for a commission to look into labor problems, but it was soon displaced by a vote of 34 to 26, to take up the Indian appropriation bill. The latter measure led to two animated discussions, first on silver and then on sectarian schools. The debate on this item and on the bill was not concluded when the senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—The house spent the day in a discussion of the general deficiency bill, which was not finished. There was a warm debate over an amendment by Mr. Hopkins (rep., Ill.) to take out the item of $10,000 to pay the members of the Fifty-third congress the amounts withheld from their salaries for absences in accordance with a rule adopted by that congress.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—SENATE.—The usual senatorial observance of Washington's birthday by having his farewell address read by one of the leading elocutionists of the senate took place Monday in the presence of a large audience. Mr. Daniel (dem., Va.) being the reader chosen for the occasion. The remainder of the day was occupied in the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill, which was not concluded at the time of adjournment.

HOUSE.—Mr. Boutelle, the chairman of the naval committee, succeeded in getting up the naval appropriation bill before adjournment, and after he had explained its principal provisions, considerable progress in its reading was made before the end of the day's session, which came at 5:30 o'clock. No exercises in celebration of Washington's birthday took place in the house.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—SENATE.—In the senate Tuesday, a resolution was offered by Mr. Mills (dem., Tex.) and was agreed to requesting the president to furnish a statement of the facts concerning the arrest, imprisonment and death of Dr. Ricardo Ruiz in a Cuban jail. Practically the entire day was consumed in the examination of amendments to the Indian appropriation bill for the opening to settlement of the Uncompahgre Indian reservation in Utah, containing over 2,000,000 acres.

HOUSE.—Senate bills were passed granting a pension to the widow of the late Gen. Thos. L. Casey, corps of engineers, with an amendment reducing the amount from $75 to $50 per month, also authorizing the Montgomery, Hayneville and Camden Railway Co. to build a bridge across the Alabama river, between Lower Peach Tree and Myrtle Bluff. The house Monday afternoon ran unexpectedly into an interesting and possibly significant discussion of the civil service law. It came out by the consideration of a bill to amend the statutes so as to give the governors of territories the power to remove as well as to appoint certain territorial officers.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—SENATE.—The proceedings in the senate Wednesday were full of interest from the opening to the close. No less than three propositions were made in relation to Cuba—one by Senator Allen (pop., Neb.), one by Senator Hill and one by Senator Morgan, as the unanimous report of the committee on foreign relations. It is in the form of a joint resolution demanding immediate and unconditional release of José Sanguilly, and compensation from Spain for his imprisonment and sufferings. Mr. Morgan gave notice, and was backed by the chairman of the committee, Mr. Cameron, and Mr. Sherman, that action on the relations would be asked Thursday. The Indian appropriation bill was taken up and two or three of the committee amendments to it provoked long and rather angry discussion.

HOUSE.—The appearance of William Jennings Bryan, the democratic candidate for president last fall, upon the floor of the house was the most noticeable event of Wednesday's session. He has the entree of the floor as an ex-member and came into the hall at 4:30 o'clock, about an hour after his arrival in the city. His appearance evoked applause from many members, a few of whom gave vocal expression to their pleasure. From his old seat he responded to the greetings of his friends and acquaintances, his face beaming with smiles.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—SENATE.—With an apparent disregard of whether the appropriation bills still unacted on by the senate are to be passed or not, where there is an enormous increase in the vote, you will find that Mr. Hanna's agents were operating there. In all of the remainder of the states of the union the legitimate increase in the vote of that state went to Mr. Bryan.

Mr. Cleveland carried Indiana by 7,000, Mr. Bryan received 43,000 more votes than Mr. Cleveland did. In Kentucky Mr. Cleveland received a plurality of 40,000. Clemency for Convicts

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Frank Capel, convicted in the Indian territory of murder in July, 1889, whose sentence to death was commuted to imprisonment for life, has secured a further commutation to ten years' actual imprisonment. Capel is confined in the Ohio penitentiary. The sentence of seven years in the eastern state penitentiary of Pennsylvania imposed August 20, 1895, on Thomas W. Grady, for embezzling the funds of a national bank, has been commuted to three years' actual imprisonment. Denial of clemency has been made in the case of Frederick W. Griffin, Illinois, for embezzlement.

Mr. Frank Russell is shipping a good many sugar and oak logs from here.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Castleman's little son is still very ill, but Mrs. Rich and Rev. Lentz are improving.

Bids for the improvement of our streets will be opened on Monday evening. Plans have been made and bids are in for a handsome new hotel on the old Bogan corner opposite C. W. Myers' new store. There has been some delay in the awarding of the contract, as there is to be some alteration in the plan. Mr. Kroger has also let the contract for a pool room and summer garden at his place.

Mrs. Price and Miss Frances Carpenter will leave about the 15th of March on a visit to Chicago, Miss Carpenter's home. The most of us will feel the loss of Miss Carpenter's genial company and we expect one at least of our young gentlemen will find the days and evenings dull, indeed, unless the visit of his friend, Mr. Charles Souther, shall in some measure relieve the monotony of the weary days of waiting for Miss Frances' return.

Feb'y. 23.—Last Thursday evening Wm. Phillipps shipped 18 hogs to market, averaging 260 lbs; Waller Ryle shipped 2 averaging 210 lbs.; Murray Ryle had one to ship weighing 290 lbs., but the deck hands on the Str. Workum let it get in the river and it is supposed it drowned, as it has not been heard of since.

There are prospects of another wedding or two in the neighborhood in the spring.

Last Friday evening Whit Ryle and wife gave the young folks a party which was enjoyed by all present. There were about forty in attendance.

James A. Wilson has about recovered from his late sickness and was at the store two or three days this week. He and his wife attended the Stephens-Kelly wedding.

Married, on the 18th inst., at 6 o'clock p. m., at the residence of the bride's father, Z. T. Kelly, Mr. Jos. L. Stephens and Miss Ila Kelly, Rev. Sam Adams officiating. After the ceremony the guests were invited to partake of a splendid supper. There were about 60 persons present.

Last Friday was the last day of Miss Lottie Burnett's school. All the pupils acquitted themselves with credit to themselves and their teacher. The afternoon was devoted to speeches and dialogues by the following scholars: Walter Hager, Hetha Ryle, Kenneth Ryle, Ella Craig, Clifford Ryle, Edith Hager, Victor Bailey, Myra M. Craig, Clarence Ryle, Clyde Hoppins, Grace Hoppins, Mabel Ryle, Kate Stephens, Ida Hodges, James Hager, John Craig, Ella Hoppins, Bennie Stephens, William Hoppins, Bertie Ryle, Bertha Hager, Robert, Chas. and Lewis Craig.

"Five loug month have passed away since we met here in September. When we first met the trees were robed in their scarlet and green, but those bright colors have faded and gone. Day after day we have met here in sweet accord, the days have glided into weeks, the weeks into months and the time has passed swiftly to us—we scarcely know how. Our teacher has been patient and loving, always ready to help us in our troubles. But, the time has come when we must part. It may be never to meet again, for some may go to other homes while some of us may be called to another state of existence, even before another school is taught here, but if we never meet here again as teacher and scholars, may the memory of the bright past linger around our hearts as long as the blessings of life is ours, and may we hope to meet in a fairer and brighter world, where we learn of God and his angels."

Misses Maud Aylor and Lutie Stephens walked to the school house the last day of school and when they started back decided it was too muddy to walk, so they borrowed Will Aylor's horse to ride. The horse getting scared threw both girls off, but they got up laughing and walked in home leading the horse.

The mud roads between Big Bone and Beaver Lick are in an awful condition at present, and much complaint is heard from the candidates for county office. We hope all who are elected will take a direct interest in their improvement.

By the time this reaches the readers of the RECORDER, Wm. McKinley will have been inaugurated and the long looked for and promised prosperity will be an assured reality. We are glad to note this.

It was quite a treat to both old and young to see large skiffs "loadened" with corn, ply their noiseless way up the backwater of Big Bone creek, last Friday, to get their grist at A. L. Miller' corn mill. Many remarked it would be easier to make Big Bone creek navigable to the Springs than it is the Kentucky river to High Bridge Al. should get us an appropriation immediately for the improvement of Big Bone creek.

A number of our citizens visited Burlington, last Monday, to attend County Court, and take a look at our county candidates in review. We have a goodly number of them and they are all nice gentlemen and good workers in the much abused good old cause of Democracy.

There are several weddings "on tap" at this place promised for an early date. The RECORDER will be duly informed as they take place.

WINGS OF SERAPHIM.

Man's Physical Fabric a Divine and Glorious Machinery

That Sometimes Wanders Into Paths of Worldliness—Wings of Humility Often Needed to Cover the Feet—A Practical Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage.

The subject of Dr. Talmage's sermon Sunday was "Wings of Seraphim," and the text is Isaiah vi., 2: "With twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain did he fly."

In a hospital of leprosy good King Uzziah had died, and the whole land was shadowed with solemnity, and theological and prophetic Isaiah was thinking about religious things, as one is apt to do in times of great national bereavement, and forgetting the presence of his wife and two sons, who made up his family, he has a dream, not like the dreams of ordinary character, which generally comes from indigestion, but a vision most instructive, and under the touch of the hand of the Almighty.

The place, the ancient temple; building grand, awful, majestic. Within that temple a throne higher and grander than that occupied by any czar or sultan or emperor. On that throne, the eternal Christ. In lines surrounding that throne, the brightest celestials, not the cherubim, but higher than they, the most exquisite and radiant of the heavenly inhabitants; the seraphim. They are called burners because they look like fire. Lips of fire, eyes of fire, feet of fire. In addition to the features and the limbs which suggest a human being, there are pinions which suggest the lithest, the swiftest, the most buoyant and the most aspiring of all intelligent creation—a bird. Each seraph had six wings, each two of the wings for a different purpose. Isaiah's dream quivers and flashes with these pinions. Now folded, now spread, now beaten in locomotion. "With twain he covered his feet, with twain he covered his face, and with twain he did fly."

The probability is that these wings were not all used up at once. The seraph standing there near the throne overwhelmed at the insignificance of the paths his feet had trodden as compared with the paths trodden by the feet of God, and with the lameness of his locomotion amounting almost to decrepitude as compared with the divine velocity, with feathery veil of angelic modesty hides the feet. "With twain He did cover his feet."

Standing there overpowered by the overmatching splendors of God's glory, and unable longer with the eyes to look upon them, and wishing those eyes shaded from the insufferable glory, the pinions gather over the countenance. "With twain he did cover his face." Then as God tells the seraph to go to the farthest outpost of immensity on message of light and love and joy, and get back before the first anthem, it does not take the seraph a great while to spread himself upon the air with unimagined celerity, one stroke of the wing equal to 10,000 leagues of air. "With twain he did fly."

The most practical and useful lesson for you and me—when we see the seraph spreading his wings over his feet, is the lessen of humility at imperfection. The brightest angels of God are so far beneath God that he charges them with folly. The seraph so far beneath God, and we so far beneath the seraph in service we ought to be plunged into humility, utter and complete. Our feet, how laggard they have been in the divine service. Our feet, how many missteps they have taken. Our feet, in how many paths of worldliness and folly they have walked.

Neither God nor seraph intended to put any dishonor upon that which is one of the masterpieces of Almighty God—the human foot. Physiologists and anatomists are overwhelmed at the wonders of its organization. The Bridgewater Treatise, written by Sir Charles Bell, on the wisdom and goodness of God as illustrated in the human hand, was a result of the $40,000 bequeathed in the last will and testament of the earl of Bridgewater for the encouragement of Christian literature. The world could afford to forgive his eccentricities, though he had two dogs seated at his table, and though he put six dogs alone in an equipage drawn by four horses and attended by two footmen. With his large bequest inducing Sir Charles Bell to write so valuable a book on the wisdom of God in the structure of the human hand, the world could afford to forgive his oddities. And the world could now afford to have another earl of Bridgewater, however idiosyncratic, if it would induce some other Sir Charles Bell to write a book on the wisdom and goodness of God in the construction of the human foot. The articulation of its bones, the lubrication of its joints, the gracefulness of its lines, the ingenuity of its cartilages, the delicacy of its veins, the rapidity of its muscular contraction, the sensitiveness of its nerves.

I sound the praises of the human foot. With that we halt or climb or march. It is the foundation of the physical fabric. It is the base of a God-poised column. With it the warrior braces himself for battle. With it the orator plants himself for eulogium. With it the toiler reaches his work. With it the outraged stamps his indignation. Its loss an irreparable disaster. Its health an invaluable equipment. If you want to know its value, ask the man whose foot paralysis hath shrivelled, or machinery hath crushed, or surgeon's knife had amputated. The Bible honors it. Especial care: "Lest thou dash thy foot against a stone;" "he will not suffer thy foot to be moved;" "thy feet shall not stumble." Especial charge: "Keep thy foot when thou goest to the house of God." Especial peril: Their feet shall slide in due time." Connected with the world's dissolution: "He shall set one foot on the sea and the other on the earth."

Give me the history of your foot, and I will give you the history of your lifetime. Tell me up what steps it hath gone, down what declivities, and in what roads and in what directions, and I will know more about you than I want to know. None of us could endure the scrutiny. Our feet not always in paths of God. Sometimes in paths of worldliness. Our feet, a divine and glorious machinery for usefulness and work, so often making missteps, so often going in the wrong direction. God knowing every step, the patriarch saying: "Thou settest a print on the heels of my feet." Crimes of the hand, crime, of the tongue, crimes of the eye, crimes of the ear not worse than the crimes of the foot. Oh, we want the wings of humility to cover the feet. Ought we not go into self-abnegation before the all-searching, all-scrutinizing, all-trying eye of God? The seraphs do. How much more we? "With twain he covered the feet."

All this talk about the dignity of human nature is braggadocio and sin. Our nature started at the hand of God regal, but it has been pauperized. There is a well in Belgium which once had very pure water, and it was stoutly masoned with stone and brick; but that well afterward became the center of the battle of Waterloo. At the opening of the battle the soldiers with their sabers compelled the gardener, Wm. Von Kylsom, to draw water out of the well for them, and it was very pure water. But the battle raged, and three hundred dead and half dead were flung into the well for quick and easy burial; so that the well of refreshment became the well of death, and long after people looked down into the well and they say the bleached skulls but no water. So the human soul was a well of good, but the armies of sin have ought across it and been slain, and it has become a well of skeletons. Dead hopes, dead resolutions, dead opportunities, dead ambitions. An abandoned well unless Christ shall reopen and purify and fill it as the well of Belgium never was. Unclean, unclean.

Another seraphic posture in the text: "With twain he covered the face." That means reverence Godward. Never so much irreverence abroad in the world as to-day. You see it in the defaced statuary, in the cutting out of figures from fine paintings, in the chipping of monuments for a memento, in the fact that a military guard must stand at the graves of Lincoln and Garfield, and that old shade trees must be cut down for firewood, though Washington, Irving and Bryant rise to beg the woodsman to spare the tree, and that calls a corpse a cadaver. And that speaks of the death as going over to the majority, and substitutes for the reverent terms father and mother, "the old man," and "the old woman," and finding nothing impressive in the ruins of Baalbec or the columns of Karnac, and sees no difference in the Sabbath from other days except it allows more dissipation, and reads the Bible in what is called higher criticism, making it not the word of God, but a book with some things in it. Irreverence never so much abroad. How many take the name of God in vain, how many trival things said about the Almighty. Not willing to have God in the world, they roll up an idea of sentimentality and humanitarianism and impuence and imbecility, and call it God. No wings of reverence over the face, no taking off of shoes on holy ground. You can tell from the way they talk they could have made a better world than this, and that the God of the Bible shocks every sense of propriety. They talk of the love of God in a way that shows you they believe it does not make any difference how bad a man is here, he will come in at the shining gate. They talk of the love of God in a way which shows you they think it is a general jail delivery for all the abandoned and the scoundrelly of the universe. No punishment hereafter for any wrong done here.

The Bible gives two descriptions of God, and they are just opposite, and they are both true. In one place the Bible says God is love. In another place the Bible says God is a consuming fire. The explanation is as plain as plain can be. God through Christ is love. God out of Christ is fire. To win the one and to escape the other we have only to throw ourselves body, mind and soul into Christ's keeping. "No," says irreverence, "I want no atonement, I want no pardon, I want no intervention, I will go up and face God, and I will challenge him, and I will defy him, and I will ask him what he wants so do with me." So the finite confronts the infinite, so a tack hammer tries to break a thunderbolt, so the breath of the human nostrils defies the everlasting God, while the hierarch of Heaven bow the head and bend the knee as the King's chariot goes by, and the archangel turns away because he can not endure the splendor, and the chorus of all the empires of Heaven comes in with full diapason, "Holy, holy, holy!"

Reverence for sham, reverence for the old merely because it is old, reverence for stupidity however learned, reverence for incapacity however finely inaugurated, I have none. But we want more reverence for God, more reverence for the Bible, more reverence for the pure, more reverence for the good. Reverence a characteristic of all great natures. You hear it in the roll of the master oratories. You see it in the Raphaels and Titians and Ghirlandajos. You study it in the architecture of the Abolinbs and Christopher Wrens. Do not be flippant about God. Do not joke about death. Do not make fun of the Bible. Do not deride the Eternal. The brightest and mightiest seraph can not look unabashed upon Him. Involuntarily the wings come up. "With twain he covered his face."

Who is this God before whom the arrogant and intractable refuse reverence? There was an engineer by the name of Strasicrates who was in the employ of Alexander the Great, and he offered to hew a mountain in the shape of his master, the emperor, the enormous figure to hold in his left hand a city of ten thousand inhabitants, while with his right hand it was to hold a basin large enough to collect all the mountain torrents. Alexander applauded him for his ingenuity, but forbade the enterprise because of its costliness. Yet I hate to tell you that our King holds in one hand all the cities of the earth, and all the oceans, while he has the stars of heaven for his tiara.

Earthly power goes from hand to hand, from Henry I. to Henry II. and Henry III., from Charles I. to Charles II., from Louis I. to Louis II. and Louis III., but from everlasting to everlasting is God. God the first, God the last. God the only. He has one telescope with which He sees everything: His omniscience. He has one bridge with which he crosses everything: His omnipresence. He has one hammer with which he builds everything: His omnipotence. Put two tablespoonfuls of water in the palm of your hand and it will overflow; but Isaiah indicates that God puts the Atlantic and the Pacific and the Arctic and the Antarctic and the Mediterranean and the Black sea and all the waters of the earth in the hollow of his hand. The fingers the beach on one side, the wrist the beach on the other. "He holdeth the water in the hollow of his hand."

As you take a pinch of salt or powder between your thumb and two fingers, so Isaiah indicates God takes up the earth. He measures the dust of the earth, the original there indicating that God takes all the dust of all the continents between the thumb and two fingers. You wrap around your hand a blue ribbon five times, ten times. You say it is five hand breadths, or it is ten hand-breadths. So indicates the prophet God winds the blue ribbon of the sky around his hand. "He meteth out the heavens with a span." You known that balances are made of a beam suspended in the middle with two basins at the extremity of equni heft. In that way what vast heft has been weighed. But what are the balances of earthly manipulation compared with the balances that Isaiah saw suspended when he saw God putting the Alps and the Appenines and Mt. Washington and the Sierra Nevadas. You see the earth had to be ballasted. It would not do to have too much weight in Europe, or too much weight in Asia, or too much weight in Africa, on in America; so when God made the mountains He weighed them. The Bible distinctly says that God knows the weight of the great ranges that cross the continents, the tons; the pounds avoirdupois, the ounces, the grains, the milliegrammes—just how much they weighed then, just how much they weigh now. "He weighed the mountains in scales and the hills in a balance." Oh! what a God to run against, oh! what a God to dishonor, oh! what a God to defy! The brightest, the mightiest angel takes no familiarity with God. The wings of reverence are lifted. "With twain he covered the face."

Another seraphic posture in the text. The seraph must not always sit and be still. He must move, and it must be without clumsiness. There must be celerity and beauty in the movement. "With twain he did fly." Correction, exhilaration. Correction at our slow gait, for we only excel in the service when we ought to fly at the divine bidding. Exhilaration in the fact that the soul has wings as the seraphs have wings. What is a wing? An instrument of locomotion. They may not be like sarah's wing, they may not be like bird's wing, but the soul has wings. God says so. "He shall mount up on wings as eagles." We are made in the divine image, and God has wings. The Bible says so. "Healing in His wings." "Under whose wings hast thou come to trust." The soul with folded wing now, wounded wing, broken, bleeding wing, caged wing. Aye! I have it now. Caged within bars of bone and under curtains of flesh, but one day to be free. I hear the rustle of pinions in Seagrave's poem, which we sometimes sing:

Rise, my soul, and stretch thy w ngs

I hear the rustle of pinions in Alexander Pope's stanza, where he says:

I mount. I fly.
Oh, Death, where is thy victory.

A dying Christian not long ago cried out, "Wings, wings, wings!" The air is full of them, coming and going, coming and going. You have seen how the dull, sluggish chrysalis becomes the bright butterfly, the dull and the stupid and the lethargic turned into the alert and beautiful. Well, my friends, in this world we are in the chrysalid state. Death will unfurl the wings. Oh, if we could only realize what a grand thing it will be to get rid of this old clod of the body and mount the heavens, neither seagull nor lark nor albatross nor falcon, nor condor pitching from highest range of Andes so buoyant or so majestic of stroke.

See that eagle in the mountain nest. It looks so sick, so ragged-feathered, so worn out and so half asleep. Is that eagle dying? No. The ornithologist will tell you it is the moulting season with that bird. Not dying, but moulting. You see that Christian sick and weary and worn-out and seeming about to expire on what is called his death bed. The world says he is dying. I say it is the moulting season for his soul—the body dropping away, the celestial pinions coming on. Not dying, but moulting. Moulting out of darkness and sin and struggle into glory and into God. Why do you not shout? Why do you sit shivering at the thought of death and trying to hold back and wishing you could stay here forever, and speak of departure as though the subject were filled with skeletons and the varnish of coffins, and as though you preferred lame foot to swift wing?

O people of God, let us stop playing the fool and prepare for a raptnrous flight. When your soul stands on the verge of this life, and there are vast precipices beneath, and sapphired domes above, which way will you fly? Will you swoop or will you soar?

A STRIKING PROTEST.

An Effective Objection to the McKinley Law.

One of the most effective protests ever made against the high tariff system is incorporated in a paper filed with the ways and means committee by J. C. Harrah, president of the Midvale Steel company, of Philadelphia. This company presented to the committee a request that no change be made in the present schedules of the tariff relating to metals, or the materials, either raw or in a partly made state, that are used in the manufacture of metals. The request was sustained by some very cogent arguments.

Mr. Harrah began by premising that the committee had two objects in view; first, to obtain sufficient revenue for the requirements of the government wisely and economically administered; and, second, to alleviate the burden of the cost of living to those who are least able to bear the load, because of insufficient means of subsistence. The president of the Midvale company then pointed out that any increase in the rate of duty on articles imported into this country would necessarily diminish the market for such articles and at the same time increase the cost of living. An increase of tariff rates would therefore defeat the very objects which the committee were professing to seek, while those objects would be promptly and efficaciously realized by the diminution of existing duties. In respect to protection to the laborer by higher tariff rates, Mr. Harrah said:

"While this additional tax might to a small extent increase the business of the manufacturer, any profit coming to him in this indirect manner must necessarily insure to his sole benefit, because the question of wages is one of supply and demand, and cannot in any way be affected by tariff legislation, and no manufacturer would permit any false sentiment to influence him to pay the laborer one dollar more for wages than the market supply of labor would warrant."

The Midvale company is engaged in the manufacture of steel only, and it does not desire any higher duties on articles competing with its products than now exist. Mr. Harrah gave conclusive reasons for this attitude of his company. The Wilson law reduced the tariff on tires one-half, and yet the base price of tires to-day is four cents per pound, as it was under the McKinley law. Nor has the Wilson law affected the number of tires manufactured in this country to any appreciable extent, as is shown by the facts that the Midvale company is the largest maker of this product in the United States, and that its business has steadily increased from year to year.

Moreover, tariff rates are already so high that domestic manufacturers are exporting their products to foreign countries and selling them at higher prices there than here. The Midvale company makes steel castings and sells them abroad, receiving from 30 to 50 per cent. more in England than it can get in this country. This company is now earnestly engaged in increasing its trade abroad, and its president greatly fears that any increase of duty in the metal schedules by exciting retaliatory measures on the part of foreign nations might have disastrous effect upon this new trade.

No better tariff reform document than this letter has appeared. It should receive a wide circulation. — Illinois State Register.

FAVORITISM OF REPUBLICANS.

Protection Makes the Rich Richer and the Poor Poorer.

The incoming administration is as poor in political wisdom as it is in patriotism. Posing as the advance agent of prosperity, the republicans are doing all they can to earn the reputation of continuers of adversity. The present tinkering of the tariff will do much to injure the party in the coming campaign. There is nothing more business-destroying than the uncertainty which always accompanies tariff revision, and in this instance it will be all the more distasteful to the people because it is well known that the legislation of the extra session is largely, if not entirely, for the purpose of favoring industries already favored too much, and of protecting monopolies that are already sufficiently unpopular.

But McKinley and tariff protection are ever to be linked together, it would seem. It is quite fair to presume that the coming bill will be as unpopular and unjust as was its detested predecessor. Besides, the republican party is pledged to the plutocratic interests, and Hanna, the friend of capital and the uncompromising foe of labor, will dictate a policy that will steadily continue to make the rich richer and the poor poorer.—Tammany Times.

A Tariff for Monopolists.

"It is a great piece of nonsense to attempt to bring about prosperity by enacting a monopoly tariff. Our country does not suffer from a flood of foreign goods nor from competition with foreign manufacturers. Our ruin and bankruptcy are owing to the impoverishment of the agriculturists, brought about by discarding silver as money and putting gold at a premium, and thus piling bounties on our competitors abroad and benefiting the gold oligarchy at home. Our own people have been impoverished and sacrificed and made unable to buy. Hence our manufacturers lost our home market, their great market, and lost prosperity. We must restore silver, abolish monopoly, lighten, not increase, burdens, and so relieve the people and bring back prosperity."—Canton (O.) Democrat.

—It is gratifying to learn from republican sources that the tariff that will be proposed at the coming extra session will be conservative and will not in a single instance favor trusts or monopolies. But the wise man will not take all this for Gospel. We have all heard such statements made before. The inevitable effect of protection is to build up trusts and monopolies.—Peoria Herald.

AGITATING THE TARIFF.

The Protective Game Is Up with the Farmers.

It is to be observed that the republican organs manifest very little cordiality in such support as they are giving the republican tariff programme. Many of them do not touch upon the subject at all. During the past four years numbers of republican papers have protested against the unreasonably high rates that are demanded by those who are in a position to ask for and insist upon receiving the benefits that accrue from republican protection. Those benefits do not apply widely, and it is to be observed that outside that comparatively small circle where protection is helpful there is very little support given to the proposed tariff, and such support as there is is not of the heartiest.

As for the farmers—well, the protection game may be said to be up in the agricultural districts. It has been played so often during a long period that it is sadly the worse for the wear and tear to which it has been subjected. The republicans must shortly realize, if they do not realize already, that the farmer thoroughly understands them and he will not permit himself to be victimized by any of their old and well-worn tricks, at any rate. He may be caught by something new, but he is through with walking into the protection trap. At least this is the way the signs point, as witness a resolution adopted by the Pennsylvania State Grange a couple of months ago, when it declared:

"That we cannot deceive ourselves with the idea that any measure of protection to our industries offered by a tariff on imports can avail in the slightest degree to benefit the grower of these crops of which he produces a surplus for export and whose prices are necessarily made in the world's market where they are and must continue to be disposed of. That while protection countries which are importers of agricultural products may in a measure remedy the evil of low prices by increasing the duties an agricultural imports, it is manifestly impossible for those which produce a surplus for export to give the least particle of relief to the interest of the farmers by a high tariff on these products."

Protection is doubtless still good for generous campaign contributions, and the most must be made of such fruit of it, for it is clearly good for nothing else. When the great agricultural element admits seeing the folly and futility of it, its promoters may well regard it as having had its day. It's a poor thing to offer as an excuse for wholesale and violent disturbance of business at a time when business is so much in need of a rest.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

A LITTLE PLAIN SPEECH.

McKinley Promises Are Not Being Fulfilled.

The chickens of McKinley "promise" are coming home to roost. They are now next door to McKinley himself, in demands for him and Hanna to make good their promises. The press dispatches carry the following from Cleveland, uttered by a prominent republican leader, a relative of Matt Quay, of Pennsylvania. He said:

"If Maj. McKinley and M. A. Hanna will not redeem some of the promises that they made to the workingmen of this country before the election, I am in favor of the republican party, as a party, taking up the matter.

"The entire campaign, which was managed by Hanna, was based on an appeal to the workingmen of this country. They were promised that the mills would open as soon as McKinley was elected. They were promised work. To-day the times are harder than they were before election. One-third more men are out of employment to-day than before McKinley was elected."

This is doubtless a well meaning and an honest man, who made the mistake so many made, of taking any stock in preelection promises. He says that Hanna and McKinley have not kept one promise they made; say it is an outrage to call Millionaire Sherman to the cabinet and put Millionaire Hanna in his place in the senate. He demands that Ohio's governor, Bushnell, will do something that will show that Hanna and McKinley are to blame, and not the G. O. P. The simplicity of this man's faith is astonishing. It is child-like and bland. And yet he represents a class—a large class—kittens they are in republican politics, but they will get their eyes open—in time.—Minneapolis Penny Press.

PRESS COMMENTS.

—Some folks are apparently animated by a desire to make this a government by the trusts, of the trusts and for the trusts.—Cleveland Leader.

—It looks as if the American farmer had outgrown that stage where he could be convinced that a high tariff on agricultural products not imported into this country constituted protection.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

—When the republican thinks his vote is not needed, the colored citizen is a plain "nigger;" if the result is doubtful, he is a "negro;" and if success depends upon his vote, he becomes "a colored gentleman."—Tammany Times.

—American steel rails are selling way below English prices and our manufacturers have even been invading England, but that is no reason for the removal of duties in the new republican tariff bill. The trust will want to reorganize in a few weeks. Then the duty will be necessary to keep up exorbitant prices to the home consumer.—Kansas City Times.

—Americans can manufacture iron more cheaply than Englishmen, while paying much higher wages to labor, but it has been conclusively demonstrated that the best paid labor is the cheapest. England pays better wages than are paid on the continent of Europe, but in spite of that she has been able to maintain her supremacy, because she gets more service for a given amount of money. The same is true of labor in the United States. It is better paid than that of England, but in return it renders better service and is more efficient.—Pittsburgh Times.

WONDERFUL FEAT.

It Is Unparalleled in the History of Deep Sea Diving.

A few more facts about the recovery of the specie from the Alfonso XII., probably the most remarkable deep-sea diving effort on record, are sent to us by Mr. Henry G. R. Maughan, Chairman. The vessel sank off Point Garado, Grand Canary, at about four o'clock in the afternoon of February 14, 1895, in fine weather, having probably struck on Gando rock. She had a valuable cargo and ten boxes each containing 10,000 newly minted Spanish gold (ounce duros) pieces, each of nearly the value of an English sovereign. This specie was stored in a small triangular room or lazarette in the run of the ship—that is, just over the screw and below three decks—and it was subsequently found to be at a depth of 26 2-3 fathoms or 160 feet. The best professional opinion then fixed 25 fathoms as the practicable limit of continuous deep-sea diving. There were three divers—Saunder Lambert, David Tester and Frederick J. Davies. The specie was below three decks, which had to be pierced. The idea of making a hole in the floor of the steamer by an explosive was abandoned, the fear being that the specie might be scattered. Lambert recovered seven boxes, Tester two boxes and Davies none. The diver had to descend into the lazarette and lift the box, weighing nearly two hundred-weight, in his arms on to the deck above, the pressure upon him at the time being about 70 pounds to each square inch of his body.

This is said to be a feat altogether unparalleled in the history of diving, and proves what heroic fellows these divers were. They showed the highest pluck, endurance and tenacity in carrying out the operations. Lambert made 46 dips, being submerged altogether 980 minutes, his longest immersion being 26 minutes, including going down and coming up. Tester made 46 dips, being submerged during 601 minutes, his longest immersion being 29 minutes, Davies made 32 dips and was submerged 293 minutes, his longest immersion being 20 minutes, but he could not get so low down as the lazarette, the pressure being too great for him. Tester had one bad fit. Lambert was for a time paralyzed in his legs. Two subsequent unsuccessful attempts were made by contractors with the underwriters, on the principle of "no cure no pay," to recover the last box. Probably this last £10,000 will never be regained.

The divers were paid good wages and five per cent. on all the gold recovered. In addition to this they were of course boarded and a bonus of £50 was given for each box recovered. Lambert received £4,088, Tester £1,375 and Davies £275. The underwriters' estimate of the cost of the salvage before commencing the operation was 16 per cent. The actual cost was 15.922 per cent. It is possible, though not probable, that slightly deeper depths may be reached in the future, but it is doubtful whether there will ever be a more heroic diving record than that of the Alfonso XII.—London News.

Costumes of the Spreewald.

At a dance the Spreewalder knows instantly, by the peculiarities of her costume, from what village a woman or girl has come. At Leipe the multitudinous skirts of alarming girth are no more, the gown reaches the ankles, and the cap fits close to the head instead of resting on a framework as in Burg. Thus the dress in Leipe is perhaps more graceful, but it is more commonplace; it no longer testifies to that pride of the peasant father or husband which is shown by the number of yards in the skirts of his womanfolk and the variety of their caps, by the richness of their dress as well as their jewelry.—Consul General de Kay, in Century.

Mrs. Jones—Oh, yes, indeed, often.

REWARD OF A WOMAN.

"'Oh, gemini, is this a beau? Let me see him again. Ha! I find a beau is no such ugly thing, neither.'—Sheridan."

The girl leaned both her hands on the little rickety, hand-painted lodging-house table, and looked up with laughter and mock admiration in her eyes at her lover, who came and stood before her. But the man looked down at her in eager pleading.

"Ursula, darling, how can you talk in that way—now?"

"How can I? Why, with a pretty grace, I hope."

"Ursula," cried the man, "don't have that mood! It hurts me. It maddens me to waste our minutes so. Oh, my darling, have you no sentiment in you?"

"Sentiment," she began, lightly; but she stopped suddenly and her word trailed off into a sob. "Bertie—".

"You have thought me unsentimental, matter-of-fact, even hard—yes, just a little bit hard—ever since you first knew me; while you were so—so—otherwise."

He held her tightly to him and waited.

"But"—and it was she who spoke passionately now—"I was only acting, Bertie; only showing you a surface heart. And now—now you are going away, and for so long, I will give up acting. I am sentimental—sillily sentimental, if only you knew. I did not show it—I don't know—I was shy, I suppose. I thought you would not care for it—that you would laugh at me."

"Oh, Ursula, Ursula!" he exclaimed. "I believe you would laugh now if you only knew how ridiculous I am—how much I love you. And now I have broken down—you have made me break down. I can never unsay my confession. I have humbled myself—I have laid bare my heart—"

"Ursula, my own! why did you never confess before? I laugh at you! Oh, my darling, I have hungered to hear you say such words."

The eyes of the girl were love-steeped, and her lashes wet, and she raised her head and looked up at the man.

"All this past year you have made me happier than I ever dared hope to be," she whispered, trembling—"the happiest woman in the whole world, I think."

And the man bent and pressed his lips to hers. "But I want to make you still happier," he said, passionately. "I want to take you from all the care and drudgery, to have you all to myself; to guard you, to cherish you—never to part. Oh, if only I had money! This waiting, waiting is awful; and the hope so small, the reward so slow."

"Am I really small—and slow?" she asked, softly.

He laughed back at her. "Not you, dearest, but the getting on, and the pittance; it all seems so endless. Even now I am holding you only to part from you—to go back to the grind. And worse than all is the knowledge that you are also drudging, and I cannot prevent it."

"As there must be waiting, dear, I am glad of the work to fill my time. And," with a soft blush, "I shall be saving for my trousseau."

"Don't Ursula—don't go hoarding your shillings and denying yourself. Some day I will make my pile, and you shall walk in silk attire; and we'll leave the work, and the trouble, and the care, and go off a-wandering in Italy and Greece and Algiers, and every place we've ever set our hearts on."

The hollow-sounding clock upon the painted marble mantelpiece struck five metallic strokes.

"Five o'clock already! This is awful! For a whole year, or longer. Say it again, Ursula—that you love me."

"I love you, Bertie," she said, slowly, and quite solemnly. "I love you. I think I would die for you quite willingly."

"Darling, darling, for a long year—" He caught her up to him in a passionate embrace, his lips met hers again and again; then he turned quickly, and went to w the door.

"There will be the letters," she said, in a voice which strove to be steady and cheerful, for his white, hopeless face hurt her heart. And then he was gone.

Three hours later the man sat at a cheery little dinner in London, a little farewell meal with a few old college friends. After which he went on board his steamer and walked the deck in the starlight, with a pipe for consolation as he thought of the poor and lonely girl he had left, and longed for money to bring him his desire. And so absorbing were these thoughts that the pipe went out, and still he paced to and fro, unheeding, until at last, his elbow being jogged accidentally, he came back to the near present again, and, taking the cold pipe from his lips, tapped it out on the rail. Then, while the ashes were yet floating down to the waters, he went below to his berth and slept soundly.

And the girl Ursula sewed and sewed all the evening by the light of the cheap oil lamp, and smiled stiffly with her lips, and tried not to depress her mother. And then she went to her room and packed her box to go a-governessing on the morrow. And after awhile she went to bed, and there she lay with wide eyes and watched the moonlight on the window; and her heart felt widowed, hopeless, and would not be cheered.

"Your letters are so friendly, dearest, so abominably friendly; they verily starve my heart. Oh, why am I not rich enough to throw up this drudgery and come home to you and hold you in my arms again, and make you say you love me? I have to go over our parting again and again to make myself believe that all you said then is really true. Write me a real love letter next time, darling, to help me bear up."

The girl's cheeks were flushed and her eyes held happiness as she sat by the schoolroom table, with the piled-up work basket neglected before her, and read the words again and again.

And the days and the weeks and the months and the years passed on, and the pile of love letters which came to the girl grew in bulk. Sometimes they were despondent, sometimes cheerful, sometimes hurried, sometimes tender and sometimes the treasured space was overfull of descriptions of new friends or strange places. But the letters never failed to come, and the man never failed to long for the riches which could bring him to the girl's side and make life happy for them.

And the girl longed and longed that she might meet her lover, if only for a day; that they might look into each other's face, and, renewing hope, might start afresh. Some cynic told her that love was fleeting, a question merely of propinquity; but that cynic had not really meant to bruise the girl's endearing heart. Besides, the cynicism was not always true, for this girl's love was strong as ever—stronger. Why should not the man's be the same? He was better equipped for fighting doubts and fears. But the waiting was bitterly long.

At last, when endurance was becoming a habit, there came a shock—a shock of joy. Just a business matter, just money, just repentance to the amount of five hundred a year out of an erst-while unforgiving uncle. But £500 a year to a little governess, to a waiting lover! It was ecstasy.

The schoolroom was as paradise that morning; the voices of the children as angels' songs. For the waiting, the drudgery, the anxiety were over. Bliss lay within a blue envelope; joy was inscribed in straight lines of copper-plate caligraphy. But the girl uttered no word of happiness; it seemed too wonderful, and she wanted to realize it, and think.

A deed of gift. An anonymous deed of gift—that would be the thing, the girl decided. She would not keep one penny of it back. There seemed something calculating and mercenary in setting aside part for herself; besides, it would be all the same in the end. A deed of gift of £300 a year to Bertie! It was worth all the waiting and the pain and the work. This was her reward.

So the girl carried out her secret plans with a light heart and a happy brow, and the joyful message went across the sea to the man, in the copper-plate caligraphy of the lawyer's clerk; while the girl herself—in the willfulness of near bliss—sent over the sea also just a scrappy little letter, the most matter-of-fact she had ever sent, cheerful and friendly, telling of outside pleasures and daily trifles, of a little picnic in the wood and a village concert—a little letter which would bring back a loving remembrance in the midst of the tale of good fortune, and which would be a joke against her afterward when the happy secret was known to the full. And she smiled as she sealed and sent it on its way. And then she waited.

There were four and twenty days of the waiting, and the girl never forgot them—never quite lived down the strain of the painful joy, the rapturous anguish, as she pictured her lover's pleasure and endured all the minutes which were bound to pass before she would receive a sign.

"What will he say? Will it be wonder? Will it be only happiness? Will it be—himself?"

At last it came—the first sign of her sacrifice. It was a letter, rather short, because written in a hurry by a busy man; and the girl was able to read it in the ten minutes which were hers before morning lessons:

"Dearest Ursula: This letter will be only a scrap, I'm afraid, but I know that you will forgive that, and I will make it up next time. Truth to tell, I am dreadfully pressed for time. I've had a little windfall left me in rather an odd way, and I've accepted it. Some one has taken a fancy to me, I suppose. (You can understand that, can't you?) So I am going off on a good, long tour, to see all the places I've wanted so long to see—Italy, Greece, and I don't know where else. It's jolly to have a little money at last. Rather a large party of us are going—the Gleesons, the mother and daughter I've written about sometimes, and some friends of theirs I know fairly well; so I expect we shall enjoy ourselves. So glad you are having such a good time, my dear. Picnics and concerts are pleasures which seldom come my way. I will write again as soon as I can, but am uncertain when and where we halt. Yours, in haste,

BERTIE."

"A little windfall!" "And I have accepted it!"

The woman's limbs shook and her face became awful as she read. Then she shivered; and then the children came in to lessons.

One more letter crossed the sea from the woman to the man on his wanderings. The word "good-by" was written across a bare sheet of paper, and the man considered that he had been uncivilly treated, and he felt very sorry for himself; but he never looked on the woman's face again.

The silly tale leaked out in time, and the world laughed at the comedy of it. But the woman failed to see the humor, and it was the tragedy which lay at the back of her eyes in all the long years till she died.—The Sketch.

A Legend of Lombardy.

An old Lombard legend tells the story of a chieftain who asked the hand of a neighbor's daughter. Upon its being refused him he declared war, killed the chief who had declined the honor of becoming his father-in-law, and married the girl after all. Not satisfied with this much he had the skull of his wife's father mounted in gold as a drinking-cup, and one day, while under the influence of wine, ordered his spouse to appear before the assembled guests at his house and drink to his health out of the horrible bowl. She did so, but ever afterward was her husband's secret but most deadly enemy. She joined in a conspiracy which eventually resulted in her husband's assassination.—San Francisco Call.

HAS NO FEAR OF SNAKES.

Maryland Man Who Allows the Most Poisonous Reptiles to Bite Him.

The only man in the world who does not fear a snake bite, and upon whom the venom of serpents apparently has no effect, is William F. Witmer, whose home is in Wolfsville, Md. His performances with copperheads, rattlers and vipers are a constant source of wonder and amazement to all who know him, and even to his lifelong friends there is a large element of mystery about the man and his strange power over snakes.

He takes great pride in this respect, and when among strangers it is a favorite form of amusement with him to hunt up some ugly looking specimen of the snake family—the more deadly the better it fits his purpose—and let the reptile sink its venomous fangs in his bare arm or hand.

Recently while on a visit in the mountains of western Pennsylvania, a half dozen spotted vipers were found in a spot under a stone. Rolling up the sleeve of his coat until his arm was bare to the elbow, Witmer proceeded with his other hand to take the largest and ugliest looking viper by the tail, and, shaking him apart from the rest of the snakes, swung him about until he was thoroughly enraged. He then allowed the viper to sink its teeth in his arm.

Then, oneby one, the other vipers were picked up and allowed to seize the arm, until there were a full half dozen of the spotted, writhing things hanging from Witmer's flesh and writhing themselves about the arm in a very frenzy of rage. When the spectators were sufficiently horrified the man took the snakes one by one by the tail, and, shaking them loose from his arm, killed them by snapping them like the lash of a whip.

For the rest of the day no man would have been surprised to see the man drop dead at any moment, but, on the contrary, he seemed among the liveliest of the party. There was no swelling of the arm nor any numbness of the flesh, the only trace of the exhibition being a number of tiny red spots on the arm, which looked like as if a needle had punctured the flesh. Those were the marks of the snakes' fangs.

Witmer himself says of the strange peculiarity which he possesses that it is something inherited from his ancestors, one in each generation back as far as he knows having had this immunity from the poison of venomous reptiles. "I do not try to explain it," said he, "all I know is that I have no fear of snake bites, and although I have been bitten hundreds of times I never felt the slightest ill effects of any of them.

"It is only a pastime for me to hunt and catch the most deadly serpents, and a peculiar feature of it is that once a snake has bitten me I have no difficulty in taming it. In fact, at home I have a number of pet rattlers and copperheads, which know me and will come when I call them, just like a dog. I seem to have the same power over animals, and have yet to meet the first wild animal I cannot tame."—Detroit Free Press.

CRACKERS INITIATE TOURISTS.

They Treat the Yankee Hunter as a Tenderfoot and Show Him a Trick or Two.

The Florida guide for hunters does not regard northerners in a very favorable light, and the hunter who goes among the Crackers has to put up with some things which a hunter in Maine might regard as sufficient justification for shooting the guide. The Cracker initiates a hunter by leading him to places not comfortable to get at. Warren Dean tells about these:

"I went after turkeys on the roost at night, and literally had my clothes and shoes torn off by bamboo briars, not to mention shreds of hide. Next night I walked half the night through a miserable country with a lamp in my hand looking for deer, but finding only cattle and skunks. I dogged my horse clear to the saddle in muck, and slept in mud banks where alligators had been skinned several days before, waiting to be ready for a deer to come in the morning. For four hours I sat silent, watching for a deer where deer never came, but the guide, Alec, wasn't having a much better time than I was. But I had sport enough to make up for it later on, when I was accepted into Crackerdom.

"The Crackers object to perfumery, and Turkey Collier, a curious De Soto county character, told me so after his own fashion. Alec and I met Turkey Collier one day, and they swapped tobacco and stories. Turkey got to leeward of me after a bit; then, without warning, he fetched his stick down on my horse's flank in a way that made the horse jump. I was thrown and got up ready to do things to Turkey Collier, who was treading around in the grass as if looking for something. Alec told me that Turkey Collier had smelled a rattlesnake and was looking for it. Two or three days later, after I'd been thanking Turkey for saving me from the snake, I heard myself addressed as 'Rattlesnake Jack.' I had had some musk perfume on my shirt, and that had roused Turkey Collier to immediate action when he smelled it."—N. Y. Sun.

Held His Ground.

"Move forward, please," said the conductor in the crowded cable car.

"Not on your life," replied the gentleman addressed, taking a fresh grip on the strap.

"But there are gentlemen on the platform who wish to get in," continued the collector of fares.

"Well, they can't have my place. This lady is my wife, and I know this road from start to finish. If anybody is going to sit in her lap this trip, I'm that person. I'm on to this road's curves!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Not to Their Taste.

"You bet there are no flies on me," said the new woman.

"I reckon not," said her husband, with a sudden show of sand. "Those intelligent insects manifest a preference for sweets."—Up-to-Date.

THAT CHRISTMAS CIGAR JOKE.

Dealer Says That Women Buy Their Husbands Good Cigars.

"It is an old standing joke, of course, about the woman who buys cigars for her husband," said a cigar dealer. "They say that she buys them at a bargain, they are vile and that he is unable to smoke them. But after all it is only a joke. There is no more foundation for it than there is for many of the other moss-covered old chestnuts that used to delight our grandfathers. While now and then a woman buys cigars that her husband does not like, usually they show very good judgment in the matter. I know several of my customers whose wives have given them cigars for presents during the holiday season, and I don't think I ever heard any of the men complain. There is no present that man enjoys better, says the Chicago Times-Herald.

"If a woman wishes to give her husband a box of cigars she will make no mistake. There is no present that will be more acceptable, but she should remember that there is a great difference in cigars and that a man gets fond of one particular kind and dislikes most others. Most women know that. So when she wants to give her husband a box of cigars she goes to the cigar store where her husband usually gets his cigars and tells the tobacconist that she is buying them for Mr. So-and-So. The cigar dealer knows the tastes of her husband and will advise her in the matter. Thus, you see, the husband gets a good box of cigars, just the kind that he likes, and another favorite theme of the humorists is shown to have no foundation in fact."

A Wonderful Statement

From Mrs. McGillas to Mrs. Pinkham.

I think it my duty, dear Mrs. Pinkham, to tell you what your wonderful Compound has done for me.

I was dreadfully ill—the doctors said they could cure me but failed to do so.

I gave up in despair and took to my bed. I had dreadful pains in my heart, fainting-spells, sparks before my eyes—and sometimes I would get so blind, I could not see for several minutes.

I could not stand very long without feeling sick and vomiting. I could not breathe a long breath without screaming, my heart pained so.

I also had female weakness, inflammation of ovaries, painful menstruation, displacement of the womb, itching of the external parts, and ulceration of the womb. I have had all these complaints.

The pains I had to stand were something dreadful. My husband told me to try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine, which I did, and after taking it for a while, was cured. No other kind of medicine for me as long as you make Compound. I hope every woman who suffers will take your Compound and be cured.—Mrs. J. S. McGILLAS, 113 Kilburn avenue, Rockford, Ill.

A Magnificent Road.

It is a revelation to most people to know that such railway equipment exists south of the Ohio River as that of the Queen and Crescent Route. The block system; electric equipment, such as track signals, electric headlights, and crossing gongs; together with a perfectly lined, rock-ballasted roadbed, all provide for the swift and safe movement of passenger trains of the most luxurious pattern. The New Orleans and Florida Limited leaves Cincinnati over the Queen and Crescent Route daily, on schedules which each year are made a little shorter, through scenery which is unsurpassed. W. C. The best, the safest, the pleasantest substitute for such hurtful, no-remedies is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, potent for malarial, rheumatic, dyspeptic, nervous and bilious complaints.

Colds and chills are prevalent, and unless the system is strong enough to throw them off, serious illness, often ending in pneumonia and death results.

The Cause Of colds, chills and attendant dangers is found in the blood, poisoned by uric acid, which should be expelled by the kidneys.

The Effect of this kidney-poisoned blood is far-reaching. Health and strength are impossible while it exists. The system is being continually weakened, leaving it open to the ravages of colds, chills, pneumonia and fevers.

The Cure for such a diseased condition is found in

A Boyle county romancer contributes the following to the Danville Advocate: "Several years ago I was out in the knobs hunting squirrels, and late in the afternoon I found my bullets were all used and was on my way out, when I heard some hounds coming my way. I knew Tom Tadlock & Co. were out running foxes. I rammed down a charge of powder and put on top of that an eight-penny nail that I had in my pocket. In a few minutes here came the fox and ran right near me close to a big beech tree. I was ready and fired, the nail struck the tail of the fox and nailed him to the beech tree. I took out my knife and intended to dispatch the creature, which was now plunging, jumping, rearing and trying to get away, but accidentally cut his hide right down between his eyes to his nose. The fox ran right out of his hide and away he went, leaving every hair behind him."

At Elizabethtown court, well fatted mules about 15½ hands high, sold at from $50 to $55. About 250 head have been bought and shipped from there South lately.

At Springfield, Ill., 40 Poland China hogs brought $12,269. One boar, Look Me Over, brought $3,600, the highest price any hog has yet sold for, the highest before being $1,700, for Klevers Model. Anderson's Model brought $1,575, being sold to Geo. W. Null, of Odesse, Mo. This is the highest price ever obtained for a sow.

There are no less than twenty-five cases of German measles in town and new cases are developing every day. There will be fifty cases before the end of the week. They are very light and the patient is seldom confined to his or her room for a longer time than one week.

Judge C. C. Cram informs the Courier that he has definitely decided not to enter the race for Circuit Court Judge. His many friends in Grant and adjacent counties much regret his decision as he would, if nominated and elected, have made a model presiding officer of the highest court in this part of the State.

Rev. B. B. Bailey, of Winchester, who is at present engaged in the protracted meeting at this place, is drawing immense crowds daily. He is not only an earnest speaker but is one of the finest pulpit orators that ever visited Owenton.

Young Chas. Holton, living near Sparta, in Gallatin county, was drowned while crossing Mosby creek, a branch just north of Sparta on the Warsaw pike. He had been calling on some ladies and started home just after the hard rain about 10 o'clock, horse back. It is supposed that he was crossing the branch just at the time an immense freshet reached the pike and his horse was carried from its feet. His family became uneasy and about 2 o'clock a search was instituted. His horse was soon found loose in a field and a short time afterward his dead body was found in the branch.

The reins of Government will be handed over to Mr. McKinley tomorrow.

The public is hereby notified that we have arranged our business matters and adjusted all of our claims with our creditors and raised the assignment. That Wallace Garrison is no longer a member of the firm and has nothing whatever to do with our business, he having sold his entire interest in the business to us. We will run the mill as heretofore and in addition will operate the mill three days in each week on the popular customs grinding plan —charging ¼ toll. At present we will grind on customs plan on Tuesday, Friday and Saturday of each week. We are equipped with the best, latest and most improved machinery and our facilities for making Fancy, High Grade Patent and Family Flours are exceeded by none. We carry a large stock of Flour, Shipstuff, Brand, Feed, &c., and the very best Flint Corn Meal; also the finest Campbell's Creek and Kanawha River Coals.

For the last two years we have operated the mill, under great disadvantages, for the benefit of the farmers of Boone and Gallatin Counties. BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 10, 1897. NO. 20.

THE scramble for office is now on.

THE Republicans are in the saddle.

FROM Beck or Blackburn to Wood is a long step backward.

THE President has called a special session of Congress to convene on the 15th inst. at noon.

GROVER left for a hunting and fishing frolic in South Carolina immediately after President McKinley delivered his inaugural address.

THEY had a boisterous time in the Indiana legislature last week, but Governor Mount did not call out the soldiers to suppress the rioters.

THE inauguration is over, and next comes the prize fight and then follows the Jackson and Walling hanging. This is to be an eventful month.

GROVER can now devote his time to duck hunting, while William racks his brain trying to restore that prosperity about which so much was heard last fall.

SECRETARY SHERMAN and Secretary Gage are not in accord on the proposition of retiring the greenbacks. Gage thinks they should be retired, while Sherman takes a different view of the matter.

GOV. BRADLEY has appointed A. T. Wood, of Mt. Sterling, to the Senatorship. It is strange that the Governor would make such a selection over Holt Wilson, Yerkes and several Republicans of acknowledged ability.

IT is probable that both wings of the Democratic party will flop together at the next election in Louisville. They appear to be willing to harmonize, and the leaders of the two factions are taking steps looking to a united party at the next November election, in which event the Republicans will be relieved of the municipal offices.

THE Republicans flooded the country last Thursday with a "business proclamation," purporting to carry the signatures of a great many firms throughout the country. The draftsman of the proclamation was decidedly guarded in his language, and at no point in the proclamation did he declare that an era of prosperity had come, but only expressed a hope of being extricated from the business stagnation in which the country has languished. Confidence failed and hope only is now left.

SOME one calls attention to the curious fact that a man may be elected vice-President of the United States who could not serve as president in the case of the death of the president. The reason for this is that a vice-President may legally serve as such if 30 years old, while the president must be 35. Had President Buchanan died during the first three years of his term, Vice-President Breckinridge would have been ineligible as his successor on account of being too young.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, the gallant leader of the masses last fall has some excellent reasons for rejoicing over his own defeat, regarded from a pecuniary standpoint. If he lives he will be a far wealthier man in four years hence than President McKinley. It is announced on good authority that his book is bringing him in an income of more than $100 a day, and his publisher will be glad to buy his interest in the work for $50,000. Meanwhile, whenever he wishes to lecture he has only to say the word to get $500 a night. Besides this, he hasn't all the hungry horde of office seekers running after him."

THE Courier-Journal in a five column editorial in its issue of March 4th taxes its ingenuity in an effort to make Mr. Cleveland appear as a very great man, and at the same time to represent him as a misfit statesman. Of his financiering it says: "A wise, far-seeing man sure of his footing, and well instructed in a theoretical as well as a practical familiarity with the operations of human nature and affairs, would have so managed not merely the repeal of the Sherman Act, but the subsequent bond issues, as to leave himself something like the semblance of a party, and to avoid so much as the appearance of a scandal."

The Courier-Journal was not expected to acknowledge, at this early date, that the Indianapolis so-called Democratic convention was a fizzle.

A Letter from An Old Friend.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Having been earnestly solicited by some of my friends, of Boone, to write something for your paper, I hasten to comply with their request by giving somewhat of an outline of my recent visit to the dear old home of my boyhood days.

On Monday, February the 13th, I started from home with anticipations of a pleasant visit to friends and associates of former days. Being delayed at Hamilton by the lateness of my train, I arrived in the Queen City too late for the morning train to Erlanger, in consequence of which I was forced to wait for the 4:20 train.

I boarded a street car at fifth st. which took me through Covington to Ludlow, where, as I was walking along the street, I met my old friend, Dr. Crisler, who invited me to his home, where, with himself and wife, I passed an hour very pleasantly. I then went to the home of my kind friends, Mrs. Allen and daughter; thence to depot, where I saw Mr. John Seniour and Mr. Vallandingham, the latter from Grant Co., Ky. While waiting, we recounted many past events, and recalled many old acquaintances, some of whom have long since passed to the "Great Beyond."

Having reached Erlanger, I took the stage to Florence, and, while en route, whom should I meet but my kind young friend, Miss Minnie Hoggins, who also entertained me with reminiscences of the past. So you see, Mr. Editor, I was not as a stranger in a strange land, but on the other hand, among friends and at home, notwithstanding I must express my great surprise at seeing Erlanger grown to such proportions, covering such a large area, and with such nice and commodious dwellings and business houses.

At Florence, my old home, I stopped for a few moments with my genial friend, Robert Rice, who urged me to share the hospitality of his home that night, and upon declining, he kindly proffered me his horse and buggy; but as it was quite cool, I preferred walking to the home of John Surface, on the Union pike, where I arrived about dark, and where I remained till next day. I then visited relatives in that vicinity, where I was well cared for. I also visited Union and Gunpowder, but on account of a very severe cold, I was forced to cut my visit short, hence did not get around to see the many other friends whom I desired so much to visit.

Mr. Editor and friends, permit me to congratulate you both on account of the number and good quality of candidates for office in your county. I met some of them, to wit: Mr. Owen Watts, Mr Thos. Willis and Judge Stephens, also Mr. Voshell and Atty. Lassing—all of whom I have no doubt would make good officials. Friend Will, you can cast my vote for any or all of them, if I am allowed to vote in your county by proxy.

When I arrived at Erlanger on my way home, I was not a little surprised to meet my old friend (I do not mean to say he is old) Prof. Andrew Collins, of your town, with whom I went to the city. Words fail to express my joy in meeting so many of my former friends and acquaintances. I regret very much that I could not remain longer. I was exceedingly sorry, too, to hear of the dangerous illness of Mr. Lentz, yet glad to know when I left, that, under the skillful treatment of Dr. Will Corey, he was convalescent and in a fair way to a speedy recovery. With good wishes to all I close.

J. W. HOWE,
Hamilton, Ohio.

THE Louisville Dispatch will appear about the middle of next month. It is to be an advocate of the free coinage of silver, and the promoters of the enterprise have every assurance that it will be a success from the beginning.

GOV. BRADLEY has called an extra session of the Legislature to meet on the 13th inst. The principal business will be the election of a Senator and the passage of a law to relieve the State Treasury. The State troops may be required to sleep on their arms during the session.

IT is said that an effort will be made to get Judge Helm to return Walling to the Covington jail, as it is believed that he would tell all he knows about the murder of Pearl Bryan if separated from Scott Jackson. In his appeal to the Governor Walling says that Jackson has said that he would confess and clear him, but that he has come to the conclusion that he does not intend to make good his promise.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, March 6th, 1897.

The inauguration of the millionaire's President was pulled off in a manner gorgeous enough to be in keeping with the cost electing him, which is said to have exceeded $16,000,000. Everything was conducted on the most lavish scale, from the personal escort from Cleveland, Ohio, with their black horses, for which $10,000 was spent, to the ten thousand electric lights of variegated colors used in illuminating the costly decorations for the inaugural ball in the big court of the Pension building. It was a millionaire's event from start to finish, and the talk of the millionaire's agent, otherwise known as King Hanna, indicates that it is to be a millionaire's administration, notwithstanding the platitudes of McKinley's inaugural address. Never before were there so many private railway cars in Washington at one time and never before was so much money spent at and upon an inauguration. It is very evident that the millionaire's expect McKinley's administration to bring them prosperity, whatever it may do for the poor. When they invest their money they always expect, and they usually get, return in dollars and cents.

Hon. Wm. J. Bryan, who spent two days in Washington this week, divided his time between conferences with leading democrats and social intercourse with his extensive circle of personal friends, but declined to remain for the inauguration of his successful rival, said to those who proffered him their support for 1900 that he was not thinking so much about the next Presidential campaign as about the condition of the people, between now and then. He also expressed his sincere regret that the promised "McKinley Prosperity" had not come to the country. It is a remarkable fact about Mr. Bryan that his hold upon Democrats increases since his defeat, instead of diminishing, as is the usual in the case of defeated candidates of all parties.

Senator Teller thus stated his opinion of the relations of Mr. McKinley toward the monetary conference bill, which passed with the House amendments. "If the new President has any sympathy for an international agreement, it must be judged from his votes in the House, and not from anything he has said since his nomination, for, excepting the prefunctory acceptance of platform, his every utterance has indicated that he has gone over to the gold standard, and will remain there."

Mr. Cleveland vetoed the immigration Bill, on the ground that it was a departure from our national policy that would impose hardships upon deserving people. The House passed it over the veto, but the Senate did not try.

It is noteworthy that the hardest criticisms of the manifest weakness, both from a business and political point of view, of the men in McKinley's Cabinet, have come from those who are classed as Republican leaders. Of course this criticism is as yet only privately expressed, but it indicates that unless McKinley walks the chalk line he will soon find himself confronted by formidable Republican opposition.

Mr. McKinley's little bluff about not taking up the question of appointments for a month or so, intended to keep some of the office-seekers away from Washington, did not work worth a cent. They have turned up in swarms and are making things lively for King Hanna as well as for Mr. McKinley. The only prosperity they see ahead lies in the public trough.

IF President McKinley is the admirer of civil service reform that his inaugural address indicates, he will have but little official pie to distribute. During his administration Cleveland extended the civil service to nearly every department of the Government, and the offices that are not protected by it are few in number; but it is generally believed that the Republicans will find some way to evade the operation of the law.

THE army of office-seekers was not favorably impressed with President McKinley's inaugural expressions in regard to the civil service. If he is sincere in the policy outlined in his address some of the faithfull will be showering maledictions upon him in a few months.

GOV. BRADLEY has let Mr. Hanna know that he is capable of attending to his own business as Governor of Kentucky. Mr. Hanna sent the Gov. one too many telegrams.

The Confederate White House, which is now used as a museum for the repository and preservation of curios and relics of the war, is one of the most interesting spots in or around this city, says a Richmond letter to the Baltimore Sun. During the past two years the society has spent more than $40,000 in making the structure fire proof and arranging the rooms for the preservation and proper exhibition of historic mementoes placed in their charge. These embrace the only large collection extant of such things. Among them are a full uniform of Gen. Lee, his spurs, saddle and many articles of camp equippage. There is also the pocket handkerchief used to stanch the blood from the wound which Gen. Stonewall Jackson received at Chancellorsville and other interesting articles used by that chieftain during the war. Besides these there are relics of nearly all the other conspicuous figures in the Southern army. The old Davis mansion is now in an excellent condition and the society in charge of it will continue to keep it so for all time to come.

On the first of May next the twenty-four hour system of time measurement will be adopted by the railways, postoffices and telegraphs stations of Belgium. In order to meet the notional demand for new timepieces the clockmakers of Belgium have been hard at work for several months past. Of course, the new system will be universally adopted throughout the country, as the action of the railways alone would render this inevitable. If it proves to be successful, as it no doubt will, other European countries will follow the example of Belgium, and in the course of time the new system will find its way across the Atlantic. There is nothing in the least repugnant about the new system, and since the day is twenty four hours in length, there is no good reason either practical or scientific, why the divisions of the clock should not correspond with nature's measurement. As the twelve hour system has been in use so long, there are thousands of people who will be loth to give it up, but sentimental considerations should not outweigh practical advantages, and if the new system is a better one, the old system should be discontinued by all means.

A dispatch from Washington, D. C., on the 3d inst. says: "During the recess of the house to-night the throngs in the galleries were treated to an unusual scene. Nearly 100 of the members had gathered in the lobby back of the House and whiled away the time by singing patriotic songs. After a time they marched upon the floor, and, standing in front of the Speaker's desk, sang "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," with fine effect, General Henderson, of Iowa, beating time with his cane, and Mr. Foote, of New York, officiating as leader. The galleries applauded every song exuberantly. General Henderson attempted "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," but unsuccessfully. Then "The Suwanee River" and "In the Sweet Bye and Bye" were given, and finally the galleries arose with a shriek when "Dixie" was warbled with more enthusiasm than melody, and Southern members, led by General Wheeler, of Alabama, the famous Confederate cavalry leader, gave a piercing rebel yell. Hats and sticks were waved in the air when "Marching Through Georgia" was given, and the legislators were striking the "We won't Go Home Till Morning" when Speaker Reed's gavel cut the concert short."

THE river has commenced falling again.

SCOTT JACKSON is preparing an argument in his own behalf to be presented to Gov. Bradley.

SEVERAL of Cincinnati's Greek citizens will return to their native country to participate in its defense.

THE fight for United States Senator is now on in this State. Dr. Hunter is claiming everything on the Republican side, but claiming and having are two distinct propositions.

LOUISVILLE'S seat of Government came very near being transferred to the county jail last week. Better men than some of the Louisville councilmen appear to have been behind the bars in that city.

W. G. Dorman, a New Columbus merchant, has been sued for $25,000 by Sebree, a farmer, for alienating his wife's affections. The suit has caused a separation between Dorman and his wife.

An unusual occurrence took place at Mt. Olivet church in Garrard county. The funeral services over the remains of three persons were held at one and the same time by the same minister.

W. A. Arnold, a popular stock buyer and merchant of Pendleton county, was killed by a train at Morgan Station. He thought he could jump off safely, but in jumping he struck the mail catcher, a large post at the side of the road, and was instantly killed.

Jacob Logan, of Todd county, is 98 years old, and never took a drink of coffee or whisky, does not use tobacco, never voted but once in his life, and, although living within nine miles of Elkhorn, the county seat, he never was there. He is a plain farmer and stays right at home.

Mrs. Kitty Warren, of Hodgenville, died suddenly under circumstances warranting the examining court in holding under $300 bond each her daughter and her son-in-law, Jessie Loyal and wife, as accomplices in her murder. Her grandson will also be arrested when found.

Governor Bradley continues to get letters from cranks claiming to know all about the Pearl Bryan murder. Among his mail the other day was a letter from Dayton, O., evidently signed by some fictitious name, claiming to have murdered Pearl Bryan. It will be forwarded to the Police Department at Dayton.

A Frankfort dispatch says: "At Sunday's conference between President-elect McKinley and Governor Bradley it was agreed that the Governor should appoint a Senator on March 5 and call an extra session of the Legislature for a day later. It is now believed that the Governor will appoint John W. Yerkes or St. John Boyle."

Robert Breckinridge, son of Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge, is now working with the carpenter's crew on the C. S. between Lexington and Somerset. Young Breckinridge, who is a splendidly educated fellow and who has been almost everywhere, has been a 'high flyer,' but he has buckled down to work now at $1 per day.—Interior Journal.

Thomas Dillingham, a colored convict from Madison county, serving a life sentence for murder, walked away from the penitentiary. He was a "trusty," engaged in hauling chairs, and it is not known at what time he disappeared, as the men did not get through their work outside until after dark. Dillingham must have previously stolen and secreted a suit of clothes, as his prison stripes were found outside the walls.

In Western Kentucky Sunday night a young lady was kneeling in prayer when a live coal popped out on her night dress and she was so badly burned that she will die. The next day a man was frozen to death while on his way home from a distillery. Exactly what moral to deduct from these two circumstances taken together, we are unable to say, but there is doubtless one somewhere if we could find it.—Winchester Democrat.

John Elliott, a colored cart driver, witnessed a most remarkable incident the other day. He was preparing to dump a load of trash down the cliff-side on East Third street, near Vine, when the horse balked. Suddenly the animal backed over the cliff and the cart struck a tree. The harness broke and the horse was thrown a somersault and sent rolling helter-skelter sixty feet below into Stoner. The horse swam the creek, shook himself and calmly began to graze on the other side. —Paris News.

A Boyle county romancer contributes the following to the Danville Advocate: "Several years ago I was out in the knobs hunting squirrels, and late in the afternoon I found my bullets were all used and was on my way out, when I heard some hounds coming my way. I knew Tom Tadlock & Co. were out running foxes. I rammed down a charge of powder and put on top of that an eight-penny nail that I had in my pocket. In a few minutes here came the fox and ran right near me close to a big beech tree. I was ready and fired, the nail struck the tail of the fox and nailed him to the beech tree. I took out my knife and intended to dispatch the creature, which was now plunging, jumping, rearing and trying to get away, but accidentally cut his hide right down between his eyes to his nose. The fox ran right out of his hide and away he went, leaving every hair behind him."

At Springfield, Ill., 40 Poland China hogs brought $12,269. One boar, Look Me Over, brought $3,600, the highest price any hog has yet sold for, the highest before being $1,700, for Klevers Model. Anderson's Model brought $1,575, being sold to Geo. W. Null, of Odesse, Mo. This is the highest price ever obtained for a sow.

Judge C. C. Cram informs the Courier that he has definitely decided not to enter the race for Circuit Court Judge. Young Chas. Holton, living near Sparta, in Gallatin county, was drowned while crossing Mosby creek, a branch just north of Sparta on the Warsaw pike. He had been calling on some ladies and started home just after the hard rain about 10 o'clock, horse back. It is supposed that he was crossing the branch just at the time an immense freshet reached the pike and his horse was carried from its feet. His family became uneasy and about 2 o'clock a search was instituted. His horse was soon found loose in a field and a short time afterward his dead body was found in the branch.

The reins of Government will be handed over to Mr. McKinley tomorrow.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 10, 1897. NO. 20.

THE scramble for office is now on.

THE Republicans are in the saddle.

FROM Beck or Blackburn to Wood is a long step backward.

THE President has called a special session of Congress to convene on the 15th inst. at noon.

THEY had a boisterous time in the Indiana legislature last week, but Governor Mount did not call out the soldiers to suppress the rioters.

THE inauguration is over, and next comes the prize fight and then follows the Jackson and Walling hanging. This is to be an eventful month.

GROVER can now devote his time to duck hunting, while William racks his brain trying to restore that prosperity about which so much was heard last fall.

SECRETARY SHERMAN and Secretary Gage are not in accord on the proposition of retiring the greenbacks. Gage thinks they should be retired, while Sherman takes a different view of the matter.

GOV. BRADLEY has appointed A. T. Wood, of Mt. Sterling, to the Senatorship. It is strange that the Governor would make such a selection over Holt Wilson, Yerkes and several Republicans of acknowledged ability.

IT is probable that both wings of the Democratic party will flop together at the next election in Louisville. They appear to be willing to harmonize, and the leaders of the two factions are taking steps looking to a united party at the next November election, in which event the Republicans will be relieved of the municipal offices.

THE Republicans flooded the country last Thursday with a "business proclamation," purporting to carry the signatures of a great many firms throughout the country. The draftsman of the proclamation was decidedly guarded in his language, and at no point in the proclamation did he declare that an era of prosperity had come, but only expressed a hope of being extricated from the business stagnation in which the country has languished. Confidence failed and hope only is now left.

SOME one calls attention to the curious fact that a man may be elected vice-President of the United States who could not serve as president in the case of the death of the president. The reason for this is that a vice-President may legally serve as such if 30 years old, while the president must be 35. Had President Buchanan died during the first three years of his term, Vice-President Breckinridge would have been ineligible as his successor on account of being too young.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, the gallant leader of the masses last fall has some excellent reasons for rejoicing over his own defeat, regarded from a pecuniary standpoint. If he lives he will be a far wealthier man in four years hence than President McKinley. It is announced on good authority that his book is bringing him in an income of more than $100 a day, and his publisher will be glad to buy his interest in the work for $50,000. Meanwhile, whenever he wishes to lecture he has only to say the word to get $500 a night. Besides this, he hasn't all the hungry horde of office seekers running after him."

THE Courier-Journal in a five column editorial in its issue of March 4th taxes its ingenuity in an effort to make Mr. Cleveland appear as a very great man, and at the same time to represent him as a misfit statesman. Of his financiering it says: "A wise, far-seeing man sure of his footing, and well instructed in a theoretical as well as a practical familiarity with the operations of human nature and affairs, would have so managed not merely the repeal of the Sherman Act, but the subsequent bond issues, as to leave himself something like the semblance of a party, and to avoid so much as the appearance of a scandal."

The Courier-Journal was not expected to acknowledge, at this early date, that the Indianapolis so-called Democratic convention was a fizzle.

A Letter from An Old Friend.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Having been earnestly solicited by some of my friends, of Boone, to write something for your paper, I hasten to comply with their request by giving somewhat of an outline of my recent visit to the dear old home of my boyhood days.

On Monday, February the 13th, I started from home with anticipations of a pleasant visit to friends and associates of former days. Being delayed at Hamilton by the lateness of my train, I arrived in the Queen City too late for the morning train to Erlanger, in consequence of which I was forced to wait for the 4:20 train.

I boarded a street car at fifth st. which took me through Covington to Ludlow, where, as I was walking along the street, I met my old friend, Dr. Crisler, who invited me to his home, where, with himself and wife, I passed an hour very pleasantly. I then went to the home of my kind friends, Mrs. Allen and daughter; thence to depot, where I saw Mr. John Senlour and Mr. Vallandingham, the latter from Grant Co., Ky. While waiting, we recounted many past events, and recalled many old acquaintances, some of whom have long since passed to the "Great Beyond."

Having reached Erlanger, I took the stage to Florence, and, while enroute, whom should I meet but my kind young friend, Miss Minnie Hoggins, who also entertained me with reminiscences of the past. So you see, Mr. Editor, I was not as a stranger in a strange land, but on the other hand, among friends and at home, notwithstanding I must express my great surprise at seeing Erlanger grown to such proportions, covering such a large area, and with such nice and commodious dwellings and business houses.

At Florence, my old home, I stopped for a few moments with my genial friend, Robert Rice, who urged me to share the hospitality of his home that night, and upon declining, he kindly proffered me his horse and buggy; but as it was quite cool, I preferred walking to the home of John Surface, on the Union pike, where I arrived about dark, and where I remained till next day. I then visited relatives in that vicinity, where I was well cared for. I also visited Union and Gunpowder, but on account of a very severe cold, I was forced to cut my visit short, hence did not get around to see the many other friends whom I desired so much to visit.

Mr. Editor and friends, permit me to congratulate you both on account of the number and good quality of candidates for office in your county. I met some of them, to wit: Mr. Owen Watts, Mr Thos. Willis and Judge Stephens, also Mr. Voshell and Atty. Lassing—all of whom I have no doubt would make good officials. Friend Will, you can cast my vote for any or all of them, if I am allowed to vote in your county by proxy.

When I arrived at Erlanger on my way home, I was not a little surprised to meet my old friend (I do not mean to say he is old) Prof. Andrew Collins, of your town, with whom I went to the city. Words fail to express my joy in meeting so many of my former friends and acquaintances. I regret very much that I could not remain longer. I was exceedingly sorry, too, to hear of the dangerous illness of Mr. Lentz, yet glad to know when I left, that, under the skillful treatment of Dr. Will Corey, he was convalescent and in a fair way to a speedy recovery. With good wishes to all I close.

J. W. HOWE,
Hamilton, Ohio.

THE Louisville Dispatch will appear about the middle of next month. It is to be an advocate of the free coinage of silver, and the promoters of the enterprise have every assurance that it will be a success from the beginning.

GOV. BRADLEY has called an extra session of the Legislature to meet on the 13th inst. The principal business will be the election of a Senator and the passage of a law to relieve the State Treasury. The State troops may be required to sleep on their arms during the session.

IT is said that an effort will be made to get Judge Helm to return Walling to the Covington jail, as it is believed that he would tell all he knows about the murder of Pearl Bryan if separated from Scott Jackson. In his appeal to the Governor Walling says that Jackson has said that he would confess and clear him, but that he has come to the conclusion that he does not intend to make good his promise.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, March 6th, 1897.

The inauguration of the millionaire's President was pulled off in a manner gorgeous enough to be in keeping with the cost electing him, which is said to have exceeded $16,000,000. Everything was conducted on the most lavish scale, from the personal escort from Cleveland, Ohio, with their black horses, for which $10,000 was spent, to the ten thousand electric lights of variegated colors used in illuminating the costly decorations for the inaugural ball in the big court of the Pension building. It was a millionaire's event from start to finish, and the talk of the millionaire's agent, otherwise known as King Hanna, indicates that it is to be a millionaire's administration, notwithstanding the platitudes of McKinley's inaugural address. Never before were there so many private railway cars in Washington at one time and never before was so much money spent at and upon an inauguration. It is very evident that the millionaire's expect McKinley's administration to bring them prosperity, whatever it may do for the poor. When they invest their money they always expect, and they usually get, return in dollars and cents.

Hon. Wm. J. Bryan, who spent two days in Washington this week, divided his time between conferences with leading democrats and social intercourse with his extensive circle of personal friends, but declined to remain for the inauguration of his successful rival, said to those who proffered him their support for 1900 that he was not thinking so much about the next Presidential campaign as about the condition of the people, between now and then. He also expressed his sincere regret that the promised "McKinley Prosperity" had not come to the country. It is a remarkable fact about Mr. Bryan that his hold upon Democrats increases since his defeat, instead of diminishing, as is the usual in the case of defeated candidates of all parties.

Senator Teller thus stated his opinion of the relations of Mr. McKinley toward the monetary conference bill, which passed with the House amendments. "If the new President has any sympathy for an international agreement, it must be judged from his votes in the House, and not from anything he has said since his nomination, for, excepting the prefunctory acceptance of platform, his every utterance has indicated that he has gone over to the gold standard, and will remain there."

Mr. Cleveland vetoed the Immigration Bill, on the ground that it was a departure from our national policy that would impose hardships upon deserving people. The House passed it over the veto, but the Senate did not try.

It is noteworthy that the hardest criticisms of the manifest weakness, both from a business and political point of view, of the men in McKinley's Cabinet, have come from those who are classed as Republican leaders. Of course this criticism is as yet only privately expressed, but it indicates that unless McKinley walks the chalk line he will soon find himself confronted by formidable Republican opposition.

Mr. McKinley's little bluff about not taking up the question of appointments for a month or so, intended to keep some of the office-seekers away from Washington, did not work worth a cent. They have turned up in swarms and are making things lively for King Hanna as well as for Mr. McKinley. The only prosperity they see ahead lies in the public trough.

IF President McKinley is the admirer of civil service reform that his inaugural address indicates, he will have but little official pie to distribute. During his administration Cleveland extended the civil service to nearly every department of the Government, and the offices that are not protected by it are few in number; but it is generally believed that the Republicans will find some way to evade the operation of the law.

THE army of office-seekers was not favorably impressed with President McKinley's inaugural expressions in regard to the civil service. If he is sincere in the policy outlined in his address some of the faithfull will bo showering maledictions upon him in a few months.

GOV. BRADLEY has let Mr. Hanna know that he is capable of attending to his own business as Governor of Kentucky. Mr. Hanna sent the Gov. one too many telegrams.

The Confederate White House, which is now used as a museum for the repository and preservation of curios and relics of the war, is one of the most interesting spots in or around this city, says a Richmond letter to the Baltimore Sun. During the past two years the society has spent more than $40,000 in making the structure fire proof and arranging the rooms for the preservation and proper exhibition of historic mementoes placed in their charge. These embrace the only large collection extant of such things. Among them are a full uniform of Gen. Lee, his spurs, saddle and many articles of camp equippage. There is also the pocket handkerchief used to stanch the blood from the wound which Gen. Stonewall Jackson received at Chancellorsville and other interesting articles used by that chieftain during the war. Besides these there are relics of nearly all the other conspicuous figures in the Southern army. The old Davis mansion is now in an excellent condition and the society in charge of it will continue to keep it so for all time to come.

On the first of May next the twenty-four hour system of time measurement will be adopted by the railways, postoffices and telegraphs stations of Belgium. In order to meet the notional demand for new timepieces the clockmakers of Belgium have been hard at work for several months past. Of course, the new system will be universally adopted throughout the country, as the action of the railways alone would render this inevitable. If it proves to be successful, as it no doubt will, other European countries will follow the example of Belgium, and in the course of time the new system will find its way across the Atlantic. There is nothing in the least repugnant about the new system, and since the day is twenty four hours in length, there is no good reason either practical or scientific, why the divisions of the clock should not correspond with nature's measurement. As the twelve hour system has been in use so long, there are thousands of people who will be loth to give it up, but sentimental considerations should not outweigh practical advantages, and if the new system is a better one, the old system should be discontinued by all means.

A dispatch from Washington, D. C., on the 3d inst. says: "During the recess of the house to-night the throngs in the galleries were treated to an unusual scene. Nearly 100 of the members had gathered in the lobby back of the House and whiled away the time by singing patriotic songs. After a time they marched upon the floor, and, standing in front of the Speaker's desk, sang "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," with fine effect, General Henderson, of Iowa, beating time with his cane, and Mr. Foote, of New York, officiating as leader. The galleries applauded every song exuberantly. General Henderson attempted "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," but unsuccessfully. Then "The Suwanee River" and "In the Sweet Bye and Bye" were given, and finally the galleries arose with a shriek when "Dixie" was warbled with more enthusiasm than melody, and Southern members, led by General Wheeler, of Alabama, the famous Confederate cavalry leader, gave a piercing rebel yell. Hats and sticks were waved in the air when "Marching Through Georgia" was given, and the legislators were striking the "We won't Go Home Till Morning" when Speaker Reed's gavel cut the concert short."

THE river has commenced falling again.

SCOTT JACKSON is preparing an argument in his own behalf to be presented to Gov. Bradley.

SEVERAL of Cincinnati's Greek citizens will return to their native country to participate in its defense.

THE fight for United States Senator is now on in this State. Dr. Hunter is claiming everything on the Republican side, but claiming and having are two distinct propositions.

LOUISVILLE'S seat of Government came very near being transferred to the county jail last week. Better men than some of the Louisville councilmen appear to have been behind the bars in that city.

Benjamin Franklin's brother started the second daily newspaper in this country, in spite of the warning that he was overdoing the business.

A Missouri paper announces the illness of a prominent citizen with "information of the brain." Possibly it may become epidemic and the whole country be benefited thereby.

As still further exemplifying the truth of the proverb that there is nothing new under the sun, it is pointed out that there was a horseless wagon as early as 1861. The horse ran away.

The effete foreigners of the old world are just beginning to appreciate the worth of the American apple and are loud in the praises of its toothsome and juicy qualities, its fine flavor, and its rosy cheeks.

A London newspaper man who has written a book on this country describes a visit to some of our war ships, and says that the United States will soon obtain the command of the sea against the whole world.

A Frenchman has invented a new gun which he calls a "miracle gun," from the fact that it requires no powder. The only genuine, simon pure miracle gun, however, is the gun which refuses to go off when it isn't loaded.

One of the most shocking occurrences in sporting circles is the discovery that electric saddles are used to stimulate horses on racing tracks. The jockey presses a button, and confidently relies on the old nag to do the rest.

The Yankees are probably the most resourceful people on earth. A young man from Cleveland was arrested near Havana with a pass on his person from Estrada Palma to Gomez. He ate the pass up while he was being searched.

Most of the paper money manufactured and put in circulation by Uncle Sam is made by women, whose honesty and skillful fingers make them peculiarly available for such work. It may be said, also, that they assist largely in keeping it in circulation.

A Boston lawyer who has engaged in agriculture is called a "book farmer" because he has erected an electric bookmill. He seems to be ahead of the books, and his neighbors should not be too sure that they will not themselves have to come to electricity and compressed air.

The work of excavation going on in the ancient defenses of Jerusalem on the south has brought to light many important specimens of masonry, mosaics, pottery, lamps, inscriptions and coins. This is about the only way Americans are willing to interfere in the affairs of the old world, and they manage to keep at the head of the business of digging up history.

The recent naval maneuvers off Charleston, S. C., were of great importance as demonstrating that modern science enables a war fleet of to-day to maintain a blockade that is practically impassable, except when extraordinary fog conditions prevail. The electric searchlight would disclose the whereabouts of any intending blockade-runner in case of actual war.

New responsibilities and duties rest upon the umpire under the new rules for baseball, to take effect this season. The umpire is monarch of all he surveys. He is the reigning czar, and is responsible for any disorder in the entire field and is expected to insure good behavior in every actor. The man who takes his life in his hand and faces "hot balls" and the hot words of the defeated nine deserves all the honors that can be attached to the position.

The Lexow committee in New York has been investigating the cigarette business. The figures revealed show that last year 4,000,000,000 cigarettes were made, besides 150,000,000 all tobacco cigarettes. The trust's profits on these were $7,560,000. The same trust put out 140,000,000 pounds of chewing tobacco and 80,000,000 pounds of smoking tobacco—all large amounts. Of course the American Tobacco company does not make all the cigarettes, but it shows what enormous proportions this business has reached.

Stephenson county (Ill.) farmers sold $60,000 worth of chickens and eggs last year, according to a Freeport paper. Poultry raising is one of the most delightful callings imaginable, says the Chicago Tribune, and the man who engages in it usually manages to feather his nest in short order. Truly, his yolk is easy and his burden is light. He never has to scramble for a living, and there is no necessity for him to addle his brains over the problem of making both ends meet. His family usually belongs to the best set in the neighborhood, and he never comes off the perch for anybody.

SENSATION

Created in Havana Over the Return of Capt. Gen. Weyler.

His Campaign in Matanzas and Santa Clara Was an Ignominious Failure—Change of the Washington Administration May Have Caused It.

HAVANA, March 5.—Capt. Gen. Weyler arrived here at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon on the transport Legazpi from Caibarien, province of Santa Clara. He was accompanied by the members of his staff. The news caused somewhat of a sensation among the Spaniards, who could not imagine why the captain general should have hurried to reach Havana.

Gen. Weyler was received by the Marquis de Ahumada, who has been acting in his stead during his absence, and other authorities. There was no great crowd present. He walked from the water side to the palace, where he soon retired to his apartments, without having received any popular welcome. This was due, perhaps, to his unexpected arrival.

No reason is given for Gen. Weyler's return to Havana. It is generally well-known that his campaign in Matanzas and Santa Clara has been an ignominious failure, and that while he was claiming to have compelled the insurgents to retreat toward Puerto Principe, they had in fact dodged past his columns and pursued their way westward. It is thought that the change in administration in Washington may have much if not all to do with his return, as he has been led to believe that President McKinley will not sanction the illegal arrest and detention of American citizens which in many cases passed without protest from the Cleveland government.

INAUGURATION BALL.

The Interior of the Pension Building Transformed Into Fairyland.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—That no more desirable place could have been selected for the affair than the pension building was proved Thursday evening. Its spacious interior was somewhat crowded with well dressed humanity, but in view of the fact that no larger place was obtainable, that can not be considered a basis for criticism.

Early in the evening the various committees in charge of the ball had perfected their arrangements and were on hand to carry them out. Just before 8 o'clock, the hour set for the function to begin, the current governing the electric lights, was turned on and the wide, broad and high interior was transformed into fairyland. From dome and gallery, and from pillar, post and rafter thousands of luminous gleams came forth binging into view the results that an army of decorators had labored three weeks to obtain.

The interior of the pension office building is a great court. Eight broad pillars supporting the roof form the only interference with a comprehensive view of the ball room. These pillars had been transformed into harmony with the decorations by the process of marbleizing.
